

CONTROLS HELD FIRM

... To Break Inflationary Psychology

Washington (AP) — President Nixon's chief economic spokesman pledged Friday that the Phase 2 wage-price controls will be held firm until the nation's inflationary psychology "has been halted and broken."

If necessary, Secretary of the Treasury John B. Connally told a news conference, the government will move in to hold the anti-inflation line if the job is not adequately done by the new wage and price agencies announced Thursday night by the President.

Connally heads the Cost of Living Council, which will continue as the top supervisory control agency when the 90-day freeze ends on Nov. 13 and the new Pay Board and Price Commission come into being.

The Phase 2 controls will remain in force, he told a questioner, until there is "a basic agreement and feeling throughout the country that the expectations of inflation have subsided."

"We've gone for several years with inflation," Connally said. "We can't abide it any more."

"We have to reach the point where the people understand that they can hope and expect stability in this economic system."

The secretary said his top-level COLC will not act as a review board to veto or uphold price or wage decisions of the new boards.

Connally said he hoped George Meany, president of the AFL-CIO, would serve on the Pay Board, but Meany later withheld a direct answer.

The labor leader announced he was calling a special meeting of the union's executive committee Tuesday "to take action on the President's announcement of last evening."

Meany said in a statement that interpretations of Phase 2 given to newsmen by the White House "are in conflict" with earlier briefings given privately to labor officials.

"They raise serious questions which I believe must be explored thoroughly by the leaders of the American labor movement," he said.

Connally said at one point he hoped businessmen and workers would "not try to cheat on the quality of goods and services" to make up for limits on their wages or prices.

Asked about interest and dividends, Connally said he didn't anticipate there would be guidelines.

He said there had been "remarkable success" on a voluntary basis of controlling dividends.

Connally said the President wants standby authority on interest rates beyond the end of 1972.

"This doesn't indicate necessarily that we think all the objectives will be achieved by that time period," he said.

The stabilization program, he said, is a "way station" to returning the nation's economy to a free market.

Connally said both the Cost of Living Council and the pay and price boards would have authority to seek legal actions against violators of the planned guidelines.

The boards have 37 days in which to establish their standards for permissible wage increases, price markups and the removal of inequities, Connally said. "I think that is ample time," he added.

It is entirely possible, he told one questioner, that the boards may take early action to relax the controls in some areas of industry if they show no inflationary pressures and the general program appears to be working.

Questioned on the hot issue of labor's insistence that wage settlement already under contract be permitted to take effect when the 90-day freeze ends on Nov. 13, Connally took a hard line.

"We are not going to guarantee anything to any individual," he said. But he added that the decision on deferred pay hikes, which were postponed during the freeze, will be "a matter for the Pay Board to determine."

Asked about the 10% import tax surcharge, Connally said he couldn't say when it might be lifted.

He also said he couldn't say how long the economic stabilization program might last. "It's going to continue as long as necessary to bring the rate of inflation under control," he said.

He said foreign nations recognized this country's problems.

"We want our balance of payments improved. The only way they can be improved, in a sense, is to the detriment of other nations. Other nations have to give up something in order for us to gain something," he said.

Asked about pending requests for public utility and telephone rate increases, under consideration by state and local regulatory agencies, Connally said the agencies would not have the authority to grant such increases unless the price board granted such authority.

24 'Demands' Are Presented

... List By Some Penitentiary Inmates Given To Exon, Wolff

By DON WALTON
Star Staff Writer

A list of 25 "demands" by some State Penitentiary inmates has been presented to Gov. J. James Exon and Warden Charles Wolff.

The list, which was placed in the hands of State Sen. Ernest Chambers of Omaha, was forwarded by him to the governor.

Wolff said he was handed a copy of the "demands" Friday morning, but will have "no comment on the matter at this point."

Chambers mailed the four-page list to the governor along with an offer of assistance.

The inmates give officials until Oct. 18 to "comply with a substantial portion of these demands," and threaten to conduct "a peaceful and organized work strike" if action is not forthcoming.

'No Riot Or Violence'

"Let it be understood that there will be no 'demonstrations,' no 'riot' and no 'violence' unless it be in self-defense," the communication states.

The demands deal largely with alleged discriminatory practices at the institution, the need for improved plumbing, heating and ventilation facilities in the west cellhouse, more recreational facilities and "a reasonable minimum wage of one dollar a day for any and all prison labor."

The list also includes requested improvement in medical attention, legal aid assistance, dietary needs and an enlarged educational curriculum.

A monthly conjugal visit for married men and "men with an approved fiancée" is also requested.

In the event of a work strike, the inmates demand that "no disciplinary action be taken against the participating inmates unless those involved take part in the destruction of state property."

One demand — relating to segregated (white) housing in the east cellblock — is the subject of litigation in the U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals. Here is how the "demand" is expressed in the list from inmates:

"We demand that all racist policies and practices against black prisoners in housing and job and work assignments be halted immediately and that blacks be permitted to live in quarters and work on assignments on an equitable basis with other prisoners."

Overreaction Caution

In a letter to the governor, Chambers cautioned against overreaction.

After reading through the list of "demands," he wrote, "I see none which are unreasonable or beyond the power of the state to comply with."

"It would be a grave error to overreact to the word 'demands' and fall, thereby, to be just."

Noting that he has "spent much time" at the prison since his election to the Legislature, Chambers wrote Exon: "Perhaps I can offer you assistance in dealing with this issue (the demands) in a reasonable rather than a riotous manner."

Chambers told Exon he has failed to keep his promise to place a fulltime physician at the Penal Complex.

"You have promised at various times to look into matters contained in this list," Chambers wrote.

"I believe it is possible to accomplish some constructive, needed changes at this time when matters of this sort (prison inequities) are being brought to a head all over the country."

'Changes Long Overdue'

The inmates, in a preamble to their list of "demands," suggested that "this institution is long overdue for changes. We want, deserve, expect and demand these changes now."

Their list contains "very modest demands that should have been satisfied long before now," the inmates wrote.

The communication is not signed, and there is no way of measuring the number of inmates who may have participated in preparation of the document or the number who may support, or even be aware of, it.

Among the "demands" were a request for employment of "qualified blacks" in administrative positions; a pledge to refrain from discrimination in parole and work release programs, rehabilitation and vocational training programs equal to those provided trusty dormitory and reformatory prisoners, and enlarged mailing privileges.

Inmates also requested "uniformity in punishment upon disciplinary action;" institution of "extensive training programs in human relations" for personnel with racist attitudes; inclusion of a comprehensive black studies program in the educational curriculum; reduction of store items prices if a minimum wage of one dollar a day cannot be implemented, and a more comprehensive athletic and recreational program, including a prison gymnasium.

Other "demands" included more access to television; inclusion of members of the black business community in the pre-release program; the opportunity to form "a black-oriented organization of our own" on a par with the Jaycees and other clubs, and "an immediate end to the arbitrary expurgation of radical and/or black literature."

The inmates also asked permission "to wear civilian clothes during their leisure hours."

Army Van Firebombed By Students In Saigon

Saigon (AP) — Four motorcycle-borne students firebombed a U.S. Army van Saturday near a Saigon marketplace.

Two soldiers riding in the van escaped and were not injured.

The four students, riding on two motorcycles, threw a Molotov cocktail into the vehicle as it moved down a busy street. The fire caused heavy damage to the vehicle.

Police sources said the students also carried and banner reading "Down With The U.S. Military And Thieu." The students fled before police arrived.

The firebombing was the second such incident in two days.

Youth-in-Action School Paper Editors Try To Keep Top Rating

By MILAN WALL
Star Staff Writer

The new editors of East High's Oracle, plugging to keep in step with the "all-American" rating won by last year's paper, are trying to some new type-style and layout techniques this year.

"The paper last year had some good ideas," said Paul B. Ritscher, 16-year-old co-editor of the student publication.

"We are trying some different type and headline styles," he said.

"And we're experimenting with layouts," added Terry Witters, 17, who shares editorial duties with Paul.

Honor Rating Won Last year's paper, under the editorship of Barb Lien and Kim Voss, won an "All-American honor rating" from the National Scholastic Press Association.

"Last year, there was big discussion on whether the paper should be school or feature oriented," remembered Terri.

The 1970-71 emphasis was on features, she continued. "So far (this year), it's not either one," she said.

Since the paper is published every two weeks, a magazine format is used to offset the "two-week lapse between news," said Paul.

Features, News, Sports

The first issue this year contained both features and news-type stories and, of course, sports.

As co-editors, the two seniors share general responsibility for a staff of about 16, which includes about equal numbers of advertising salesmen and writers.

The writers report directly to the editors, who said they use a

"brainstorming" technique for story ideas

Once the ideas are on the table, reporters volunteer for assignments that may fit into their "beats."

Rest Assigned "Whatever is left over, we just assign," said Terri.

The two said they design the paper with both the school and the general community in mind.

"To the community," said Paul, the paper shows "the school at work."

For students, the Oracle tries to provide "different views on different subjects," he added.

Although there is no adult censorship of the paper, Paul said they try to edit out "what would offend" parents.

"Students are not generally offended by much," he said

Jobless Figure Drops

Washington (AP) — The total of unemployed Americans edged down in September to 6% of the nation's work force, but Secretary of the Treasury John B. Connally said Friday "That's frankly nothing to crow about."

The jobless total declined 221,000 to 4.8 million, and the unemployment rate was down one-tenth of one per cent from 6.1% in August.

Secretary of Labor J. D. Hodgson said there was some "cheer" in a 325,000 rise in seasonally adjusted total employment of 79.2 million, but that the continuing high level of joblessness called for prompt action by Congress to enact President Nixon's tax proposals.

The Labor Department figures on last month's job picture also showed a drop in the average length of the work week and an accompanying decline in average wages, an indicator of lagging industrial activity.

The average paychecks of some 45 million rank-and-file workers dropped 27 cents to $128.76 per week because of a 12-minute decline in the average work week to 36.7 hours, said the report by the Bureau of Labor Statistics.

The average pay as $7.03, or 5.8% above a year ago but the 4.5% rise in living costs since then wiped out $5.44 of the gain, cutting the rise in purchasing power to $1.59.

Total employment actually dropped 1.4 million, but because it usually drops more than that in September when youths with summer jobs return to school the bureau figured it as a 325,000 rise on a seasonal basis.

The report said that in the third quarter of the year ending in September, average employment rose 520,000 to a record quarterly high on a seasonal basis, but unemployment still averaged 6% because of a continuing rise in the labor force.

Unemployment among men totaled 1.8 million in September and their jobless rate remained unchanged from August at 4.5%; the bureau said.

The women's jobless rate edged down from 5.3 to 5.6% with a total of 1.8 million out of work, and the rate for teenagers edged up from 17 to 17.1% with a total of 1.1 million.

Exon To Give Suggestions Attention

Gov. J. James Exon Friday said he "will give attention to (the suggestions)" presented to state officials by some inmates at the State Penitentiary.

"I am the governor of all of the people of this state, including those in our Penal Complex," Exon said, "and I certainly will give attention to their suggestions."

The governor said he has referred Sen. Ernest Chambers' letter and the enclosed copy of 24 inmate "demands" to State Institutions Director Michael LaMontia.

Further action will await "a report back" from LaMontia, Exon said.

"I will also be replying to Senator Chambers' letter," the governor said, "but I won't be 'going to press' with my reply."

"If he wishes to release my reply, he had the right to do so."

Exon said the list appears to be "demands from Senator Chambers since there are no other signatures on the letter or the so-called preamble and demands."

members about the possibility of establishing a black studies course on an experimental basis at the Penitentiary.

Renovation of facilities in the west cellblock will begin next week, Wolff told the group.

Individual television sets are being made available within the cellblocks, he said.

Plans are in the works to develop vocational training programs similar to those at the Men's Reformatory, Wolff said.

And more reading literature is being provided for the inmates, he said.

York Guard Fired; On Duty During Drinking Party

York, Neb. (AP) — James Wehrle, the guard at the gate of the State Reformatory for Women in York who was on duty the night 33 youths were picked up at a drinking party inside the grounds, has been dismissed.

Mrs. Jackie Crawford, acting superintendent, said the dismissal was made following an investigation of Wehrle's actions.

Former Supt. Mrs. Barbara Bashore earlier resigned her post because of the incident.

Although Mrs. Bashore was not in York at the time, the youths, including her 19-year-old son, were apprehended at the Bashore home which is on the grounds of the reformatory.

New York Times News Summary

(c) New York Times News Service
Washington — After agreeing to support President Nixon's economic program on Thursday, organized labor Friday withdrew its support, saying it had been misled by the administration. Labor leaders indicated that they had agreed to serve on the tripartite pay board created by the president on the basis that it would be completely free from government interference.

Unemployment Edging Down
Washington — Unemployment fell by only .1% last month, the Labor Department reported, but it also said that the number of jobs showed a substantial rise, especially those in the manufacturing sector of the economy. The increase in manufacturing jobs was the largest in five years and was regarded as a hopeful sign for the economy (More On Page 1.)

Proposals Draw Praise
New York — Business leaders continued to express their approval of the new economic

Labor Withdraws Its Support Of Phase Two program, but many were disappointed over the lack of details. Rep. Wilbur D. Mills said that President Nixon's program was on the right track, but he, too, said he wanted more details before giving his full approval.

Surcharge Stays On
New York — Secretary of the Treasury Connally said that he expected that a number of trade barriers to American products would be removed in the near future, but, at the same time, he declined to say when the 10% import surcharge would be lifted. Businessmen in Europe and Japan expressed disappointment over the decision not to lift the surcharge. (Another Story On Page 1.)

U.N. Destruction Hinted
United Nations, N.Y. — Although refraining from stating a position on the United States' two-China proposal, the National Chinese Foreign Minister told the United Nations General Assembly that he thought it sad that some members wanted to give his nation's seat to Communist China since Peking was seeking to destroy the U.N.

Troops Attempt Revolt
Buenos Aires — President Alejandro Agustin Lanusse ordered Argentina's military forces to crush a revolt by the commanders of two army units who had seized radio stations and broadcast an appeal to the armed forces to overthrow the government. No other units apparently joined in the revolt against President Lanusse, who is also commander of the armed forces. (More On Page 2.)

Free Education Ordered
Philadelphia — Pennsylvania was ordered by a special three-judge federal court to provide a free public education to retarded children. The court's decision, which was hailed as a "landmark" that could lead to similar suits in other states, ordered the state to identify all retarded children not now in school within 90 days and begin teaching them next September.

Seven Expelled From U.S.S.R.
Moscow — In retaliation for Britain's expulsion of 105 Soviet representatives, the Soviet Union ordered four British diplomats and three businessmen to leave the country. The Soviet government also canceled several high-level visits, including that of the British Foreign Secretary. Several economic and cultural commissions were also suspended. (More On Page 2.)

Optimism Is Expressed
New York — American officials expressed optimism over the possibility of an interim agreement between Egypt and Israel after the latest series of peacemaking efforts with the Egyptians. Israeli officials, however, questioned the validity of the optimism, noting that as far as they knew, Cairo's position had not changed.

Report Is Removed
Washington — A damaging efficiency report, which would have been the basis for a forced retirement, was removed from the file of Lt. Col. Anthony B. Herbert. The report had been filed by one of two officers that Herbert charged with covering up atrocities against Vietnamese civilians. The removal clears the way for Herbert to remain in the Army.

Agreement Is Reached
Washington — An agreement on a new contract was reached by the nation's railroads and shopcraft unions representing 90,000 railway workers. No details of the wage settlement were announced, but it was understood to reflect the industry pattern of 42% increases over a 42-month period beginning last Jan. 1.

Mao Seen In Public
Peking — Chairman Mao Tse-tung appeared in public for the first time since Aug. 7 at a reception for Ethiopian Emperor Haile Selassie. Mao reportedly looked fit and told jokes as he led his guest away from the reception. A Chinese diplomat said that the appearance of Mao should end speculation over his health (More on Page 17.)

Two Years In Captivity End For U. S. Sergeant

... WALKED 8 HOURS THROUGH THE JUNGLE

Saigon (AP) — Barefoot and weary, a wounded U.S. sergeant, freed by the Viet Cong Friday stumbled into an allied camp, where he reported he saw other American prisoners in his two years in captivity.

Sgt. John C. Sexton Jr., 28, Warren, Mich., exhibited cut and bruised feet from the eight hours he had walked through the jungles to the base camp at Loc Ninh, 70 miles north of Saigon.

Although tired, his face drawn, Sexton was pronounced in "generally good condition" after examination at an Army hospital.

Sexton told U.S. officers he "kept seeing new faces all the time, never the same ones" but he did not say how many other American prisoners he saw.

Constantly Shifted
He said he was constantly being shifted around during his captivity and was never allowed to approach the other prisoners.

Sexton was wounded and captured in an ambush of his armored unit near An Loc, 15 miles south of Loc Ninh, Aug. 12, 1969.

He told officers a Viet Cong grenade spread shrapnel through his right side. He said he had lost vision in his right eye, and that his right elbow was shattered and immovable.

While he had no idea where he had been held, allied intelligence sources believed it was somewhere in Cambodia.

Officers said Sexton appeared bitter and dejected when he walked into the Loc Ninh base camp, 10 miles south of the Cambodian border.

Hobbled Through Jungle
He had hobbled through the jungle with a rough map drawn for him by the Viet Cong and a note asking four people to assist him in getting back "to the U.S. Embassy."

One U.S. officer said to Sexton, "You're back with the Americans. That should make you feel real good."

Sexton replied, "Yes, but they went off and left me," in reference to his capture. He was a member of Troop E, 2nd Squadron, 11th Armored Cavalry Regiment.

Officers said the Americans apparently were forced to pull back in the ambush and left Sexton behind. By the time they returned, he had been captured.

Sexton said he was always on the move and that he had "walked and walked and walked" day and night, sometimes blindfolded, until he was sick of walking. Occasionally, he rode ox carts. But he said he had been moving constantly for the past two years.

'Real Clean Looking'
"He has a very fine haircut," said one of the first Americans to see him at Loc Ninh. "He was freshly shaved, real clean looking. He was wearing something similar to hospital pajamas, light blue."

At Loc Ninh he was given orange soda and a bowl of soup and an officer reported "He devoured the soup immediately."

Sexton said he had been treated well by the Viet Cong and there was no brutality. He was initially scheduled to be released Sept. 2, then again on Sept. 8 but both times it was postponed.

Sexton was flown by helicopter to an Army hospital at Long Binh, 12 miles northeast of Saigon, where he was reported resting comfortably Friday night.

Officers said Sexton told them his captors did not explain why he was being freed, nor did they give him any "Message to the American people," as the Viet Cong sometimes do in releasing prisoners.

10-Day March
Sexton reported he did not know by what route he was brought to the release point after a solid 10-day march. He recalled, crossing several rivers but was unable to spot any landmarks.

Senior U.S. officers speculated that Sexton had been held in Cambodia, perhaps as far north as Kratie, 60 miles northwest of Loc Ninh.

The Kratie region is believed to be the headquarters of the Central Office for South Vietnam, the Communist high command that directs both military and political operations in the southern half of South Vietnam.

Shortly after his examination in the Army hospital, Sexton called his father in Warren, John C. Sexton. An Army officer already had informed his father that his son was freed.

The elder Sexton said his son told him "my feet are plenty sore but I'm all right."

Wants Christmas Dinner
"I talked with him for two hours this morning," the father continued. "He said the first thing he wanted was a Christmas dinner with sweet potatoes and the works. I said, 'You'll have that.'"

In Washington, Defense Secretary Melvin R. Laird said he was happy Sexton had been released. Laird added, "We remain concerned about the hundreds of other of our military personnel held" captive in Southeast Asia.

Since 1962, the Viet Cong have released 24 American prisoners of war, including Sexton. The last release was made in December 1969, when two prisoners were freed.

The Pentagon lists 462 Americans captured in all of Southeast Asia; two in China, 378 in North Vietnam, 79 in South Vietnam and three in Laos. In addition, 1,176 Americans are listed as missing in action.

Soviets Expel Four British Diplomats, Businessman

Moscow (AP) — The Soviet government has expelled four British diplomats and a businessman, British sources said Friday night. The action followed the expulsion of 105 Soviet officials from Britain on charges of spying.

The visas of three additional British businessmen scheduled to come to the Soviet Union were cancelled and they will not be allowed to enter the country, the sources said.

Ten more Britons not now in Russia were declared unwelcome and will not be allowed to enter the country, the sources added. Nine of the group were former British Embassy staff members and one was a scholar. It was not immediately clear whether any had immediate plans to come to the Soviet Union.

The British Embassy declined to disclose any names in connection with the Soviet government action.

Britain's action against the 105 Soviet representatives was announced Sept. 24.

The Soviet Foreign Ministry Friday made a protest to the British Embassy and said the Moscow government would be "compelled to take measures."

The Foreign Ministry also said that an official visit to the Soviet Union by Britain's foreign secretary, Sir Alex Douglas-Home, would not be possible.

"Such a visit in conditions of the severe aggravation of Soviet-British relations caused by the actions of the British government would be incomprehensible to the Soviet public," said the ministry's statement to the British Embassy, as reported by the Soviet news agency Tass.

Home had been considering a trip to the Soviet Union early next year, British sources said.

The Foreign Ministry previously "expressed a resolute protest against this hostile action leading to a grave complication of Soviet-British relations, the Soviet statement said.

However, the provocative campaign over the absurd accusations against Soviet officials in Britain, the fomenting of an atmosphere of spy mania and hostility toward the Soviet Union are continuing," the statement said. "In view of this, the Soviet government is compelled to take measures dictated by the prevailing situation."

The British Ambassador, Sir John Killick, was summoned to the Soviet Foreign Ministry and informed of the Soviet government move.

Without mentioning details, he later told newsmen "I would describe the measure as severe in nature."

But in London, British officials sighed with relief over Moscow's apparently low-level retaliation.

"Eighteen for 105 is not very harsh," one Foreign Office informant said privately.

Diplomats in London said the low-level response was probably decided by the Kremlin in order not to undermine relations with the West.

Argentine President Faced With Uprising

Buenos Aires, Argentina (AP) — Two army units staged an uprising Friday against President Alejandro Lanusse and he ordered troops to move against the rebels.

A government announcement said troops were on their way to two southern cities "to rapidly overcome this isolated episode. All units of the army, with the exception of the rebels, respond absolutely to the orders of the commander-in-chief."

The announcement said the rebels were "rightist and totalitarian." The uprisings were believed led by right-wing elements opposed to the government's recent rapprochement with followers of exiled dictator Juan D. Peron.

A communique delivered to the newspaper in Olavarria, 150 miles southwest of Buenos Aires, said Lanusse should resign because "the people have lost confidence and faith" in him. The dispatch, signed by Lt. Gov. Florentino Diaz Loza, commander of the 500-man garrison, was taken to the newspaper by a man in a major's uniform.

A similar message was issued in Azul, 30 miles from Olavarria. It was signed by Lt. Col. Fernando Amadeo Baldrich, commander of the 1,200 troops there.

Observers reported no troop movements in either city. A key to the rebels plan could be the tank regiment stationed in Tandil, 60 miles southeast of Azul. But there was no report of any action there.

In Buenos Aires, government sources said Lanusse, who is also army commander-in-chief had been informed of the Azul and Olavarria actions but that all appeared to be quiet. Lanusse is scheduled to leave next Wednesday for state visits to Peru and Chile.

Action Erupts Along Border

Saigon (AP) — Fighting broke out again Friday along the Cambodian-South Vietnamese border and units of a third North Vietnamese regiment were reported in action for the first time.

South Vietnamese infantrymen clashed late in the afternoon with North Vietnamese regulars near Highway 22 just south of U.S. Fire Base Pace, the same area where the Saigon troops made contact Thursday.

By nightfall, there were no reports of the outcome of the latest engagement.

South Vietnamese commanders identified the opposing troops as elements of the 209th Regiment of the North Vietnamese 7th Division, a regiment known to be in the area but heretofore not committed to the enemy's border campaign.

The fresh enemy troops were believed by allied officers to be a rear guard covering the withdrawal of the main body of North Vietnamese troops.

Previously, the North Vietnamese had committed units of two regiments to the drive they launched on both sides of the border Sept. 26 — the 7th Division's 141st Regiment and the 5th Division's 174th Regiment.

Main elements of both these regiments were reported Tuesday to have withdrawn to the east and north of Khek, seven miles inside Cambodia, after 10 days of fighting.

The South Vietnamese commander of the border fighting, Lt. Gen. Nguyen Van Minh, said his troops would pursue the enemy and indicated that new operations were planned.

"Now, they have spread out," Minh said at his headquarters at Tay Ninh, "and we've spread out too."

He told a correspondent he had sent out long-range patrols to try to get a fix on the latest positions of the North Vietnamese in order to bring U.S. and South Vietnamese air strikes on them.

Minh said the non-stop raids by U.S. B52 bombers and smaller tactical bombers were effective in cutting off infiltration and supply routes and played an important part in stopping enemy reinforcements.

Minh disclosed that, in addition to three infantry regiments, the North Vietnamese had committed two artillery regiments to the border fighting and estimated an over-all enemy force of 4,000-5,000 men.

One senior U.S. adviser said: "What happens next depends on how the ARVN South Vietnamese operates in the next days. If they take the offensive and get off the roads, the pressure will continue to ease. If they don't, the enemy is capable of intermittent rocket, mortar and mine attacks along the roads."

"I have a feeling the enemy is staying close enough so that, if the situation develops to their advantage, they'll move back in. The battle isn't over yet."

Both the U.S. and South Vietnamese commands reported North Vietnamese shelling of artillery bases and troop positions on both sides of the border.

The South Vietnamese command said there were six shellings of bases in northern Tay Ninh Province on the South Vietnamese side and in the Khek area in eastern Cambodia. The command described casualties as insignificant.

Brush Fire Is Slowed

Santa Barbara, Calif. (AP) — Subsiding winds and a 1,400-man firefighting team slowed the advance Friday of the year's worst California brush fire, which has claimed four lives and charred more than 4,500 acres.

The four victims, all in bulldozers carving out a firebreak on a ridge, were caught in a "fire storm" which suddenly sucked the oxygen from the air and apparently asphyxiated them, officials said.

Packey Wassel, U.S. Forest Service information officer, said airborne embers probably ignited dense, dry brush below the ridge and the fire rushed up in waves, catching the men in flames "like a vise's grip."

Heat of a fire storm is so intense it generates its own near-tornado winds. The three-day-old blaze — which authorities blamed on arson — crackled through brush-choked canyons 15 miles east of this seacoast city Friday but away from populated areas.

"It's moving slowly now," said Wassel.

Most fire fighters were massed on the open east flank of the blaze, and 70% of the fire had been contained within fire breaks, Wassel said.

Dry, gusty winds that fanned the fire on a four-mile-long, two-mile-wide swath of destruction now were gusting at only five to 15 miles per hour with no increase forecast, he said.

The blaze destroyed seven expensive homes in nearby suburban Summerville and Montecito in its opening stages.

Identification of the four men killed was withheld, pending notification of kin.

Hart Introduces Bill Banning All Handguns

Washington (UPI) — Citing what he called an "incredible overkill in our bedrooms and living rooms," Sen. Philip A. Hart, D-Mich., introduced a bill Friday to ban private ownership of handguns.

Hart's measure would go far beyond other handgun legislation by arranging for the government purchase of all handguns and the arrest of anyone possessing one after six months.

"Possessing a handgun in the house doesn't increase your security, it diminishes it," Hart told reporters in explaining his bill.

Two other measures are aimed primarily at keeping inexpensive, small handguns termed "Saturday night specials" out of the hands of street criminals.

Some of the strongest opposition to such legislation has been based on the need for the private citizen to have a handgun in his home for protection.

Hart said, however, that if it could be understood that possession is more dangerous than it is helpful, "I think the support would be strong" for his bill.

"We've got an incredible overkill in our bedrooms and living rooms in our own country," he said.

Total government purchase of the estimated 25 million handguns in the country would cost more than $500 million dollars, Hart said adding "I'd vote to appropriate that tonight" if it would get rid of handguns.

His bill would exempt guns for the military, police, antique collectors and target shooting clubs which would store them in secure club facilities or at a police station.

Handgun owners would be given 180 days to sell their weapons to the government "at fair market value" for destruction, Hart said.

After that, he said, "any unauthorized person with a handgun in his possession would be subject to a jail term of five years and/or a maximum fine of $5,000."

Answering possible objections to his bill on constitutional grounds, Hart said courts already have ruled that the "right to bear arms" section of the Constitution does not give the individual the right to retain weapons.

500 Youths Plan Walk For Christ

The organizers of a "Walk for Christ" expects about 500 youths to begin walking at 9 a.m. on a 25-mile route through Lincoln.

The co-directors of the walk are Howard Eskildsen, Union for Christ leader on the Union College campus, and Dave Folkerts, youth leader of the Young Life Christian organization is also cooperating.

The purpose of the walk, according to Union College chaplain Don Nelson, is to provide funds for Christ-centered projects in the Lincoln area. He said these projects include drug abuse programs, tutoring programs for underprivileged students, penitentiary contact teams, Christmas for orphans, and Big Brother, Big Sister programs.

Nelson said youths planning to participate in the walk are contacting relatives, neighbors, businessmen and organizations to sponsor them by contributing a certain amount of money for each mile the youths walk.

Nelson said each youth would go as far as he could. He said checkpoints will be set up every few miles and records will be kept of how far each youth walks.

Registration for the march will begin at 8 a.m. in the Union College gymnasium. A brief interfaith service will be held at 8:45.

The planned route for the walk is:

- North on 48th from the Union College gym to Sheridan.
- West on Calvert to Sheridan.

Dempster Layoff Set

Beatrice, Neb. (P) — Dempster Industries, Inc., of Beatrice has announced plans to lay off 51 members of machinists' union Local 1146 on Monday. The union has given its shop committee the right to call a strike whenever it deems it necessary.

C. S. Avery, Dempster president, said the layoff of nearly half the members of Local 1146 of the International Association of Machinists and Aerospace Workers probably will continue for six to eight weeks after a union contract has been negotiated.

The layoff was announced at a negotiating session Thursday.

Without Contract

Union members have been working since Aug. 1 without a contract and repeated bargaining sessions have failed to resolve differences over contract language, benefits and wages.

Varner said he would "philosophically prefer" the university not be in the housing business, but he said that since private enterprise is not supplying necessary units, the university would have to look into the matter.

In other matters, the board also:

—Approved purchase of two more properties west of UNO for a total price of $425,000, despite another protest from area residents.

—Appointed Kenneth L. Shearer, former director of the Greater Omaha Community Action program, as assistant to the dean of the College of Medicine, specifically assigned to community relations.

—Created a department of anesthesiology at the medical center.

IN PERSPECTIVE

By WILLIAM O. DOBLER

Phase 2 of the President's economic program has now been painted with a broad stroke. In the days and weeks between now and Nov. 15, the fine details of the work will be supplied and the American people will come to know what it is they are going to have to live with for at least another year.

There is nothing complicated about what President Nixon plans to do. We will have an economy controlled in prices, wages and rents by separate independent governmental bodies. There will be no direct controls over interest rates, dividends and profits, as there is none now.

The approach after Nov. 15, therefore, is the same as that adopted by the President on Aug. 15. The big difference is that wages, prices and rents will be permitted to advance according to guidelines established by the government agencies.

A cost-of-living increase of 2 to 3 per cent per year is the objective of the new program and the level of inflation, if that is what you want to call it, that will be permitted in establishing wages, prices and rents. Some economic experts have interpreted this to mean a general wage increase figure for most Americans of about 5 per cent a year.

It is likely that the President's program will be favorably received by most people in its early stages. How well it is taken in the long-run will depend on many things.

The program is heavy with the philosophy that if enough money is made in the higher income brackets, the lower income group will come to get its fair share of things. This is a philosophy in which we have very little faith but its degree of applicability here and its performance remain to be seen.

Also, the program tends to stabilize the economy at its present level. This means that some people are stabilized at a low-income level and some at a high-income level. If you are going to stay where you are, you obviously would rather be staying at a salary rate of $300 a week than at $140.

And of course, there are those in the top 10 to 20 per cent of the income bracket who are stabilized at pretty comfortable figures of $25,000 a year and up. It isn't as bad when you are held down on growth in those levels as it is when you are held down at the $10,000-a-year figure and below.

There will be provision for some growth, of course, but it will not be the kind that will encourage the closing of any of the gap between the rich and the poor. The situation will not allow for improved equality as between competing businesses and industries across the nation.

This could encourage a lot of job-changing and a lot of hardship for those businesses and industries caught with a lower pay scale than competitors a few hundred miles away or even across the street. By switching jobs, an employee may be able to net far more pay than he could ever think of with controlled wage increases in his present place of employment.

Then, there is the very important question of what will happen to interest rates, corporate profits, dividends and prices in hard-to-control small business and service establishments.

If the program that evolves after Nov. 15 begins to substantially improve the profit picture and if consumers get hit with small increases in the cost of credit, the cost of cleaning clothes, the cost of legal advice, the cost of car repairs and a host of other small company expense items, then the new program will acquire massive resistance.

Next, there is the matter of unemployment. The idea is that economic stability will bring improved purchasing power, more capital investment in expansion and, therefore, more employment.

Finally, there is the matter of public spending and taxes. Will public spending be cut and, if so, will demands for public services and programs still be met or is the new program merely a clever way of bringing about the old political conservatism that some people have always longed for.

And will the new tax program be equitable or will it merely improve the position of the high-income group? These are the considerations that will determine the long-range acceptance or rejection of President Nixon's program by the American people.

WM. B. DICKINSON, JR.

Man's Biological Future To Be Seriously Studied

WASHINGTON — Is medical and biological science in danger of becoming anti-life? This is the haunting question that troubles biologists and doctors working on the frontiers of the life sciences. Extraordinary breakthroughs point to a totally new dimension of the power of human manipulation.

"Biologic engineering" is the new and frightening phrase. In the years between birth and death, new possibilities continually emerge for remodeling the individual physically and psychologically. Intervention in the life of man can begin even before the potential human being has developed into an egg mature enough for fertilization.

"A scientific revolution, led largely by biologists, promises to bring the very essence of nature, as well as alteration of human nature, under man's control," wrote Harvey Wheeler. We are on the threshold of an era of test-tube babies, genetic abortion, cerebral manipulation. Each of these biological advances raises ethical problems.

The legal, social and ethical issues posed by scientific discoveries will be discussed by 1,200 experts gathered for the Washington symposium. The urgency for such a gathering has been stated by Dr. James D. Watson, who won the Nobel prize in biochemistry in 1962 as co-discoverer of the structure of the hereditary molecule, DNA. Watson fears that if we do not think about the ethical issues now, "the possibility of our having a free choice will soon be gone."

It will take the best social intelligence that man can muster to begin to answer such life-and-death questions as: How far should a doctor go to prolong the life of a dying patient or a hopelessly retarded mongoloid child? Given the high mortality rate in heart transplants, is the surgical procedure presently justifiable?

Thomas Thompson, in a new book called "Hearts," describes the ethical choices that were involved in what has become known as the "transplant year" in Houston, Tex. Between May 3, 1968, and April 7, 1969, Dr. Denton Cooley transplanted hearts in 21 patients. All are now dead, victims of tissue rejection that undid the best surgical procedures.

Dr. Cooley told Thompson he looks back on transplants "as just one of those procedures which we tried and, for the time being, discarded." But a nurse who watched in growing horror as the patients died told Thompson that to continue transplants after so many failures "was dehumanization by technology."

There are signs of a growing public consciousness that the new advances required an examination of public policies. Twenty U.S. senators this year have sponsored a resolution calling for a national commission to be set up to study legal, ethical and social issues posed by developments in the bio-medical field.

Conference Now History

The Time Out Conference on Human Sexuality held at the University of Nebraska is now history. It is difficult to judge whether it was a success or failure, because several different standards can be used.

Life went on as usual at the Lincoln campus during the conference. It didn't play to a full house at every session, with students hanging on every titillating disclosure, as many people might have supposed. It gives one a reason to believe that the student attitude toward sex is more healthy than that of the critics.

If those who attended Time Out gained any clearer understanding of human sexuality, then the conference served its purpose. And surely the purpose was not to advocate one particular sexual life-style over another.

The conference served another purpose though, one far less commendable than the effort to further understanding. It was used, rather cheaply in some instances, to raise the political stock of some Nebraskans.

There can be little doubt that the Legislature will look askance at the controversy during an election year and try to use it against the university at budget time. But it was a basically sound, balanced program and had not some politicians turned it into a sensation and tried to wring everything out of it they could. Time Out probably would have come and gone and been forgotten.

We hope that Nebraskans will not be fooled by petty sensationalism; that they realize that student minds are not blank checks to be filled out and negotiated by any deviant and that an open discussion of all aspects of human sexuality is a healthy thing.

It doesn't take any extraordinary courage or intelligence to "stand up and be counted" against prostitution or sexual deviation or abortion. Most people are opposed to those things. It is far more courageous — but not politically smart — to applaud any effort to rationally discuss and define sexual problems, real, fact-of-life problems, which, no matter how much people want to believe, will not go away by ignoring them.

Everybody Wins?

State Sen. John DeCamp of Neligh, declaring that next session he will introduce legislation to establish a state-run lottery, says "most people I mentioned it to are stunned at first, but after examining the lottery, they came back and said it was the best way to get these projects done."

DeCamp envisions a weekly lottery, run by the Department of Revenue. Under his formula — based on the New Jersey state lottery — 45% of the proceeds would go to the state while the other 55% would go into a fund to pay the winners. The profits — DeCamp estimates somewhere near $6 million annually — would help the state build a new law school and library at the University of Nebraska and a new prison complex.

Three of the highest ranking projects on the state's building priority list, constructed without a raise in taxes. "Taxpayers won't stand for a raise in income taxes," DeCamp said. "The beauty of it (the lottery) is nobody has to pay, only those who wish. You win and the state wins."

We are certain the senator's intentions are good and that some people will agree that a lottery "is the best way to get these projects done." Unfortunately, it seems that it might be the only way.

There are at least two good arguments against a state lottery, however. One is that a lottery is a blatant admission that Legislature refuses to face up to the state's needs through conventional, accepted methods of financing. A lottery is an easy, although devious, way out.

Another is that a lottery will prey upon those who can least afford it; those who would spend those last couple of bucks week after week, that should have gone for necessities, in hopes of a windfall.

Nebraska has some hard decisions to make in the area of capital construction. Those decisions and the people's welfare should not be left to chance.

High Court Choices Should Look Toward Legal Brilliance, Plus Political Experience

WASHINGTON — The Supreme Court is the most ingenious political institution invented by Americans. It is the highest court of appeal such as all lawful societies have, but it is also the third chamber of the national legislature.

When contending social forces or outworn political mythologies make it impossible for the House and Senate to resolve a major issue, the Supreme Court ultimately intervenes. Racial segregation, legislative malapportionment, and church-state relationships are three of the complicated, impassioned subjects which would convulse the national parliament in any other free country but which in the United States are largely left to the Supreme Court.

Because the court performs this unique and essential function, Justice Felix Frankfurter and others have shown a curious misunderstanding of the American system in their contention that some issues are non-justiciable. Our government has so many checks, balances, and shared powers that it could not function if every question could not eventually be decided by somebody somewhere.

In this framework, President Nixon's desire to reshape the court along more conservative lines is entirely understandable. The power to influence the future course of this powerful institution is one of the cherished prerogatives of the presidency. It is equally understandable that liberals in Congress who have a different philosophy and who speak for other elements in society should scrutinize Nixon's nominations with care and resist them where resistance is feasible.

In the exercise of its confirming power, the Senate normally and properly defers to the president's initiative unless it discovers evidence which reflects seriously upon a nominee's character, judgment, or professional competence. Thus, Judge Haynsworth had not been as vigilant in guarding against the appearance of conflict-of-interest impropriety as he should have been, and in the aftermath of the Fortas case, the Senate was not disposed to extend him the benefit of the doubt. Former Judge Carswell's disingenuous testimony and shoddy public record showed him unfit to serve on the court.

But Representative Poff who has withdrawn his name from consideration for one of the current Supreme Court vacancies posed a quite different issue. He is vulnerable not on grounds of character or intellect but of outmoded legal philosophy. In the last 20 years, the court has enabled Negroes to make dramatic legal gains by its broadened interpretation of the first section of the 14th Amendment which guarantees every person "equal protection of the laws." To his opponents, Poff's voting record suggested that he is fundamentally out of sympathy with this modern approach.

In law as in other areas of life, there are broad movements of opinion which are irreversible. There is a parallel here with the way in which the Roosevelt-appointed court of the late 1930's and '40's expanded the interpretation of the interstate commerce clause to make possible federal regulation of the national economy. A jurist who held the narrow concept of the commerce clause once defended by Justice Willis Van Devanter and Justice George Sutherland would now be regarded as a fossil. Similarly, any nominee who holds Poff's anachronistic view of the 14th Amendment can expect fierce resistance to his confirmation.

Undesirable as another protracted nomination fight would be, what most damages the court is not controversy but bad appointments whether they are quietly or noisily received. Public uproar of varying intensity accompanied the elevation of great justices such as Louis Brandeis, Charles Evans Hughes (to the chief justiceship), Hugo Black and Frankfurter while some mediocrities have moved to the

GILBERT HUNT

They Had A Dream

The Richmond Theater was packed with 600 persons representing the cream of society. Two new plays which were the talk of the town had drawn them there on that night of Dec. 26, 1811, a night which became etched in the memory of Richmond.

Scattered in the audience were Virginia Gov. George William Smith, a bank president, a former senator and a number of other important personages.

For Smith and 71 others, those were the final hours of their lives. Midway through the performance, the scenery caught fire and soon engulfed the theater in flames. Panic swept the audience.

Several blocks away, Mrs. George Mayo got word of the fire and dispatched Gilbert Hunt, her slave, to the theater, hoping he could save her daughter, Louisa.

When Hunt arrived, he found the entrance blocked and the windows aglare with flames. Those who had occupied theater boxes were trapped on the upper floors. Among them was Dr. James C. McCaw who called to Hunt for help. Between them, the two men set up a rescue system described this way in an account by the Richmond News Leader:

"As fast as he could, and gasping all the while, Dr. McCaw would take a woman from the screaming throng behind him, would lower her from the window and would then release her.

"Below the window and probably more than 15 feet from the woman, Gilbert took his stand. Ten or 11 women he caught without injury."

At last, with the flames close upon him, Dr. McCaw saw that he had only a moment. He leaped to safety but broke his leg when he hit and lay helpless as the burning wall of the theater threatened to topple on him.

While others stood by idly, Hunt rushed in and pulled McCaw clear just as the wall collapsed. Hunt's valor during that disaster was only one of several feats which endeared him to the residents of Richmond.

During the war of 1812, Hunt who was a blacksmith worked night and day, seven days a week, mounting cannon and shoeing Army horses in the face of approaching British troops.

In 1821, he was the hero in a second fire which swept the state penitentiary trapping a number of prisoners. After helping rescue them one day, he was called on the next day to forge handcuffs with which to manacle them.

Born a slave in 1780 at a place called Piping Tree on the Pamunkey River north of Richmond, Hunt had been brought to the city as a youth to work as a smithy in a carriage shop.

After the theater fire, efforts were made to free him in gratitude for his selfless actions but they failed and he reained a slave until 1829.

By working in his spare time, Hunt managed to save up $800, bought his freedom and migrated to Liberia. He soon returned, however, explaining, "I have lived in Richmond, labored in Richmond and I hope to die in Richmond."

Hunt bought a house and worked as a smithy until 1856 when he became too feeble to work. There was a drive to secure a pension for him during which the Richmond Whig cited his contributions asking: "Shall we neglect him in his old age when the arm which defended the hands which saved our fathers and mothers are pulsed in old age?"

The appeal failed, however, and Hunt died in poverty in 1863.

In 1937, recognition of Hunt's valor finally came when a plaque in his honor was placed at the Monumental Church, built on the site of the theater disaster 126 years earlier.

Letters To The Editor

Brevity in letters is requested but length in itself will have no bearing on needless details and repetitious matter will be edited out of letters. Too frequent the same subject may be rejected. However, letters will be printed under a pen name or initials at the editor's discretion.

First Loyalty

Lincoln, Neb.

I have read a number of articles in the paper indicating the possibility of a request for a change in the form of the unicameral to a party concept. I surely hope, if this is submitted to the voters as no doubt it should be for any change to be made, that they will reject it.

Under our present non-party unicameral system, the first loyalty of a state senator is to the constituency he represents, and in order to be re-elected, he must consider their desires and needs ahead of other matters. This does not mean he is not subject to influences from lobbyists and pressure groups, but that in considering these influences, if he wishes to continue in office, in most instances he would consider these influences secondary to the wants of his electorate.

Under the party system, the first loyalty of an office seeker, whether we like it or not, is to the party. In instances where he must make a choice between what the party wants and what his constituency desires and needs, he must go with the party or he probably won't ever be nominated again.

It seems to me that it is evident that there is less graft and corruption in Nebraska governmental affairs than those of most states, and I believe this is due mainly to the fact that the man who wishes to run for the state legislature must be directly responsible to those who elect him for his actions, and for their vote.

I sincerely hope we will retain the present non-partisan unicameral system.

Exon Position

Brownville, Neb.

It is interesting to read about the controversy between Governor Exon and Mr. Svore of the Environmental Protection Agency.

Governor Exon says that he will defend his position.

We who live in the vicinity of the Cooper Nuclear Power Station near Brownville have NO laws to protect us from NPPD, Iowa Power and Light, Illinois Electric, whose money is building this plant. We have NO planned state monitoring, and our insurance against any unforeseen occurrence at the plant is indeed questionable.

We cannot even insist that Cooper stay within the Federal Radiation Council's "permissible" radiation dosages to our children.

Defend his position? What position?

The right to do nothing to protect us in southeastern

Nebraska from any nuclear power experiment that the AEC might think up for us?

Our state environmental protection agency? It is in their rules that they do not question any matters taken over by any agency of the federal government, and that is the AEC.

One District

Holyoke, Colo.

I read an article or heard over TV that there is a bill sponsored in Nebraska to turn the whole state of Nebraska into one school district. What a folly that would be! Anybody even suggesting that must be leaning toward communism and dictatorship.

Do the people of Nebraska want the State Capitol to tell them whom they can hire as teachers or just what to do or not do? A little child can see through that and see what is going to happen to our country if we let everything that someone brings up go through.

I was born and raised in Nebraska and lived there until I was 40 I had my schooling there and so did some of my children. I have lived in Colorado since 1930 but still love my old Nebraska. And what can happen in Nebraska can also happen in other states.

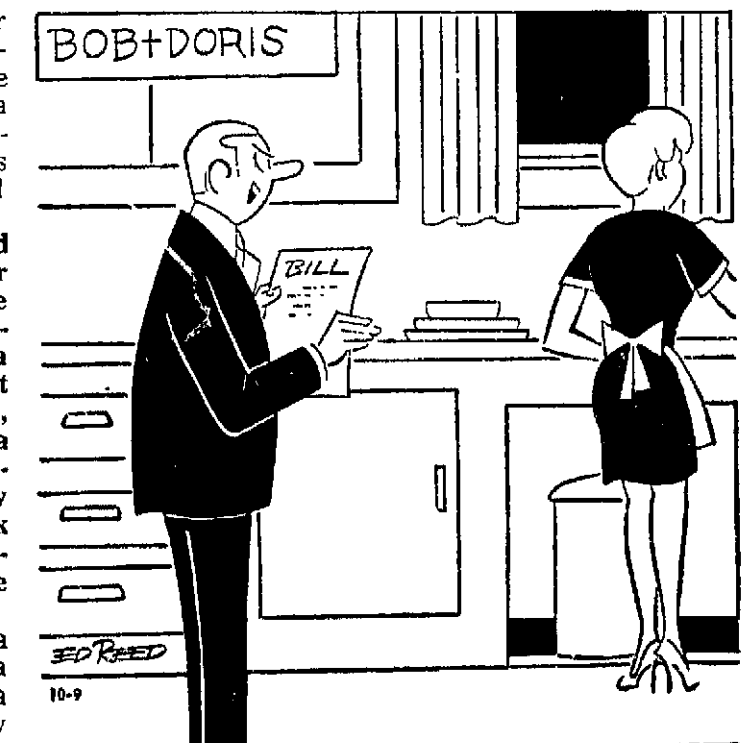

The citizens of Nebraska should get on their high horse and try to keep what little freedom they have left.

I could dwell on the matter of busing, too, which Washington wants us to swallow, but it is a hard and bitter pill.

I had to get this off my chest. Just one man's opinion, but I hope it does some good.

Baker Says Case Designed To Toss Wrench Into Works

By MILAN WALL
Star Staff Writer

The president of the University of Minnesota Student Association said Friday his case to establish the legality of same-sex marriages is "designed to throw a monkey wrench into the works."

The case, heard by the Minnesota Supreme Court late last month, is being pressed to "create a discussion of alternative plans for the nuclear family," Jack Baker told the largest crowd of the four-day Time Out Conference on Human Sexuality at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln.

"We wanted to get married primarily because we love each other," said Baker of his now legally sanctioned marriage with Mike McConnell, executive director of the Youth Services Coalition in Minneapolis.

But Baker told more than 800 students and others that the issue in the case, which he said they will take to the U.S. Supreme Court if necessary, is "survival of a race."

Legally Married Baker and McConnell were legally married last month under a quirk in Minnesota laws.

When a court clerk refused to grant them a marriage license in May 1970, the two took the case to court.

Then in 1971, McConnell adopted Baker (who changed his name in the adoption to Pat Lyn McConnell) and McConnell alone applied for a marriage license, which was granted.

They were married Sept. 3 by a United Methodist minister, said Baker, who called himself a practicing Roman Catholic.

He said the subterfuge used to legalize the marriage was primarily for economic benefits that accrue to married couples.

Will Continue But he said they would continue to press their case for legalizing same-sex marriages. Baker, a law student, has done much of the legal work on that case himself, he said, with the help of many other attorneys and members of the Minnesota law college faculty.

Prof. Benjamin Demott.

McConnell is also pressing a separate case, which he won in a U.S. District Court, against the Minnesota Board of Regents.

The board refused to hire him, after he applied for the marriage license in 1970, for a job at the university library. The university has appealed the district court's decision in favor of McConnell to the 8th U.S. District Court of Appeals.

"There has to be alternatives to the nuclear family," Baker told the audience. "Otherwise the survival of our race is at stake."

He said although he is not opposed to marriage and family relationships between heterosexual couples, "we must not have every woman producing a child."

Not a "Full Member" Now, he said, a woman is not considered a "full member of society until she has married and has a respectable number of children."

"If that continues, we're going to have a crisis situation," in terms of population, he said.

"Once the Supreme Court says same-sex marriages are okay," he continued, the impact of the decision will force legislatures and the people to look to alternatives to the traditional family structure.

Carpenter 'A Fool'

Baker also labeled State Sen. Terry Carpenter "a fool who does not deserve the trust of the people of Nebraska."

Carpenter's efforts to halt the conference were a "disruptive influence on legitimate education pursuits," he said, and "drags the high office (the U.S. Senate) he seeks to the level of the gutter."

The last speaker of the conference, Amherst English Prof. Benjamin Demott, said the sexual revolution is just one aspect of a "cultural revolution" that protests against the "culture of slots."

The culture of slots, he said, "fixes human beings in accord with presumed ability," instead of actual ability.

No Power To Change

The real problem in America, he suggested, is that most Americans, except for upper middle income citizens and certain ethnic minorities, have no power to change their lives.

He said they suffer from "civic illiteracy" because their "chance to participate in any genuine way in the organization of power is minimal if not nonexistent."

"As long as we hassle about nothing more important than our private sex lives," he said, "nothing will happen."

He suggested creation of new social agencies to "organize and effect the quality of life in middle, middle communities."

Friday morning students heard a talk on child development. The conference ended Friday evening with a panel discussion by several persons from Chicago's "gay liberation" movement.

LIFE BEGINS AT FORTY:

He Played 7,500 Solitaire Games

By ROBERT PETERSON

Several years ago I visited a minister who mentioned that the previous week he had received in the mail a notebook filled with mysterious numbers. There was no explanation until several days later when a retired banker, who was an old friend, dropped by to say he had sent the notebook as a memento.

"That notebook," said the banker, "contains my scores on 7,500 games of solitaire that I've played in the seven years of my retirement. You told me to get a hobby when I retired, so I took up solitaire. It kept me busy and helped kill time."

With the minister's permission, I related the story in my column. Later, several readers wrote in to express doubt about the story.

One said, "You must have made that one up." Another wrote, "Nobody in his right mind could get sufficiently interested in a stupid game like solitaire to play 7,500 games."

Well, the years have passed and yesterday I noted an Associated Press story in the newspaper which puts my previous tale of solitaire addition to shame.

The story reports on Lewis Sutter of Detroit, Mich., who has played 132,400 games of solitaire in the 10 years of his retirement!

The story relates that Sutter, who is retired as manager of an automotive parts company, lives alone in an apartment and, lacking anything else to do with his time, decided to take up solitaire as a hobby since it requires but one player.

Like the banker on whom I had reported previously, Sutter keeps a written memo of each game that he plays, and his game records now fill six ledger books. Sutter says he averages about 40 games a day, wins about one game in 12, and has won seven decks of cards. His longest winning streak was four games.

He was quoted as saying, "I've got nothing else to do. I used to have hundreds of friends but I'm not in contact with them anymore."

Poor Mr. Sutter. His old friends have apparently been replaced by the king, queen, jack and joker of his playing card deck. Maybe he has found them adequate company, but it's difficult to believe they have been as satisfying as a hundred other pursuits might have proved.

Now there's nothing wrong with spending an occasional hour or two at idle play. But it seems sad when a mature person with years of experience and knowledge, chooses to devote a substantial segment of his waking hours to such an aimless pursuit as solitaire.

Life is short. Hours are precious. And time marches on. To kill time is to deprive ourselves of life's basic commodity.

When we retire time should be cherished and utilized in such a way as to bring us a flow of rich and satisfying experiences. One of these days

I'm going out to Detroit and look up Mr. Sutter and see if I don't get him interested in a more productive retirement career. But who knows. Maybe he'll get me hooked on solitaire.

New Hampshire Rector Elected Bishop Of Iowa

Des Moines, Iowa (AP) — The Rev. Walter C. Richter, 48, rector of the Church of the Good Shepherd at Nashua, N.H., was elected bishop of the Episcopal Diocese of Iowa Friday.

Richter, who has served as rector of the Nashua church since 1954, was elected from four candidates at a special convention of Iowa clergy and lay delegates here.

He will become the seventh bishop of the diocese.

Richter replaces Bishop Gordon V. Smith who was elected in 1950.

Devaney Won't Get 'Big Red' Plate

Instead, those plates will go on a car owned by Bernard Koyen of Omaha.

Koyen's name was drawn Friday for the plates as the State Motor Vehicles department held a statewide drawing for prestige license plates for which there had been more than one request.

Including the "Big Red" plates, there were only seven situations where more than one application was received for the plates, according to Vern Janssen, supervisor of titles and registration for the Motor Vehicles Department.

The department has received only about 200 requests for the prestige plates thus far, Janssen said.

The 1971 legislature enacted LB376 which provides for the plates — with up to six characters — at an extra cost to the vehicle owner.

Sen. P. J. Morgan of Omaha, sponsor of LB376, had asked for the "Big Red" plates for Devaney but Koyen's name was drawn Friday in the lottery by Mrs. Alice Negley, an employee of the State Library Commission's library for the blind and physically handicapped.

State Motor Vehicles Director John Kissack set aside the "1" plate for Gov. J. J. Exon and Morgan had wanted the "2" plate but he lost that one to Koyen again.

The other five plates wanted by more than a single person included "Z," "Harold," "B," "Bud Man," and "Tom."

Only 1 Of 40 Westview Residents Can Go Back

By GERRY SWITZER
Star Staff Writer

Only one of the 40 residents of Westview, which were forced out of the county home two weeks ago due to fire, is physically able to be returned to the facility, it was learned Friday.

After conducting an evaluation of the former Westview residents, Joe Hageman of the State Health Department reported that under the state's definition of care, only one of the 40 would not require some type of nursing care.

Hageman said that 29 of the 40 need minimum or personal care, and six require moderate or intermediate care.

Many are senile, prone to wandering, several are alcoholics and all of the 39 need a great deal of supervision, according to Hageman.

Care Required

He said all of the rest of the Westview residents are on extensive medication and require care in daily living with four of them falling in the category requiring skilled care.

If Lancaster Manor had space, Hageman said, all but those four requiring skilled care and the one not needing nursing care could be taken care of at the county nursing home, but cannot be retained on a permanent basis in the area of the facility where they were taken on an emergency basis during the fire.

He said that the state will allow the county to keep the people there under an emergency situation until something can be worked out.

He said he had notified county officials and anticipates getting together with them to see what can be worked out next week.

Trabert Not Sure County Welfare Director J. Earle Trabert told The Star that he was not sure what the county would do with these people but that he anticipated working something out between the county board and state officials next week.

He said he had been working with the state Friday after he was notified of the situation and that he is trying to work out some plans whereby the Westview facility could be kept open for a certain type of patient as a board and room facility.

The repair of Westview, is "moving along," according to Trabert, noting that there is a possibility that the facility could be used for Old Age Assistance recipients who cannot qualify for Medicare.

Trabert said a good many of the people who were at Westview are alcoholics who have been in and out of the Regional Centers and medication for many of the people is nothing more than tranquilizers.

Muskie Enters Demo Dispute

The New York Times

Washington — Sen. Edmund S. Muskie of Maine, the front-runner for the Democratic presidential nomination, was reported ready Friday night to throw his weight behind the party's reform element in a major intra-party dispute.

The dispute centers around the choice of a temporary chairman of the Credentials Committee for next year's national convention — a post with considerable power that has also become a symbol of the Democrats' commitment to party reform.

Two of Muskie's principal political operatives, John F. English of New York and George J. Mitchell of Maine, both members of the National Committee, will almost certainly vote for Sen. Harold E. Hughes of Iowa, the reform candidate, at the National Committee's meeting Wednesday.

If Muskie also authorizes them to campaign for Hughes among influential pro-Muskie politicians across the country, it could swing the balloting in the Iowa's favor.

However, the National Committee Chairman, Lawrence F. O'Brien, his staff and organized labor continued a strong anti-Hughes effort. Their candidate — the choice of most of the old guard elements in the party — is Mrs. Patricia Roberts Harris, a former ambassador to Luxembourg.

Although committee officials refused to respond to telephone requests for information on their activities, it was learned that a tally kept by William B. Welsh, an assistant to O'Brien, showed Mrs. Harris with 54 votes, Hughes with 40 and, presumably, 14 undecided. There are 54 men and 54 women on the national committee.

Hughes supporters said their count showed the senator in a somewhat stronger position, but they conceded that the vote would be close.

Labor sources said that Alexander E. Barkan, the chief political contact man for the American Federation of Labor and Congress of Industrial Organizations, was exerting "maximum pressure" on committee members not to support Hughes. In fact, these sources said, his opposition was a major reason for O'Brien's decision to promote the candidacy of Mrs. Harris.

English and Mitchell's votes will win Muskie support among liberals who have been chary of his candidacy.

But, as always for a centrist candidate, there are problems for Muskie as well. His identification with Hughes will cause problems with O'Brien, who is accustomed to having his way in such matters, and with organized labor.

"The fight over the Credentials Committee post, which developed earlier this week, brought to the surface the antagonisms of 1968 between the reformers and the old guard, disrupting the tenuous party unity of the last two years.

Fair Board Concerned About Court Injunction

By DOMINICK COSTELLO
Farm Editor

State fair officials expressed concern over the eventual effect of a court injunction which forced the fair board to permit a young man to distribute anti-war pamphlets.

"If anyone can distribute material on the fairgrounds during the fair without buying a booth, then the fair is in trouble. It could mean the end of the fair," said Don Thompson, president of the board.

Attorney Hal Hasselbalch advised the board that the laws establishing the fair board were "a bit sketchy and need to be revised." Hasselbalch also suggested the board consider new articles of incorporation and a new set of bylaws to clarify the situation.

The agreement between Lancaster County and the fair board was also discussed. Apparently the only document between the two groups is a deed which specifies that the state fair board may use the county fair land as long as the county fair is held on the state fairgrounds.

The county land involves approximately 10 acres of land which is a part of the present state fairgrounds.

"We have a very good working relationship with the county fair people and we want to keep it that way. However, it might be beneficial to both groups if a written agreement was developed particularly in view of the possibility of a building program," Thompson said.

The board directed Hasselbalch to develop a set of bylaws and articles of incorporation to be reviewed by the board during its meeting November 4th.

The board reviewed the plans for the new building to be shared by the fair and the university. "We will have control of the building for the week before, during and for the week after the fair and we will be able to use it at other times during the rest of the year," explained Henry Brandt, fair manager.

Sens. Jules Burbach and Thome Johnson were asked by the board to evaluate the chances of changes in the cigarette tax designated to provide funds for the shared structure along with a state office building and a recreation facility at the state home in Beatrice.

"I guess it's true that Sen. Carpenter is planning to introduce a bill which would repeal the earmarking portion of the law but not the tax itself. I expect to see attempts to amend the bill to provide for a new penitentiary and perhaps the state reformatory to the list of things the tax will pay for.

"I understand there is also support for a soil and water conservation fund and perhaps even a Law College building. I must say all that is speculation but I do foresee some real tough sledding on the earmarking question," Burbach said.

Date Set By Fair Board For Negotiating Midway Contra

Lincoln, Neb. (AP) — The state Fair Board Friday set Nov. 4 as date for a meeting to negotiate with West Coast Shows, Inc., on extension of that firm's contract to provide midway attractions at the fair.

The San Francisco-based firm participated in this year's fair under a one-year contract with an option to renegotiate annually for four more years.

Fair Manager Henry Brandt said West Coast Shows paid the fair $80,000 this year, the guaranteed minimum. Under the contract's graduated percentage, the return would have been about $5,000 less, he said.

Brandt said gross midway receipts were about $30,000 less than those of the W. T. Collins shows in 1970, but noted that Collins charged somewhat higher prices for some rides.

Fair Board President Don Thompson said that if the board and West Coast Shows are unable to agree on a contract extension, the board would be free to consider new bids for the 1972 fair.

Also discussed at the board meeting was a federal court temporary injunction, issued the last day of this year's fair, which prevented the board from restricting the distribution of literature on the fairgrounds by Ronald Kurtenbach, who brought the civil rights action.

Thompson said the court's holding, if extended, "could create all sorts of problems for us next year."

"Every exhibitor can hand out anything anywhere on the grounds without bothering to buy exhibit space. If we can't charge for this service it would mean an end to the fair."

Attorney Hal Hasselbalch of Lincoln was asked to study the need for legislation to clarify the board's position in this connection.

U.S. Anti-Pollution Funds Won't Be Lost

By BOB GUENTHER
Star Staff Writer

Gov. J. James Exon and Regional Environmental Protection Agency Administrator Jerome H. Svore said Friday that Nebraska is in no danger of losing some $15.9 million in federal pollution abatement funds.

Clarifying some "misconceptions," Exon said, "the facts of the matter now are the $6.6 million in state funds for secondary sewage treatment and the matching $15.9 million in federal anti-pollution funds are in no jeopardy."

Friday's meeting between Svore and Exon was prompted by a letter last week which points out shortcomings in the state's environmental program in both staff and funding. In the letter Svore urged the state to "beef up" its pollution programs.

Future Money

"What I intended to say," Svore said, "concerned future money, not the nearly $16 million for fiscal 1972."

Speaking to a meeting of the Environmental Control Council, Svore said, "I didn't mean to criticize by omission the state's accomplishments. In the area of feedlot pollution management, Nebraska has been a leader."

"I wrote very sincerely solely for the purpose to explain some of the deadlines, the responsibilities Congress thinks the Department of Environmental Control should have and the costs involved."

Too Much Help

The letter's lack of diplomacy, Svore said, was due to the fact that several administrators assisted him in writing the letter.

"When something is done by a committee, you sometimes come up with a camel," Svore said.

Although the question of present funds being in jeopardy was answered, the governor and the Kansas City administrator hoped disagreements over future pollution programs will, in time, be resolved.

One of the areas of disagreement involving future funds apparently still exists over who should have responsibility over water quality planning.

DEC Responsibility

Svore maintained the position he set forth in his letter saying, "If you're going to plan for the environment across the board, we feel the responsibility should rest with the DEC."

Exon said the job might better be done with existing resources, namely the Soil and Water Conservation Commission.

"They have the expertise," Exon said.

Svore and Exon did agree that present personnel should be used where possible.

The governor also defended the size of the DEC staff, noting that today there are 31 positions, 9 more than 30 days ago.

State's Chief Air Pollution Control Man Quits

Nebraska's chief air pollution control officer submitted his resignation Friday charging that the state is unwilling to adequately finance air pollution control.

In his letter of resignation to T. A. Filipi, Gov. J. James Exon's agent in charge of the Department of Environmental Control, Walter Franke said, "It is increasingly obvious to me that my desire to give Nebraskans an adequate air quality control program is shared by few, other than yourself, in authority here."

"It is, therefore," Franke continued, "obvious to me under these conditions it is not possible for me to continue to have the responsibility for such a program."

Franke said in his letter that without an expanding program the services essential to the well-being of the state cannot be provided.

An example of the state's attitude, Franke said, was his proposed budget for the next fiscal year of $158,000 (including an increase in the state's share to $39,000) which was chopped to $103,000 (with $26,000 in state funds.)

He said he had been criticized for submitting such a high budget.

"For several months," he said, "I have had an ever increasing feeling of dissatisfaction over the attitude taken toward my requests for additional personnel and funds for the state air pollution control program."

"As you know, all attempts to build a control program, which I strongly feel is necessary to protect the air quality of this state, have been rejected."

Franke requested his resignation be, effective Nov. 12, since he has accepted a similar job with the State of Illinois in the St. Louis area.

'Environmental Engineers At A Premium'

"This is a time when environmental engineers are at a premium and it's expected that you have to pay more," Gov. J. James Exon said Friday.

Exon said a difference of $5,000 or $6,000 between the salary asked by an applicant for the Council's executive secretary post and what the guidelines are, should not prevent the Council from hiring the man it wants.

The governor made the remark when told that two applicants withdrew their applications because the $14,000 to $18,000 salary is not enough.

The Council's search committee for an executive secretary asked Exon several questions concerning the nature of the job.

Council member Mrs. Margaret Sutherland asked if the job was "political," since applicants for the executive secretary job had asked.

"I honestly don't know," Exon said, "I hope it won't be in the political arena. At least it won't for another three years."

Council chairman Ted Reeves also asked Exon whether the nature of the Council was administrative or policy-making.

Drawing a parallel between the Council and the Game and Parks Commission, Exon said, "You are a policy-making body and you are free to do anything an executive commission is authorized to do."

Camera Lost In Wyoming Returned To Girl In Lincoln

Carmen Holzworth, 13, thought she would never see her camera again.

Carmen, daughter of the Rev. and Mrs. Emery Holzworth, of 2135 So. 50th, left her camera on a bench by a lake near Grand Teton National Park in Wyoming while vacationing with her family in July.

Rangers of the park told her it was unlikely anyone would return the camera to them because she said it had been lost outside of park property.

So Carmen pledged her family not to tell her grandmother, who had given her the camera, that she had lost it.

Story Too Good

Now, however, she has a story too good to keep to herself.

The camera was returned to her Monday, with a little help from luck and Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Wagener of 1560 Ridgeway Road.

Although the label with Carmen Holzworth's name on it had fallen off, the adhesive from the label still traced a pattern of barely visible letters.

"We could pick out HO and ORTH," said Mrs. Wagener. "And when we developed the film we noticed the little boy had a Little Chiefs T-shirt on, and we knew the owner had to live in Lincoln."

The Wagener's went to the phone book and decided that the Holzworth's were the only name that would fit the letters.

"I was so surprised when I got it back I about died," Carmen said.

"You must live a pretty good life for that to happen," Wagener told the pastor's daughter.

Construction Bids For Lab Building Exceed Funds

Composite low construction bids for the state laboratory building in south Lincoln exceeded funds appropriated for the project, according to records in the State Department of Administrative Service's capital facilities division.

The low bids, opened this week, would require a total expenditure of $899,978, or about $19,000 more than the total appropriations.

The building will house laboratories for the State Health and Agriculture Departments and the State Crime Commission.

The apparent low bids, which will be discussed at a State Building Commission meeting Tuesday, include M. W. Anderson Construction Co. of Lincoln, $449,929 on general construction; E. O. Peters Co. of Lincoln, $284,455 on mechanical; OK Electric of Lincoln, $76,000 on electrical and Triangle School Service of South Sioux City, $89,594 on equipment.

Wet Snow Hit City Year Ago

By BILL EUTZY
Star Staff Writer

Lincolinites face the prospect of a pleasant, crisp fall day Saturday with a high temperature predicted near 70 degrees and no precipitation forecast — a marked contrast to Oct. 9, 1970.

On that Friday morning one year ago, residents awoke to a blanket of rain, slush and snow — the earliest snowstorm recorded in the city's history.

The heavy wetness and accompanying 41 mile-an-hour winds, rather than the five-inch depth of the snowfall, proved the biggest problem facing Lincolinites, with scores of branches, power and telephone lines down throughout the city.

Schools Close

Power failures closed all elementary and high schools in the city, while crews from the Lincoln Electric System, aided by crews from O'Neill, York and Beatrice worked round-the-clock in an attempt to restore power to many darkened, unheated homes.

Some parts of the city were without power or telephone service until Sunday, while some scattered homes experienced outages well into the week.

Street sanding operations were delayed when the electrically-operated doors of the street maintenance equipment garage could not be opened due to an outage.

Early morning traffic was slowed to a snail's pace, mostly due to downed branches and power lines, with accident calls to the Lincoln Police Dept. labeled "too numerous to count."

Businesses Close

Scores of Lincoln businesses chose to remain closed for the day, providing an opportunity for employees and customers alike to spend the day digging out from the storm.

Hardest hit by the storm were trees in the capital city. Hundreds of trees were extensively damaged or destroyed by the heavy, wet snow that clung to branches with their still nearly full cloak of leaves.

Tree damage was described at the time as the "worst ever seen," especially in the older neighborhoods of Lincoln where older and larger trees were prominent.

The News In Suburbia

In addition to following their normal day-to-day routine, which most frequently involves work, school or housework or any combination thereof, Lincoln's suburban residents have been keeping their social calendars filled to overflowing with interesting things to do.

A very pleasant bit of news this morning concerns four new Lincoln residents — and an event which kept one of them very busy Tuesday morning.

Recently taking up residence in the Bethany Park Heights neighborhood were Mr. and Mrs. Walt Brown and family who came to Lincoln from their former home in Los Angeles, Calif. This morning we'd like to add our word of welcome to those that have already been received by Mr. and Mrs. Brown and their daughters, Mariva, 7, and Nona who is 5.

As we mentioned before, one of the Browns — Mrs. Brown to be precise — had a very busy and enjoyable few hours last Tuesday morning. At that time, she was the guest of honor at a neighborhood coffee. Hostess at her home for the informal get-together was Mrs. Phil White — and we're certain that all of the ladies attending enjoyed getting acquainted with their new neighbor.

A very festive weekend was on the agenda recently for Mr. and Mrs. Norm Weideman and children, Kami and Brian, who make their home in Patrician Heights. Last weekend, the Weideman family motored to Burke, S.D. where they took part in a family get-together and celebration.

The spotlight was focused on Mrs. Weideman's parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Wolf of Burke who observed their 50th wedding anniversary on Saturday, Oct. 2. In celebration of the occasion, Mr. and Mrs. Wolf were the guests of honor at an open house which took place at the Burke VFW club room.

Of course, there were many friends and family members on hand to congratulate the couple, and included among these present were their sons and daughters-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Don Wolf and daughter, Sara, of Latimer, Iowa, and Mr. and Mrs. Larry Wolf and sons, Jeff and Chad, of Everly, Iowa; and their son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. E. J. Strobel of Virginia Beach, Va.

Incidentally, we should also mention the fact that for Miss Kami Weideman, Saturday was a doubly special day — not only was it her grandparents' anniversary, it was also her birthday!

Following their return to Lincoln, the Weidemans did a bit of entertaining in their home. Stopping here on Tuesday for a two day stay were Mr. and Mrs. Strobel, who were on their way home to Virginia.

Also welcoming visitors into their home during the very recent past were Skyline Terrace residents Mr. and Mrs. Lester Matthews and children, Tracey, Ron and Sherry.

Enjoying a three-day stay with the Matthews last weekend were Mrs. Matthews' parents, Mr. and Mrs. Edwin Stratton, who make their home in Lawrence, Kan. Mr. and Mrs. Stratton returned home on Monday.

Arriving later today for a visit with the Matthews family will be Mrs. Matthews' brother and sister-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd Stratton of Emporia, Kan.

Nancy Shelley Is Shower Honoree

With only one week remaining before that long walk down the aisle, Miss Nancy Shelley of Denver, Colo., has been kept on the go with showers and parties.

One of those "for women only" affairs took place on Wednesday evening, Oct. 6. Hostess for the linen shower was Mrs. Lester Gibbons, Jr., and Mrs. Terry Culwell served as assisting hostess.

Miss Shelley, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James A. Shelley, will become the bride of Donald Kelly, son of Mr. and Mrs. Garnett A. Kelly of Norwood, Mo., on Saturday, Oct. 16. Our photographer was on hand to capture the expressions when the bride-to-be was

On the last heart West had to discard from ♠ A Q ♦ K 7 ♣ A K 7. He realized that a low club discard would subject him to an endplay, so he discarded the king of clubs, hoping partner had the queen.

South now led a low club and West, faithful to his plan of defense, played low, dummy winning with the jack. It was declarer's eighth trick. South now decided not to look a gift horse in the mouth, so he led a diamond to the ace to assure the contract.

But West stuck by his guns and dropped the king on the ace, this time hoping East had the queen of diamonds. West was determined not to be endplayed.

This didn't turn out well, either, because South cashed the diamond queen and exited with the queen of clubs. West, now down to three cards, had to win and concede a spade to the king, so he got endplayed after all.

The unusual outcome was that South at the second table made five notrump for 1,150 points, which was nine tricks and 3,150 points better than his namesake at the first table had done.

New Club Members Are Welcomed

The 1971-72 club year is well under way for most Lincoln women's organizations, and one particular group whose new season got off to an excellent start this week was the Thursday Morning Lecture Circle.

All members were invited to attend a coffee which took place Thursday morning at the home of Mrs. E. E. Reiffhaue. We imagine that those in attendance had an enjoyable time chatting about events that transpired during the club's summer recess; and, in addition, there were a number of brand new members to welcome into the organization.

Fashion Is His Game

Art Guckenheimer is a man who seems to take pure delight in his work. As Southwest Territorial Fashion Merchandise Manager for Sears, Roebuck and Co., he finds that his travels introduce him to many wonderful people all over the country. That does not seem so unusual, for Mr. Guckenheimer is a warm and personable man who makes friends easily.

Mr. Guckenheimer is in Lincoln for two weeks to help supervise in the opening of the new Sears store at Gateway Plaza, which will open officially on Oct. 20. His area is women's outer clothing, including coats, dresses, separates and sportswear.

His job, which is difficult to define in so many words, is to plan promotions, assist with the merchandizing of any of the 38 stores in his territory, to handle specific requests of any of the stores, to train division managers, and anything else that might come along where he can apply his knowledge and talents.

Mr. Guckenheimer is on the road most of the time, and now that his two children are grown, appreciates the fact that his wife is able to travel with him. "This makes it much easier and more pleasurable for us," he relates.

His territory includes his home state of Texas, where the Sears home office is located in Dallas; Colorado, Wyoming, New Mexico, Missouri, Louisiana and Nebraska. He has been with the Sears company for some 25 years.

He reports that while he is travelling, he spends anywhere from four to six hours on the floor of the store, visiting with customers about their needs and problems. "For instance," he reports, "we have made a special effort in this new store in Lincoln to care for the larger woman, the woman who is too often forgotten."

"The new Sears store is much larger than the downtown store, and therefore we have brought in a larger quantity of merchandise," Mr. Guckenheimer said. "The areas are departmentalized, and we will offer our customers not only the quality of clothing we had before, but a wider selection in all price ranges."

As for fashion, Mr. Guckenheimer sees women taking advantage of the more feminine look. "Many more women are wearing dresses now, although pants suits are still very popular. The blazer look is extremely good this year."

Hot pants, which are called 'shorty shorts' in the Sears stores, are primarily merchandized for the younger customer, according to Mr. Guckenheimer. They are, however, being shown under long skirts for the over 30 set.

Mr. Guckenheimer also talked about the hosiery department in the new store, which will be five times the size of the downtown department, and will include almost every kind of legwear, including the Sears' Cling-alon nylon.

PWP Plans Picnic, Hike

The members of Parents Without Partners and their families will have an outing at Waubansie Park in Iowa on Sunday, Oct. 10. The park is across the Missouri River from Nebraska City.

The day's agenda will include a hike through the beautiful wooded areas, games and a picnic lunch.

The discussion group topic for Thursday evening, Oct. 14, will be "Are You Ready to Re-Marry?" The adult meeting will begin at 7:45 o'clock, and will be held at the home of Mrs. Gretchen Goodyear, 4335 F St.

Abby:

he'll get what he deserves

by Abigail VanBuren

DEAR ABBY: Five months ago I split up with a man who had been living with me for over a year. I paid the rent and groceries and practically supported him. He ran up tremendous bills and took money from my purse. He wrote bad checks which I made good. In general, I acted like a fool and let him run me $10,000 into debt before I realized I had had enough.

I asked him to leave, and then discovered he had taken my credit card, and charged over $500 before he returned it. Now all my savings are gone and I had to take an extra job to pay off the bills he stuck me with. As I am still indebted to this credit card company they revoked my card and threatened legal action against me, but agreed to drop it if I will sign an affidavit of forgery against this man. I loved him for years and hate to do it. His salary is already attached and others are standing in line to sue him.

If I sign the affidavit it would cost him his job and he'd go to prison. I know he deserves it, but I'm sorry for him. What would you do?

OLDER, BUT WISER
DEAR OLDER: If "others" are standing in line, he will get what he deserves whether you sign the affidavit or not. So if you're sorry for him, let "George" do it.

DEAR ABBY: While going thru the receiving line at a wedding I recently attended, I introduced myself to the mother of the bride because I had never met her before. Then I said, "Congratulations."

She burst into laughter, which attracted the attention of others around us, and loudly exclaimed, "Don't congratulate ME! I've been married for 23 years. Tell that to the newlyweds." I was very much embarrassed, but said nothing.

Abby, I have always thought it was proper to congratulate the families of the bride and groom. Was I wrong?

ROCHESTER, MICHIGAN
DEAR ROCH: You were right. One offers congratulations to the bridegroom, best wishes to the bride. And prayers for the kinfolk.

Murtaugh Refuses To Divulge Pirate Starting Lineup

BALTIMORE (AP) — Baltimore Manager Danny Murtaugh, determined to wait for one of his "feelings," refused Friday to divulge his starting lineup for the World Series opener between the Pirates and the defending world champion Baltimore Orioles.

Murtaugh's insistence on maintaining his policy left major question marks after the names of two of the heroes of the Pirates' playoff victory over San Francisco—third baseman Rich Hebner and outfielder Al Oliver.

And their ultimate fate won't be known to an anticipated capacity crowd of 52,137 and a national television audience watching via NBC until just before the 1 p.m., EDT, starting time Saturday of the opener of the best-of-seven series.

Murtaugh did confirm that right-hander Doc Ellis would start for the Pirates against left-hander Dave McNally. And, he emphasized that his refusal to announce a starting lineup should in no way be taken as an attempt to get an edge on the Orioles.

"There's no reason to try and get an edge on this team," the cigar-chomping Murtaugh pointed out. "I pick out my lineup by the way I feel that morning. There's nothing scientific about it. Sometimes I plateau, sometimes I don't."

"But I wouldn't call it hunches—it's just feelings." Then, noting some smiles among his listeners, Murtaugh seemed to stiffen.

"Don't make fun of me because of how I make my lineup," he said sharply. "I know it's against Series custom but I'm sticking to my custom."

Following customs means that there will be no word on whether lefty hitters Hebner and Oliver or righty swingers Jose Pagan and Gene Clines will be on Murtaugh's lineup card when he submits it to the umpires Saturday.

But while maintaining his position on the starters, Murtaugh did name two other right-handers—Bob Johnson and Steve Blass—to pitch the second and third after Ellis opens. As for Ellis, who has been bothered by a sore elbow, Murtaugh said, "Ellis said he's all right—that's good enough for me."

Ellis said a lot more before the Pirates finished working out, including challenging the controversial label that has been slapped on him.

"I don't pop off," he insisted heatedly. "I see something I don't like I say it. If you can't say what you want in this so-called America I might as well go to Russia."

"People keep saying all I'm achieving with my arm. But I'm achieving with my mouth. But I don't believe that."

Ellis will get his opportunity to prove whether his arm is as sharp as his words against a Baltimore lineup that Orioles Manager Earl Weaver maintains has more home run power throughout than the Pirates.

"We can't match Willie Stargell," said Weaver, acknowledging the superiority of the majors' home run leader with 48, "but we've got seven guys that can long ball with them."

Weaver's statistical evidence showed the Orioles with seven players who have hit more than 10 homers to five for the Pirates.

Boog Powell, the big first baseman, skipped batting practice for the second straight day, the back of his right hand heavily bandaged. But Weaver said despite the torn muscle fibers Powell would be in the starting lineup.

"He's definitely playing," said Weaver. "He may have to come out, but he's starting."

If Powell has to come out, Weaver likely will bring Frank Robinson in from the outfield to play first.

Weaver's opening lineup has Robinson, Don Buford and Merv Rettenmund in the outfield, leaving Paul Blair on the bench and ready for action should some juggling have to be done to accommodate Powell's condition.

Blair led the Orioles in hitting during the 1970 World Series with a .474 average.

Despite Powell's questionable physical condition, Las Vegas oddsmakers have established the Orioles as 8-5 favorites to win their second straight series and their third in six years in a drive to satisfy their dynastic aspirations.

The Orioles also were established as 9-5 favorites to win the opener behind McNally, 21-5 during the regular season as compared to 19-9 for Ellis.

The Orioles, who defeated Cincinnati in five games last year, head into the Series with a winning streak that is a carbon copy of the one they took into the 1970 series—11 victories at the end of the regular season and three successive playoff victories.

They also will have three other 20-game winners at their disposal, second game starter Jim Palmer, third game nominee Mike Cuellar and Pat Dobson, who will start the Series in the bullpen but could be Weaver's fourth game choice.

The Pirates, meanwhile, refuse to accept the estimate that the Orioles are a superior team and point to the 1960 World Series, their last, when they defeated the New York Yankees in seven games.

Ellis is one of the Pirates who doesn't buy the opinion the Orioles are superior.

In his manner, he said frankly: "They're no better than us."

Jerry, Van Carry Vivid Memories

By HAL BROWN
Star Sports Editor

Columbia, Mo. —Nebraska quarterbacks Jerry Tagge and Van Brownson have vivid memories of their previous two meetings with the always-charging Missouri defense.

Ironically, the quarterback who will start Saturday afternoon's renewal of the Husker-Tiger series is the one whose memories of those past two games are least fond ones.

Jerry Tagge, who has led Nebraska to the top perch in the national polls this season with four victories, was a victim of the stiff Missouri pass rush here two years ago as the Huskers fell behind by 14-0 in the first half.

The Huskers were trailing by only 7-0 late in the first half when Missouri defensive end John Brown barged through the Husker blockers and caused Tagge to fumble at the NU 16.

The Tigers went in for the score and a 14-0 halftime lead and the Huskers never recovered.

But that was Nebraska's last loss, having won 22 and tied one since then.

A year ago in Lincoln, the Huskers and Tigers were struggling through a 7-7 defensive standoff for three quarters when Brownson replaced Tagge at the Husker controls.

Brownson guided the Huskers to a 21-7 victory with two scoring drives in the final quarter.

In each of those two years, the game was billed as an early decider, the Big Eight title. Such is not the case this time around.

Missouri is not considered a championship contender by most observers and their 1-3 non-conference record has done little to change that.

But Nebraska is not taking the game lightly with head coach Bob Devaney pointing out, "We haven't done anything at Missouri previously that should make us think things will be easy. They never have been at Missouri."

And the Tigers aren't exactly awed by the Huskers' 23-game unbeaten string nor by their No. 1 national ranking.

Missouri's junior center Scott Sodergren says, "I already know I'm gonna be higher than a kite. I feel great. It's never entered my mind that we're gonna lose."

But Missouri coach Al Onofrio, in his first year as head coach after 14 years as an assistant at Missouri, soberly knows the job ahead of his Tigers.

"This is the finest offensive and defensive Nebraska team since I've been here," he says. "They are an ideal type of team—well-balanced, and can do a lot of things."

One reason for the light regard in which many hold Missouri this season was last week's upset loss to Army by 22-6. But in that one, the Tigers rolled to 380 total offense yards, only to lose scoring opportunities time after time.

But for the season Missouri's offense ranks at the bottom of the Big Eight in rushing, total offense and scoring offense.

—INSURANCE TD HELPS— Husker Frosh Win With Luck At Helm

By HAL BROWN
Star Sports Editor

Columbia, Mo. — Nebraska's freshman football team, after squandering an 18-0 halftime lead to trail by 23-18 with nine minutes remaining, stormed back with two touchdowns to score a 32-23 Friday afternoon.

Trailing by 23-18 after a 28-yard field goal by the Tigers'

Steve Anderson, the Huskers, behind quarterback Terry Luck, drove 74 yards with the ensuing kickoff to regain the lead, then added an insurance touchdown in the final minute and a half.

Luck, who hit on 12 of 20 passes for 227 yards, started the winning drive with a 30-yard pass to fullback Tom Roud to put the ball at the Tiger 44. Moments later a 15-yard personal foul penalty on Missouri moved the ball to the 16.

Then with a third down at the 10-yard line, Luck, under a heavy rush from the Missouri defense, found tight end Brad Jenkins in the end zone for the go-ahead six points with 5:03 left.

To put the game out of reach of a Missouri field goal, NU freshman coach Jim Ross ordered his team to go for a two-point conversion.

Luck's pass to Greg Pilkington was good, but the Huskers were caught holding and had to try again from the 23-yard line.

This time Luck's toss found Tom Coccia in the end zone for the two points and the Huskers led by 26-23.

The Husker defense then responded to a Missouri challenge, stopping the Tigers on a fourth and two at the NU 38.

The insurance touchdown was set up when Missouri fumbled a Luck punt and Jerry Weid, another of the Husker products from Green Bay, Wis., recovered at the Tiger 22.

Pilkington booted 20 yards to the two and Luck kept for the final two yards to wrap up the scoring with 1:07 left.

Luck, a 6-3, 208-pounder from Fayetteville, N.C., who may battle David Humm for the starting signal-calling job on the Husker varsity next year, passed Nebraska to an 18-0 first half lead.

He hit Roud with a screen pass on a fourth and goal situation after the Huskers had been pushed back to the 27-yard line for a 6-0 lead with 9:48 left in the opening quarter.

Then with 2:08 left in the first half, Tony Davis burst through the Missouri line for a six-yard TD scamper and with only 59 seconds remaining in the first half, Luck connected with Roud on a 23-yard scoring strike.

That was the end of the Husker scoring until they had to come up with the winning drive after falling behind by 23-18.

The victory extended the Husker frosh winning streak to seven straight dating back to the 1969 season.

—SAPP LEADS DEFENSE— NWU Slate Clean, Huron Beaten, 28-7

By STEVE GILLISPIE
Star Sports Writer

Huron College may not soon forget Willie Sapp and his defensive team mates of Nebraska Wesleyan.

The Sapp-led defensive unit contained the Scalers' most of the night as NWU rolled to a 28-7 win Friday night at Magee Stadium. The victory boosted the Plainsmen to a 5-0 record while Huron is now 2-2-1.

Before the fourth quarter when NWU coach Harold Chaffee was playing mostly reserves, Sapp and his defensive friends had held the Scalers to one first down.

The Plainsmen's defense also scored two touchdowns besides stopping the Huron offense. NWU's Reed Stephenson intercepted a pass in the flat and went 16 yards for the game's initial score.

The PAT try failed and there was 6:06 left in the first quarter.

Dave McGrane completed a 34-yard touchdown pass to split end John McLaughlin for Wesleyan's second score with 48 seconds remaining in the first quarter.

The next score came in the third quarter with flanker Rick Grell on receiving end of a 37-yard touchdown pass from McGrane. Ross Stephenson added the point after and NWU led, 19-0, with 2:34 left.

Ross kicked a 43-yard field goal into the wind with 13:40 to go in the game for NWU.

Defensive back Earl Nannen returned a Scaler punt 57 yards with 4:24 left for the Plainsmen's last touchdown. Nannen had picked off a Huron pass just moments before and went 34 yards for a touchdown only to have the ball brought back on a clipping penalty.

Carmen DeFelice caught a 44-yard pass good for a touchdown with 8:54 left for Huron's score.

That "VIP" facility would have cost about $1.5 million.

The university has suffered numerous ticket headaches this fall, including problems brought about when several hundred students couldn't purchase season tickets.

"Over-the-fence" fans have also disturbed the regents.

In related action, the board approved a $400,000 contract with ABC for television broadcast of the Nebraska-Colorado game on Oct. 30.

Based on Big 8 conference agreements, the University of Nebraska-Lincoln and the University of Colorado will each receive $76,400 for the game. Other Big 8 school will get $38,200 each.

—ISLANDERS TOPPLE— Knights Blast GI In Ground Attack

Grand Island — Egbert Thompson and Mark Michel led a devastating ground attack that enabled Southeast to shake off a third quarter Grand Island threat and march to a 27-6 victory Friday.

Thompson contributed 163 yards rushing on 18 carries and the workhorse Michel added 110 on 24 jaunts as the Knights racked up 293 of their total 330 yards via the ground.

The game looked like a defensive battle until the swift Thompson waltzed 73 yards for the initial score with only 1:24 on the clock to provide Southeast with the first quarter edge.

Pirates' Ellis May Be Prophet

Baltimore (#) — Dock Ellis, Pittsburgh's starting pitcher in Saturday's opening game of the World Series, may be baseball's best prophet.

Ellis will be facing Baltimore's Dave McNally in the opener, confirming a prediction he gave the Oriole left-hander in spring training.

"He was using a whirlpool machine in our dressing room one day in camp," Ellis recalled.

"I asked him 'How do you win all those games?'" the Pirate ace continued.

"He said, 'Oh, I just hold them to three or four runs.'"

The strategy impressed Ellis. "I think I'll try that," Ellis told McNally. Then, as the Oriole pitcher was leaving the Pirate room, Ellis hollered after him, "I'll see you in the World Series."

And he will in Saturday's opener.

College Coverage Decline Eyed

By STEVEN LEVINE
Every fall since, say, 1963, the popular press has run "campus forecast" type pieces, written by this author and others. These pieces, as a rule, have consisted of a certain amount of uneducated guessing, ill-supported by a certain amount of dubious documentation, as to the political climate of American university communities for the coming academic year. The orientation of these efforts, as a rule, has been toward gauging the likelihood of "student disruptions," violence or the threat thereof always making for more interesting copy than substantive issues.

This year, I note the customary proliferation of these prediction pieces has failed to materialize. In fact, there has been a quite noticeable decline in media coverage of the student question, overall.

This decline may be attributed to several factors. The first and most obvious is the difficulty of doing good journalism on the subject. Campus reporting is a subtle business at best. It takes time and work to establish sources and gather up necessary data. About the only time it yields enough headline material to be worth the commitment necessary to do it is when it coincides with spectacular events of some kind, making large numbers of students highly visible in a short span of time. Thus, a building occupation or a sudden uprising in the consumption of illicit drugs justifies some man hours spent and a shot in the ever-shrinking news hole.

And last year students were singularly uncooperative in regard to the manufacture of un-complex, exciting news copy. There weren't any very memorable campus uprisings (probably won't be any this year either), and most of the life-style changes that transpired in the college community were unphotographable.

More importantly, perhaps, this seeming quietude put the quaint notion abroad in the land that things had cooled. Some comments to that effect by national opinion makers, and a willingness on the part of some media to accept that such was the case, contributed to a very real dissipation of interest in students and their activities; in young people, as a matter of fact. As America got sick of black people in 1963, so it got sick of young people in 1971. And if, as hoped, they all seemed to be just going away, fine.

Of course, neither young people nor black people are just going away. At the time, in 1969 and '70, when student leftists were enjoying the greatest amount of public concern, they numbered in the thousands and were working in a university environment that could in no way be shown to share their opinions. As polls of that time correctly illustrated, they were indeed a vocal minority.

Far More Radical
At this point, American college campuses are far more political and far more radical than they have ever been. Considering such barometers as the elective officers of student governments, the editorial policies of student papers, and the results of student referendum, a very radical profile emerges of student bodies at most large institutions. The White House Youth Conference last spring, and major student gatherings like the NSA Congress, have adopted unstintingly radical platforms. We shall shortly witness a fall anti-war indoctrination of unprecedented sophistication. Moreover, talking to students, as I do virtually all the time, one senses in them a commonality of belief and of interest completely unknown three years ago. There is no question but what the off-enumerated upheavals of this period have had a tremendous effect on the student population. I would go as far as to say that the proportions of 1968 are now reversed; that campuses are 40% lip-service leftist, 20% activist, 20% conservative and an astonishingly low 20% don't care.

Steven Levine

The reason, then, behind the quiescence is a tactical matter. There is considerable debate now as to what kind of role is most appropriate for leftist students in the changing American political environment. The feeling is that a lot of the old stuff, big demos, trashing, may have become routine, no longer carry the impact necessary for the proper dramatization of issues. Even if these things had remained effective, they do not reflect the more thoughtful attitude now manifest in radical circles; circles in which it is known far more clearly than it is in Washington that something big is happening in this country, and that now is a good time for some caution. A greater movement than merely a student movement may be underway, and for the moment there is some discouragement as to where students can now fit in.

By no means is nothing going on. Important meetings are being held. Serious positions are being outlined in the alternative press. A great amount of organizing, particularly in the area of voter registration, is being carried on. I suspect that come next fall those who hastened to pronounce the student consciousness straightened out will be most surprised.

Saddest Aspect

The saddest aspect of the lack of sensitivity to changing campus conditions that is so egregiously common at this point is the cynical manner in which it reaffirms the conclusions reached three years ago.

This nation still is unready to cope with issues in an adult, that is to say abstract, fashion. The only way to get issues aired is to create social dysfunction. It takes a Columbia, a Watts, a Kent, an Attica, to draw the reddened eye of a people crazed with sensation, bagridden by the discontinuous nature of their own lives, beyond the ability to look at the broader conditions. That the urban coalition finds no progress in the ghettos since the Kerner report is indicative of a desperately short attention span, characteristic of, a variety of schizophrenia.

The disappearance of those almost perennial campus forecasts is far more predictive than the pieces themselves were.

Mental Competency Hearing Is Ordered

By United Press International
The Nebraska Supreme Court Friday ordered the Sarpy County District Court to hold a hearing on whether Sam Virgilito was mentally com- petent to stand trial for manslaughter.

The action came in the reversal of a district court decision denying a hearing under the Nebraska Post Con- viction Act.

Virgilito, originally charged with first degree murder in connection with the death of Leo Marty Walsh Jr., was sentenced to five years in the state prison on an amended manslaughter charge.

The court's sentencing took place in September of 1970. Virgilito filed for relief alleging he was mentally incompetent to stand trial in the first place.

The high court noted a psychiatric examination re- vealed he was a "chronic mental defective and a chronic schizophrenic." The examina- tion took place prior to the trial.

In June, he was committed to the Lincoln Regional Center on a court order. Then in August he was released with a "certificate" saying he was "now competent" to stand trial in September, the court said.

When Virgilito filed under the post conviction act, the court said, the district court refused to hold a hearing to consider mental competency, and should have.

"It is entirely possible that the district court judge was aware of ample evidence to establish the defendant's competency to stand trial, but that evidence, if any, does not ap- pear in the record," the Supreme Court said.

In other decisions, the court: —Upheld the Douglas County District Court's denial of relief under the Nebraska Post Conviction Relief Act for Leroy Bullard. He was convicted of second degree murder.

—Upheld the ruling of the Nebraska Workmen's Compensation Court in a suit filed against the Industrial Builders, Inc., by Gordon Shotwell and appealed through the Scotts Bluff County District Court. He was awarded disability payments for the rest of his life for injuries suffered on the job as a surveyor's roddman for the firm.

—Reversed and returned to the Douglas County District Court for new trial the case of George Hayes. He was originally convicted of buying or receiving stolen goods.

—Upheld the Douglas Court District Court conviction of Keith Russ for burglary.

—Upheld the Lancaster County District Court conviction of Douglas Rhodes for writing bad checks.

—Upheld the Douglas County District Court's denial of post conviction relief for Edward Cruse.

Her husband's lawyer, Mrs. Mary Reardon Hooton, said there was nothing ex- traordinary about the situation. The law, she said, provides that "each parent is equally responsible for the support of their children."

National Drug Abuse Prevention Week is October 3-9.

And it's no cause for celebration. Not hardly.
But the alternative isn't another stern lecture on drug abuse.
Everyone is well aware of the problem and its insidious by-products.
So, what's there to do?
We have a suggestion.
Begin.
The President of the United States already has.
The new White House Special Action Office is at work right now developing and coordinating programs of research, rehabilitation and treat- ment, and preventive education.

We must pry open the rusted channels of communication and, ultimately, under- standing; to dig out the causes that motivate a human being toward drugs for a momentary escape from his existence.

But the effort will demand involvement. It needs the interaction of people working together. And not in the same old ways.
We have been provided with new tools, a positive direction and reachable goals.
It's a place to begin. Send a postcard now. You'll get back practical information that an- swers the question of "what's there to do?"
There are specific programs to involve groups; ideas for you to initiate on your own or within your family.
You have in your hands the opportunity to do something right and worthwhile.
No miracles. No easy solutions, because there aren't any.
But if enough of us get together and start to work on the beginning, we will find an answer to the enigma of drug abuse. @

Stock Prices Slip In Moderate Trade

New York (AP) — Investors took a cautious approach Friday to details of the second phase of President Nixon's economic program, and the stock market closed lower in moderate trading.

Analysts said there were still some uncertainties about what labor's response would be to Phase 2 and about how long government might exercise controls.

In addition, some analysts noted that the market had risen earlier in the week in anticipation of the President's speech Thursday night and that the speech itself did not contain surprises.

DID YOU KNOW THIS? IT'S A FACT:

Ladybugs do not die at the end of the season like so many other insects, but hibernate for the winter.

U.S. grain sorghum exports last year amounted to 144 million bushels, up 30% over 1969.

Poultry meat production in Argentina last year was about 160,000 metric tons, 20,000 tons above 1969.

The risk of mid-air collisions will be reduced during use of communications satellites for air traffic control.

WISHING WELL

by William J. Miller

Here is a practical little game that will give you a message every day. It is a numerical puzzle designed to spell out your fortune. Count the letters in your first name. If the number of letters is six or more, subtract 4. If the number is less than 6, add three. The result is your key number. Start at the upper left-hand corner of the rectangle and check every one of your key numbers left to right. Then read the message the letters under the checked figures give you.

$100 Million In Aid Gift To Minorities

New York (UPI) — Black, Puerto Rican, Mexican-American and American Indian students will benefit from a six-year $100 million Ford Foundation program announced Saturday.

McGeorge Bundy, foundation president, said the aid aimed at increasing minority opportunities in higher education is not so much a new departure for the foundation as it is an enlargement of earlier support.

Between 70 and 80% of the foundation's money for the improvement of American higher education over the next six years will be devoted to the program to benefit minorities.

Half of the money will go to a limited number of private, traditionally black colleges. The rest will be awarded to individual students for advanced study.

Between 1960 and 1971, the foundation awarded $37.2 million in grants to 67 colleges and universities founded for black Americans.

Expanding Opportunity
Bundy described the new program as "an effort to strengthen the foundation's commitment to the central problem of American society: the failure to achieve equality of opportunity for members of America's racial and cultural minorities."

During a news conference at foundation headquarters several black college presidents noted that increasingly the colleges founded for blacks are also enrolling white students.

As for the impact of Ford Foundation aid, Dr. Luther Foster, president of Tuskegee Institute in Alabama, said "it will give us some breathing room." He explained he meant that the schools will be able to do some planning in other than a crisis situation.

"It will be a shot in the arm," said Dr. Benjamin Payton, adding that his school, like most black schools, has a deficit. The size of the operating deficit in many of the schools has been decreasing in recent years. Payton is president of Benedict College in Columbia, S.C.

Initial Recipients
Benedict and Tuskegee are among four black colleges initially to reap benefits from the new program. The others are Fisk University in Nashville, Tenn., and Hampton Institute in Hampton, Va.

The decision to earmark some three-fourths of the foundation's annual higher education funds for minority support stems from a review conducted by Harold Howe II, former U.S. commissioner of education and now foundation vice president for education and research.

"This heightened commitment should in no way be interpreted as support of segregated education," Howe said. "These colleges are open to all students regardless of race."

Six Air Force Men Die in Copter Crash In South Dakota

Rapid City, S.D. (UPI) — A helicopter from Ellsworth Air Force Base crashed and burned Saturday at a Minuteman missile site about 35 miles east of Rapid City, killing six men and injuring the pilot.

The Air Force said the men were members of the 821st Security Police Squadron and were being flown from Ellsworth to the missile site to make a change in the security guard.

The dead men are: Airman Johnny R. Brock, 19, North Little Rock, Ark.; Sgt. Terry Lee Wright, 21, Memphis; Airman I.C. Larry Dean Hughes, 22, Dallas; Airman I.C. Bernard Nathaniel Blake, 22, Atlanta, Ga.; Sgt. David Ashton Cloe, 23, Richmond, Va., and Sgt. Glen Gordon Wilson, 22, Jackson, Miss.

The pilot was identified as Norman G. Schuessler.

The Air Force said it dispatched an investigating team to the crash site and a board was being convened to determine the cause of the crash.

Young Hunters Clinic

More than 500 persons, including about 200 participants, turned out Saturday at the Lincoln Izaak Walton League grounds for the Young Hunters Safety Clinic, sponsored by the Lincoln Sunday Journal and Star. Numerous other civic and governmental groups also helped conduct the day-long clinic, which was termed a success by chief administrator Larry Schenkel. See outdoor sports news on Page 6C.

Mao Tse-tung, chairman of the Chinese Communist party, shakes hands with visiting Emperor Haile Selassie (left) of Ethiopia. Mao's first public appearance since Aug. 7 dispelled rumors his illness had created a leadership crisis in Peking.

China Signs Trade Pact With Ethiopia

Hong Kong (UPI) — Communist China and Ethiopia Saturday signed an agreement on economic and technical cooperation and a trade pact, the New China News Agency (NCNA) reported.

Emperor Haile Selassie of Ethiopia, who is on a state visit in mainland China, said the agreements "have paved the way for a much greater cooperation between our two countries."

"What I have been able to accomplish in my talks with Chairman Mao Tse-tung and officials of the government of the People's Republic of China have given me great satisfaction," Selassie told a banquet after the signing. He met with Mao Friday in Mao's first public appearance in two months.

Selassie praised China for undertaking "a most daring experiment in social and economic construction." "China is in a position to help the developing countries of the third world by sharing her experience of development," Selassie said.

Labor Urged By Mansfield To Cooperate

Washington (UPI) — Senate Democratic leader Mike Mansfield urged organized labor Saturday to abandon its threats to boycott President Nixon's new pay board and to cooperate with his post-freeze plans to curb inflation.

"I think that instead of criticizing — rhetoric comes cheap — we ought to wait and see what the final details are," Mansfield told newsmen. "I think they (labor) should be on the wage board. . . . The President is willing to listen to suggestions by labor, just as he would from a member of Congress or the business community."

AFL-CIO sources said there were no scheduled meetings with administration officials in advance of a special meeting of the labor federation's executive committee Tuesday morning to examine "serious questions" about Nixon's Phase 2 program for the economy.

President Leonard Woodcock of the United Auto Workers has said he will refuse to serve on the yet-unnamed pay board to set guidelines for post-freeze wage increases if it is not autonomous and free of government intervention.

It was believed that the President will await the outcome of the AFL-CIO leadership meeting Tuesday, which Woodcock and Teamsters President Frank E. Fitzsimmons are to attend, before announcing his appointments to the boards.

It was learned Saturday that William G. Caples, president of Kenyon College in Gambier, Ohio, and a former vice president for industrial relations of the Inland Steel Co., had been asked by the President to be one of the five public members of the pay board. Caples has accepted the invitation.

Nixon Considers West Virginia's Sen. Byrd for High Court Post

Washington (AP) — Sen. Robert C. Byrd of West Virginia, assistant Democratic Senate leader, is being considered by the White House for nomination to the Supreme Court, a high administration source said Saturday.

"His name is at the White House and at the Justice Dept.," the official told a reporter. "He's one of a number being considered."

There are two vacancies on the high court and so far no names have emerged as likely Nixon favorites since Rep. Richard H. Poff, R-Va., took his name out of consideration a week ago. However, some published reports Saturday said Byrd is definitely the President's choice for one of the two spots.

The administration source called those reports "way, way too strong."

He said others are also being considered, including some women.

Reached at Morgantown, W.Va., Byrd said he would have "absolutely, no comment" on reports he is being considered.

Byrd, 53, is a conservative who often sides with the administration and against the majority of Democrats in Senate battles.

Supported by Haynsworth, Carswell, He voted for President Nixon's previous choices for the court, who were defeated in their bid for confirmation by the Senate: Clement Haynsworth and G. Harrold Carswell.

Byrd is in the first of his third six-year Senate term. He won reelection last year with 78% of the West Virginia vote.

Byrd, who was graduated from the American University Law School in 1963 while serving in the Senate, is a member of the Senate Judiciary Committee. That panel must approve any presidential nomination to the Supreme Court before the full Senate acts on it.

Former Marshal Makes Charges 'Sky Marshals Easy to Spot, Often Bumped'

Baltimore, Md. (AP) — A former sky marshal who quit the anti-hijack program says the marshals are easily spotted by passengers and occasionally bumped by airlines in favor of paying customers.

Hugh M. Vandervoort, 27, said the program was "a real disappointment . . . boring and low priority."

In an interview with the Baltimore Sun, Vandervoort, claimed the potential deterrent factor of the program is severely hampered by the ease with which the officers can be distinguished from ordinary passengers.

Flights Not Identified

"It's obvious to anybody with any brains at all who we are," Vandervoort said. "We sit next to the stairwell, one on each side. We never drink. And we are treated with obvious deference by the stewards and other airlines personnel."

Direct Liaison Between FBI, CIA Broken

By ROBERT M. SMITH
(c) New York Times

Washington — The Federal Bureau of Investigation broke off direct liaison with the Central Intelligence Agency a year and a half ago because the CIA would not tell J. Edgar Hoover who had leaked information from his organization, according to authoritative sources.

As a result, high officials of the intelligence community are concerned about the government's ability to control foreign espionage in this country. Their apprehension has been

The stairwell reference was to 747 jumbo jets, but he refused to identify the flights to which marshals usually are assigned. "I don't think that would be fair to the program," he said.

Vandervoort's superior at Friendship International Airport near Baltimore, John Buik, refused to comment.

Gen. Benjamin O. Davis, assistant U.S. secretary of transportation, told the Sun that marshals have prevented "a large number of possible hijackers" from boarding airplanes and credited the program for a 70% drop in hijacking attempts during 1971.

Davis declined to cite specific increased by the recent British discovery of extensive Soviet operations.

To offset some of the danger, FBI and CIA officials have held private meetings, unknown to Hoover, at which they exchanged information. Authorized communication is limited to mail, telephone and infrequent special meetings, and men in both agencies have found this interchange inadequate.

One member of the intelligence community explained that personal contact is necessary for a variety of reasons. The cases are sometimes complex and sometimes split between the two agencies, speed is often essential to successful action, con-

Rogers: Ousting Taiwan Could Pique Congress

Washington (UPI) — Secretary of State William Rogers has cautioned foreign ministers that the United States might be forced by Congress to reduce its financial contributions to the United Nations if Nationalist China is expelled, State Dept. officials acknowledged Saturday.

The officials emphasized Rogers, in private conversations in the past week at New York, did not raise the possibility as a threat but rather as a congressional problem facing the administration.

General Assembly debate starts Oct. 18 on the China issue. Rogers is lobbying for votes for an American resolution proposing to seat Communist China and give it a seat on the Security Council, while retaining General Assembly membership for the Nationalist regime on Taiwan.

Rogers was reported to have called attention to a growing feeling in Congress that U.S. moral and financial support for the United Nations should be "re-examined" if the Nationalists are expelled, as provided in a resolution sponsored by Communist Albania.

Very Close Vote Predicted
State Dept. officials said they expected the China vote to be "very, very, very close."

As many as 30 of the United Nations' 131 member nations have yet to decide how they will vote, officials said.

Rogers has met 69 foreign ministers attending the General Assembly and plans to confer with about 20 more next week.

Among other arguments Rogers is advancing in behalf of Nationalist China are these:

—If the Nationalists are expelled, it would create "an uncomfortable precedent" for expulsion of other member states.

—If Taiwan is expelled, such action might encourage Communist China to move against Taiwan by the use of force.

—It is a "false argument" to vote against the U.S. resolution merely to please the Peking government. The United States, after all, is seeking to improve its relations with mainland China.

Department officials deny that Rogers has been using strong-arm tactics and threats of reduced U.S. aid for the United Nations in talks with many of the foreign ministers from small countries.

Chevy Defect Warning to Be Issued

(c) New York Times

Detroit — The federal government is about to issue a warning to millions of owners of Chevrolet automobiles — a warning about a potential defect that could throw their cars out of control.

General Motors, maker of the cars, is refusing to answer any questions about the problem and has not called the cars back for repairs, but GM is apparently paying for repairs and damages caused by the defect — if it occurs — in what appears to be a tacit admission something is wrong.

The cars involved are apparently full-sized Chevrolet cars for the 1966 through 1969 model years and Chevrolet Camaros from 1967 through 1969. This includes 4.9 million of the big cars and 700,000 Camaros, or 5.6 million altogether. GM refuses to say specifically if these are the model years involved.

The trouble is two defective motor mounts made of a rubberized plastic and steel. They are used as a filling between the engine and the car body tying the engine to the car frame and holding down vibration.

If they break, the engine is no longer completely connected to the car. The engine does not fall to the ground, but there may be wild vibrations and shaking, the car may shoot forward and run out of control, and the engine could push forward, breaking brake lines or damaging the radiator and fan.

Douglas W. Toms, who heads the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration, said in a telephone interview that within days his agency will issue a consumer warning bulletin on the engine mount problem. He said he already has personally approved the bulletin.

The government has no power to make an auto company recall its cars. But the federal agency can issue a consumer warning and it may also order auto companies to admit to a defect. The companies may go to court to resist having to make such an admission.

If General Motors had to recall these cars, it would be the largest in history and the cost would be enormous. Even if only half the cars built came in for repairs and repair and overhead costs held down to $20 or so each, the cost would run to $60 million.

USAF Undercharged Comsat By $6 Million for Launches

By VERN HAUGLAND
Washington (AP) — Comptroller General Elmer B. Staats soon will inform Congress that the Air Force has undercharged the Communications Satellite Corp. (Comsat) by more than $6 million for satellite launches, informed sources said Saturday.

The formal report to be submitted by Staats says improperly low rates for Comsat were established under agreements between the National Aeronautics and Space Administration and the Defense Dept.

Staats is recommending that for future launches, Comsat be billed on a full-user-charge basis in spite of State Dept. arguments that raising the Comsat charges substantially would be harmful to U.S. foreign-policy interests.

The General Accounting Office (GAO) started an investigation in December 1969 at the request of Sen. Mike Gravel, D-Alaska.

On the basis of the study, Gravel has estimated that recommended changes in billing techniques may save U.S.

taxpayers as much as $34 million on future launches.

New Contract Sought
Gravel has told friends the Air Force and NASA will start negotiating a new launch-support contract Oct. 18.

The Alaskan senator estimated that the new contract would save $9 million alone on the next 10 launches of Atlas-Centaur rockets.

Early Bird Launch

The GAO report shows that NASA billed Comsat only $23,557 for the April 1965 launch of Early Bird, the first satellite in the Intelsat series, although the Air Force computed the costs at more than $922,000. The justification was that this was a research launch, and billing should include only out-of-pocket costs. But the GAO notes that Early Bird was used commercially.

Through the first five Comsat launches, before the end of 1967, Comsat had been billed

Lunokhod 1 Konks Out

Moscow (UPI) — The Soviet Union Saturday announced the death of Lunokhod 1, a robot mooncar that the Russians said proved the practicality of sending a machine to do a man's work.

Lunokhod's atomic heater wore out and froze solid on last Monday, the middle of a long lunar night. It had functioned flawlessly for 10 months and 17 days, far longer than its makers dreamed possible.

Tass said the dead robot, which resembles a covered soup kettle with wheels, will remain permanently parked on a flat area of the Sea of Rains. Fixed to its top is a French-made laser reflector that will be used for years to come as an aid in making super-accurate measurements of the distance between moon and earth.

Lunokhod 1 touched down on the moon Nov. 17 on board the Luna 17 mother ship. Controllers on earth using television cameras to "watch the road" drove it down a ramp onto the lunar surface under power of stored solar energy.

Since then it has run up an impressive list of statistics: it drove 6.5 miles, mapped 95,000 square yards of lunar surface, took 200 360-degree panoramic photographs, snapped 20,000 other pictures, tested the density of the soil at 500 points, and did chemical soil analysis at 25 points.

Its accomplishment was a triumph for the Soviet unmanned space program, an area that has received priority attention since it became obvious the Russians would lose the race to put the first man on the moon.

Monster Seen?

London (AP) — Sixteen sightings of Scotland's fabled Loch Ness monster have been reported in 1971, an investigating team stated. It said most of those who claimed they saw the monster had been "disbelievers" in its existence.

$956,829 although Air Force computed costs were $3,908,822, the report shows.

The GAO estimates also that during the fiscal year ending June 30, 1969, launch costs of $3.1 million were properly chargeable under a full-user charges concept, but were not charged to Comsat.

"Although similar costs were incurred but not identified by the Air Force for Comsat launches prior to fiscal year 1969, we did not attempt to compute these amounts," the report says.

Blast Kills Woman

Belfast, Northern Ireland (AP) — A terrorist bomb wrecked a tavern on the border between Roman Catholic and Protestant strongholds in Belfast Saturday night. First reports said one person was killed and 10 injured.

The Royal Ulster Constabulary said a woman died in the blast that devastated McAuley's Pub near the Catholic Lower Falls area.

Earlier detectives at a military roadblock were reported to have captured a top IRA leader.

An informed source said Jim Sullivan, 39, Belfast leader of the IRA's leftist "official" wing, was caught with two associates when the wig fell off and destroyed his disguise.

Hartke Calls For FAA Probe

Washington (UPI) — Sen. Vance Hartke, D-Ind., contends the Federal Aviation Administration (FAA) has a "pitiful lack of concern for aviation safety."

Hartke has called for a full-scale investigation of the agency. He said for almost two years the FAA has known its procedures for determining pilot competency and for regulating aircraft safety are totally inadequate. He cited last year's crash of a plane chartered by Wichita State University which killed 31 persons, many of them members of the football team.

'Safest Vehicle' Won't Hit Another Like It

Dallas, Tex. (AP) — Neiman-Marcus, the specialty store, offers for the Christmas-shopping season a survival machine for commuter freeways. Cost! A mere $845,300.

The store calls it the Total Transportational Security Environment. It really is more like a tank equipped with every safety device known to man and some new ones.

The well-heeled executive will ride in a luxurious stateroom built inside the futuristic vehicle, while his chauffeur, seated high above in a cockpit covered by a see-through bubble, maneuvers him through the traffic.

Special features include a closed circuit scanning camera, infrared and telephoto periscopes, radar, dual-exhaust antipollution device and highway signal markers.

The signals read "too close" and "stop." There also are loudspeakers to warn off motorists who dare to get too close, plus numerous bumpers.

Neiman-Marcus assures that "only one traffic tank will be built to insure it not meeting one of its own kind."

If a traffic tank is not your line, the Neiman-Marcus Christmas Book is crammed with other ideas.

How about His and Her authenticated mummy cases from ancient Egypt, both approximately 2,000 years old and both vacant, for $16,000?

For those who want to turn back time there's the backward running clock for $75.

For those ahead of their time, there's a lunar watch, a $700 all-electric time piece engineered to reflect the passing of time on the moon.

And, since Christmas is for the kids as well, what about $495 for an inflatable 15-foot whale?

Last year's big item in the Christmas Book was an ark, completely stocked with 92 mammals, 10 reptiles, 26 birds, 14 freshwater fish and 36 insects. Apparently the $588,274 price tag was too much. Neiman-Marcus got nary a nibble.

Court Opens School Doors to Retarded

Philadelphia (UPI) — The door to a fuller life through public education has swung open for Pennsylvania's 100,000 retarded children.

Under a landmark federal court decree that is expected to break down barriers for retarded children in all states, the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania will begin free education and training for all retarded children, not just those who adopt comfortably to special programs now in operation. Many of the retarded children will attend regular classes with normal children.

The court decree was signed by state officials Friday following a suit brought by the Pennsylvania Association for Retarded Children (PARC) under the Fourteenth Amendment's due process clause.

Mrs. Patricia Clapp of Pittsburgh, PARC chairman, hailed the ruling by a three-judge federal panel here as "a landmark decision which we are informed will be the basis for other similar civil action elsewhere in the country."

Gov. Milton J. Shapp said the decision will "end the warehousing of the mentally retarded in institutions."

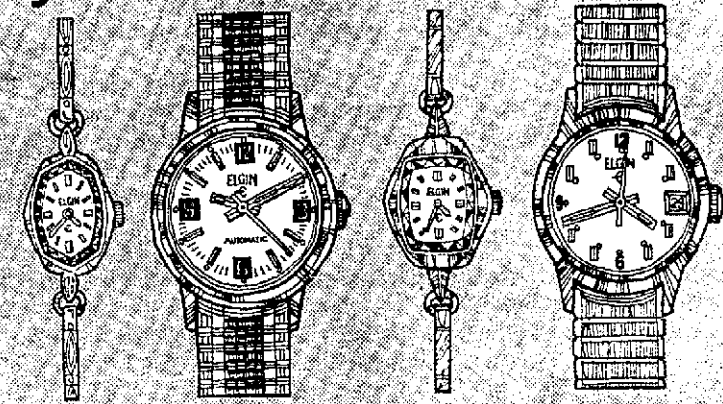

The governor said that under the old system of education for the retarded in special schools, 30% of the state's retarded children were living idle lives, receiving no education or training.

The old system allowed local school districts to decide which retarded children were educable and to exclude those deemed unfit.

Under the court-ordered system, the State Education

Dept. is required to plan an individualized program for each child after identifying and evaluating the retarded within the next 90 days. Parents will have the right to appeal the state's decision on a program for their child.

Big Heroin Cache Seized in Paris

Paris (UPI) — Police seized 233 pounds of pure heroin destined for the United States illegal drug market and arrested five persons, including one in New York, a police spokesman reported Saturday.

It was the largest such haul ever made in France.

The spokesman said 40 narcotics detectives from the Paris and national police trailed suspected drug traffickers for 10 months before arresting Andre Labay, a part-time film producer, at his home in suburban Mearly-le-Roi Wednesday. He said the heroin, worth millions in the United States, was found inside five suitcases inside Labay's rented car.

The seizure and arrests were linked to the 187-pound heroin cache found two weeks ago in an automobile shipped aboard the Italian liner Raffaello to New York, one of the largest ever uncovered in that city.

Attica Death Toll Reaches 43

Rochester, N.Y. (AP) — The death toll from the Attica prison riot rose to 43 Saturday with the death of a guard who had been held hostage and was found wounded after police regained control of the prison.

Correction Officer Harrison W. Whalen, 37, of Alexander died in Strong Memorial Hospital here.

Whalen had been hospitalized in serious condition with gunshot wounds immediately after the Sept. 13 retaking of the prison from rebellious inmates. The Monroe County medical examiner's office said an autopsy would be performed but not before Sunday.

Whalen's death increased to 11 the number of guards or civilian employees killed during the riot and assault. The prisoner death toll is 32.

Freedom of the Air Waves

A welcome breath of fresh air is wafting into the dank thinking that for too long has encouraged government regulation of the air waves.

This comes with the appeal by President Nixon's director of telecommunications policy, Clay T. Whitehead, for a sweeping revision of the laws regulating radio and television.

Whitehead would materially ease federal authority over programming and eventually would remove radio from regulation altogether.

Certainly this is a step in the right direction. The only question is whether it would go far enough, fast enough.

Because of a limited availability of channels for transmission via the air waves, it is necessary that some regulation be made of those using the various frequencies. The alternative would be chaos.

But this mechanical regulation should be possible without regulation of content; and it is in directing content of what is presented on the air waves that the federal regulators ought to butt out.

In the final analysis, the public is the best monitor of the quality of material presented on television or radio and the turn of a dial is the best enforcer. If the public doesn't like what is presented and tunes out, advertisers won't provide the wherewithal to stay on the air and flagrant abuse will be taken care of in its own good time.

Thus the public — the listeners and the viewers — should determine whether the broadcaster is providing good taste, fair play, public service and the other criteria that the Federal Communications Commission presently tries to supervise.

It is time for government to recognize that the First Amendment to the constitution, the one guaranteeing free speech and free press, extends to the modern electronic media fully as forcefully as to the traditional print media.

Mr. Nixon's man seems to be acknowledging that reality.

The Way to Prison Reform

There will be widespread agreement with State Sen. Ernest Chambers that improvement is needed in Nebraska's penal system — just as such improvement, it might be added, is needed nationwide.

Chambers' latest public outcry on this need came as he conducted a large group of his Omaha constituents on a tour of the penitentiary in Lincoln.

What Chambers seems to ignore completely, however, is that Nebraska right now is witnessing some intense activity in official quarters directed at the very end with which the Omaha senator is so concerned.

The warden of the penitentiary, Charles Wolff, is carrying out some overdue renovation of the physical facilities at the same time he is stepping up the emphasis on getting prisoners into gainful activity outside the walls.

The Ideal Campaign

Washington — John Mitchell, attorney general and chief political strategist to President Nixon, having drawn up the chief political strategy for the presidential campaign of 1972 and sent it ahead to his chief, reported to the White House the other day to see how the chief liked it.

"John," he said, "you've done it again, but—"

"Thank you, Mr. President."

"There is just one thing, John, I'm not quite sure I understand it."

Mitchell's merry eyes twinkled. "Well, Mr. President," he said, "I think it's fairly easy. We're going to hit them, and hit them again, and then hit them again and again."

"You hit them for letting the war drag on for four bloody years while our prisoners languish in North Vietnam. You hit them with charges that their imagination has failed, that they have no ideas. And then, Mr. President, you tell the voters that you know how to stop the war in Vietnam, and have a plan for ending it."

"John, if I say that, they're going to ask me what the plan is."

"Of course, they are, Mr. President. And you are going to say, 'I can't tell you what the plan is until I've been reelected.'"

"I see. Now what is this about bureaucrats, John?"

"You're going to hit them with charges that they've created a vast, expensive, parasitic bureaucracy to direct a socialistic economic policy of state controls which . . ."

"John, would you move ahead now? What is this about selling out the 14½ million Chinese?"

That takes you into China policy, Mr. President. You make a series of hard-hitting speeches charging that a reckless policy of flirtation with the atheistic Communists of mainland China constitutes a sellout of the 14½ million Chinese on Taiwan."

"I see, John. And the next thing you have here says 'soft on communism.' What's that mean, John?"

"You're going to accuse them of softness on communism, Mr. President, just like the old days. You're going to hit them for going to Red Communist Rumania and for dancing in the streets with the Red Rumanian boss."

John. Just a minute, John. I want to say something. This would have been a brilliant campaign for me four years ago, but something has happened in the meantime, John."

"Frankly, Mr. President, that had occurred to me. That the ideal campaign would be one in which we ran against ourselves, I mean. And why not, Mr. President, when you get right down to it? Look how easily General Thieu was reelected by the simple expedient of running against himself."

"This is not Southeast Asia, John."

The two men sat silently for a long while, and finally Mitchell said, "Are you positive about that?"

Learning Improves Society

It would be interesting to know the observations of all those students who were a part of the audience for the four-day Time Out Conference on Human Sexuality held last week on the Lincoln campus of the University of Nebraska. Reading news reports on some of the speakers, many parents may be concerned that their children were exposed to such ideas.

But by the time children reach the university, what their parents need is faith — faith that a good enough job of child-rearing has been done to provide a balanced individual mentally. If so, few if any minds or habits were changed as a result of the conference.

The conference aimed to inform students in an important area of life, not to sell them on anything. And in the learning process, what happens to young people?

A recent Carnegie Commission on Higher Education answered the question last week. In a foreword to the report, Commission Chairman Dr. Clark Kerr said that college graduates tend to be:

1. More highly paid and less subject to unemployment.
2. More satisfied with their jobs.
3. More thoughtful and deliberate in their consumer expenditures.
4. More likely to vote and to participate generally in community activities.
5. More "liberal" and tolerant in their attitudes toward and relations with other individuals.
6. More informed about community, national and world affairs.

Those are things that parents of college students should be thinking about today. Any college campus worth its name contains endless diversity.

There are good instructors and some not so good. There are good students and some not so good. There are universally accepted subject matters and there are highly controversial subject matters.

There are as many different personalities, philosophies and life styles on a campus as there are students. What a student is not exposed to in one way, he will run into in another way.

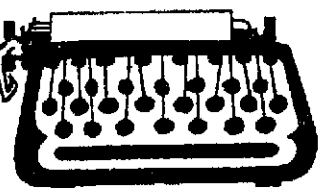

It is virtually impossible to attempt to shelter a student today from anything, including the full range of sex information, drugs, alcohol, etc. This isn't an indictment of campus life; it merely confirms the fact that education involves all of life, just as does any other pursuit.

The beauty of education, however, is that it tries to put all subjects of life into proper perspective and to deal with them factually. And how better could it ever succeed than it does in the conclusions laid down by Dr. Kerr about the college student?

If a parent were to write his own aspirations for his children, he could do no better than the ends that Dr. Kerr attributes to the educational process. While there are exceptions to all things, of course, it behooves parents to look at the end product when considering such things as the Time Out Conference.

Higher education couldn't have much more going for it than the young people it consistently turns out for society. It can do that, too, only in an atmosphere of freedom, not under the yoke of endless restrictions and prohibitions.

De-escalate the War On Mickey Mouse

Provocative Topic in News

By COL. WILLIAM C. MOORE

Written for United Press International

Washington (UPI) — There is a frantic effort by the armed forces to make life easier, more convenient, less frustrating for soldiers, sailors, and airmen. Only the Marines are holding to a stern line.

This search and destroy operation is aimed at so-called irritants — "Mickey Mouse" as they are known. The original reason for some of these practices undoubtedly has long since ceased to exist. These irritants should be eliminated. But the armed forces must be careful not to eliminate practices which although sometimes irritating nevertheless still fill legitimate needs. Barracks inspections, for example, shouldn't be eliminated if the result is dirty rooms, sloppy living, or irregular attention to cleanliness.

Shake down inspections shouldn't be eliminated if it means possession of illegal drugs, stolen goods, shortfalls in personal equipment, unpreparedness for moving out of barracks and into the field.

The rules, regulations, and daily rituals in the armed forces were developed over hundreds of years. They were not intended simply to irritate. All had one purpose: to increase the effectiveness of the armed forces — to improve them as tough, strict, durable fighting machines.

Take two examples — hair and reveille. Both have been in the forefront in the war on Mickey Mouse.

Short hair became the order of the day in the armed forces primarily for medical and safety reasons. Any sailor knows that long hair and beards don't mix with flash fires. Any soldier who fought during World War I knows that long hair becomes the breeding ground for vermin — lice, cooties, and the like. These, in turn, bring typhus. As a consequence, short hair — shaved heads actually — became the rule during World War I.

This rule has now been relaxed. Only a small per cent of military men ever see combat and the medical profession has made great strides in treating wounds. Nevertheless, even today a soldier, sailor, or airman would serve himself well if his hair is crew-cut when he goes into combat.

Reveille Succumbs

Reveille is another tradition which has succumbed to the war on Mickey Mouse. At reveille, three things were accomplished:

—Soldiers honored the flag as it was raised each morning.

—Soldiers participated in calisthenics thereby promoting better health and increasing their physical well being and stamina.

—Soldiers were inspected to ascertain that each man was fit for duty.

Perhaps honoring the flag is no longer needed to stimulate patriotism, elan, honor, and other ennobling emotions. It therefore can go or, at best, become a personal rite.

Perhaps the idea of being physically stronger, man for man, than the enemy is no longer necessary in this day of machines and nuclear weapons. Calisthenics, therefore, can go — or be done at some other time during the day.

Perhaps the first sergeant's duty to determine that his men are fit for work can go too. But already incidents have occurred which indicate otherwise.

A recent incident illustrates why. One base had forgone reveille as an irritant, but did not require a type of work formation or some other alternative. The driver of a truck reported to work directly from an all-night party and shortly after leaving the motor pool had a serious accident.

The incident would never have happened under the old system. Expensive equipment would not have been damaged. The airman would not be in serious disciplinary trouble, as he now is.

The armed forces, therefore, must be selective. They should not in their race to permissiveness willily nilly remove irritants which serve useful purposes.

The drive to make the armed forces less monolithic received its initial impetus shortly after World War II when the Doolittle board looked into ways to remold the services to look and act more like civilian society.

A career military man, now vice commander of the Air Force's Headquarters Command in Washington, thinks the new, relaxed life of the armed forces has gone too far. He calls for keeping some irritants in the treatment of servicemen.

Fortunately by the time the Korean war started, the strict disciplinary standards of the military services had not been altered appreciably by the permissive philosophy of the Doolittle board. Some contend that the susceptibility of U.S. POWs to brainwashing was symptomatic of a lessening in the stern code that had governed prior to the Doolittle board.

Nevertheless, the military in 1965 was praised as the best fighting force the United States ever put in the field. Since that time, the dam has broken, the image has faded, the praise has turned to scorn or, worse yet, ridicule. Look at what is happening:

—Discipline and its companion obedience are less respected by Americans than at any time in this century and possibly in the history of the United States.

—Morale has sagged noticeably, particularly among loyal, silent professionals who strive to hold things together and who agonize about whether or not the military will be incapable of protecting the nation if the test ever comes.

—Barracks theft and petty crimes have become widespread.

—Drug addiction, while not pandemic, is prevalent to an alarming degree.

—Racial strife occasionally raises its ugly head, diverting energy which could better be expended on military tasks.

—Anti-war protesters within the military itself are tolerated, even pampered, although their philosophy — loudly proclaimed — borders on treason.

—Lazily — and this is a soldier's gravest crime — incidents of units refusing to fight have occurred in Vietnam perhaps more frequently than ever before.

Aberrant or Noble?

Malingered desertion and disobedience have been problems in the military since its beginning. But these aberrations have always been recognized for the disgrace they are. Today, they are viewed by the press, TV commentators, and some politicians as something noble.

The war in Vietnam has given rise to vast doubts and has presented the military with problems difficult to cope with. These are being tackled by many dedicated, silent professionals who doggedly hang on, trying to keep the ship afloat. However, theirs is an agonizing task, often inviting ridicule and censure from the public, the press and even politicians who see more mileage in catering to the vast horde of civilian-oriented draftees.

In such an atmosphere even the "hard but fair guys" are becoming disillusioned. They see little to support their hope that somehow,

Nebraska's Fourth Estate

The University of Nebraska took center stage last week with Nebraska's editorial writers and, naturally enough, the Time-Out Conference on Human Sexuality received top billing.

The Norfolk Daily News took exception to the use of student fees to sponsor such a conference. "The campus is rightfully a place for a wide range of thought," the paper agrees. "But those who wish these extra conferences, lecturers and, occasionally, entertainers should pay for them directly, through admissions."

"Especially is this true if the Board of Regents and the school's administrators are not to have final veto authority over what is presented."

The Holdrege Citizen and Grand Island Independent both noted the probable backlash and aftermath resulting from the sexuality conference, including the impetus it will give to former State Sen. Clifton Batchelder's campaign for a regents seat.

"We doubt that the administration and faculty are particularly pleased with the student project, but the students are willing to risk the displeasure of the taxpayers and the state

Wilderness?

Lincoln — Action Line (Sunday Journal and Star, Sept. 20) quoted Herb Cords, Lincoln park superintendent, as saying an architect is designing the Wilderness Park south of Lincoln and that work such as mowing and weeding continues there.

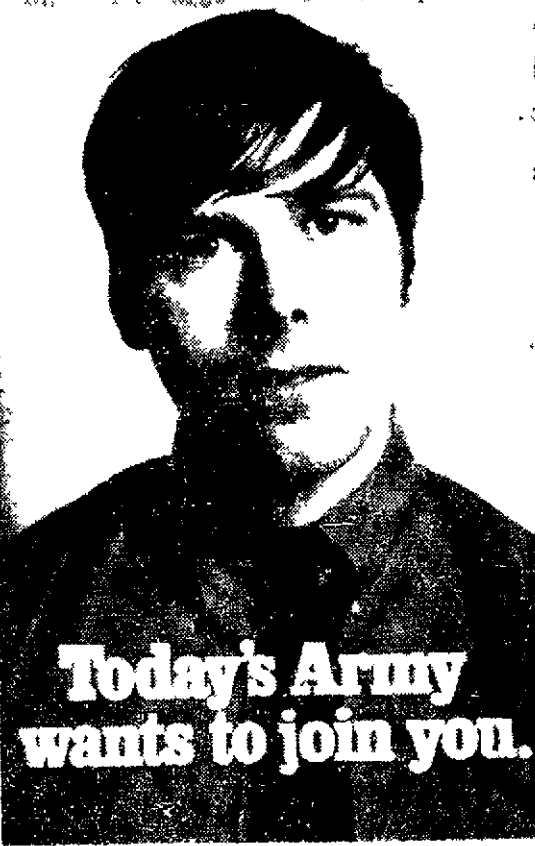

Wilderness Park? Architect? Weeding? Tell me it's a bad joke, a mistake. You're talking about Pioneers Park, right? Not Wilderness Park. Or maybe Antelope Park?

somehow, the country, out of sympathy and understanding, will turn back to the traditional stern code of the soldier which has served the nation so well.

Recently, the commander-in-chief of the armed forces, President Nixon, called for a great revival of the "military ethic." He was speaking to the graduating cadets of West Point all of whom soon would assume a legal and personal responsibility for the safety and freedom of this nation.

There are men already in service who have borne the burdens of this responsibility for many years. They, too, are interested in a great revival of the "military ethic." They are willing to strive mightily to this end. But to succeed they will need sympathy and understanding from the public, from the media, and from the Congress which, by law, is charged to make the rules and regulations of the armed forces.

legislators as well as the regents to have their way," the Holdrege paper wrote.

"This may help the cause of ultra-conservative Clifton Batchelder. The students may be making a big issue out of something they will regret and which will backfire on them and the university."

"With every action there is an opposite and equal reaction," the Independent noted.

It called the conference on sexuality "one result of student apathy which lets a group of activists gain control of an organization and put together activities which a majority of students probably do not support."

But the Grand Island paper's editorial writers also recalled Batchelder's previous criticism of the university, adding, "He might just ride this issue to a seat on the board, too, because quite obviously much of the public agrees with him."

The Sidney Telegraph called the conference organizers "the irresponsible ones who are dedicated to tearing down a fine institution by taking advantage of the overly permissive society in which we live." But it also came out strongly against Batchelder's type of remedy.

"We hope Mr. Batchelder does not get elected to the Board of Regents," the Telegraph said. "He would not make a good member. However, his presence in the race will be helpful because he will call attention to a lot of nonsense now taking place at the university."

The Scottsbluff Star-Herald took equally vigorous exception to an editorial in the Daily Nebraskan, student newspaper at UNL, condoning use of marijuana and charging the university with unrealistic drug policies and programs.

"The reality of the situation," wrote the Scottsbluff paper, "is that any student who attends the university should have attained a high enough degree of mental development to enable him to determine what is right and what is wrong."

"If he becomes a habitual drug user, he does so in full knowledge that it is detrimental not only to his health, but his status at the university."

The editorial also derides the Daily Nebraskan editor's contention that the marijuana laws should be changed because so many students are violating them. "In actuality, the question becomes: 'When enough people break a law, shall we change it to make their acts legal?'"

"Perhaps we protest too much, but the university cannot afford to relax its drug rules or to adopt programs which might serve only to attract users and pushers to the campus. . . . Nebraskans should instead give unflinching support to a strict drug policy at the university, one which sends drug users packing."

Japanese Economy Withstands Pressure

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK

Kawasaki, Japan — The Mizue mill of the Nippon Kokan steel-producing company provides the answer why President Nixon's economic crackdown on Japan, disruptive though it is to the vital U.S.-Japanese relationship, is unlikely to significantly reduce this country's immense advantages over the United States in world trade.

This Mizue mill's modern equipment, all purchased during the 1960s, provides a shiny contrast to American steel mills. As at nearly all Japanese mills, Mizue's steel is produced by the modern oxydization method while most American producers still use the obsolete, inefficient open-hearth method. Following Japanese custom, steel sheets produced at Mizue are two hours by barge from the port of Yokohama and export shipment.

And then there are Mizue's 3,000 workers. We watched ingots poured and steel sheets rolled under orderly, highly disciplined working conditions seldom seen today in American plants. As the superintendent passed through the mill, workers greeted him with a military-style salute. Their salaries are half that paid by American steelmakers, and no labor dispute has interrupted work here for over 10 years.

The result: steel produced here can undersell poorer-quality, higher-priced American competition even with the Nixon 10% import surcharge. What's more, whatever its short-term benefits for the U.S., Nixon's new program cannot erase Japanese advantages in its more modern equipment and a labor force genuinely devoted to Nixon's Work Ethic.

Ignorant Views
U.S. hopes that the Nixon program will alter economic balance of power between the two nations are based on ludicrously ignorant views in high Washington places.

For instance, one top U.S. policymaker recently lectured the U.S. Embassy in Tokyo that Japanese prosperity is the product of cheap child labor (though Japan, in fact, bans such exploitation). Official Washington simplistically views the Japanese economic miracle as unfairly concocted of sweat-shop labor and high tariff walls.

Moreover, Washington officials, encouraged by Japanese government, exaggerated how much the Nixon program is squeezing Japan. Kakuei Tanaka, powerful minister of international trade and industry, told us the Nixon program will radically lower the expected 8% growth rate for the year to 6%.

Such laments partly reflect Japanese hopes that if they wait long enough, Uncle Sam might ease up more rapidly. Actually, top economists here dispute Tanaka's glum estimate and forecast a healthy 8% annual growth into the future.

Japanese businessmen predict Nixon's remedies will not cope with inflation at home or outpouring of dollars abroad.

Investment Shifting

For a country with over 30% of its exports to the U.S. Japan flinches at a protectionist America in its future. But Japan is shifting investment from basic industries to "social overhead" (badly neglected highways, hospitals, antipollution control). That will tend to limit growth and productivity and increase inflation, roots of the problems now afflicting the U.S.

Nevertheless, the soundness of Japan's economy is unlikely to be seriously impaired by the Nixon program. Considering the dangerous diplomatic liabilities of that program, the first uncritical applause for the get-tough-with-Japan policy may soon be in for critical reappraisal.

'Strip Mining' Becoming Fighting Words as Bulldozers Remove Mountains

BY JANET STAIHAR
Lotts Creek, Ky. (AP) — A thin brown stream oozes past a mucky mountain road that abruptly ends at the community hall where Robert Ratliff and his Kentucky neighbors chuckled over the local boy "gone wrong."
The boy, it seems, "miscalculated" and went to work for a strip mining company.
"We all know'd him: right nice fella too, did some drillin' work," said Ratliff.
"But he got to talkin' to this big mine operator and he told him, 'I've got a lot of friends in Clear Creek; and that he'd go in 'n' strip."

"On Thursday, he brought in the bulldozer 'n' on Sunday night it blow'd all to pieces.
"Elmer," I said to him a couple of days later, 'I would do things for you I'd only do for my daddy, but when it comes to strip mining, nobody ain't got no friends in Clear Creek.
"They ain't gonna strip in Clear Creek, I guarantee you," Ratliff declared. "I'll get me one of them high-powered 30-30 rifles with a glass you kin see one side o' the mountain t' the other. And, pow, no more strip miner.

"They might strip in Clear Creek after we're dead, lady, but not while we's alive."
Ratliff Not Alone
Ratliff, a former underground miner turned farmer, is not alone in his feelings.
He and many of his neighbors view strip mining as a threat to their survival.
They resent it all the more because the coal stripped away by the encroaching bulldozers goes primarily to help feed generators producing electricity for big cities many miles away.

"We could care less about people freezin' to death in New York City or Washington, D.C., if they're going to destroy us," says Joe Begley a Blackey, Ky., grocer and head of the Citizens League to Protect the Surface Rights.
Increase
The demand for coal has spiraled in the past 18 months. The renewed demand has prompted miners to extract the minerals as cheaply and as quickly as possible — by ripping open the land 'acres at a time.

New federal laws regulating the health and safety of deep miners also have driven many small coal mine operators to abandon the underground shafts in favor of easier methods.
Strippers don't have to worry about mine roof supports, dust standards or many of the other requirements imposed on underground operations.
But the surge in strip mining has kindled tempers to a degree reminiscent of the mid-'60s when angry mountaineers fought off coal companies with buckshot.
A Knott County housewife, Bessie Smith, and other members of the Appalachian group to Save the Land and People recently held off bulldozers by sitting in their path near Hazard, Ky. In another confrontation, shotgun-toting friends of a property owner stared down miners until state police roared in to prevent any bloodshed.

Different Outlook
National Coal Assn. President Carl E. Bagge views the future differently.
"The '70s will be the decade in which coal achieves its natural birthright as the principal energy source for the nation," he told a coal industry convention.

He said 610 million tons of coal — 40% of it stripped — will be mined in the United States this year. Ten years ago, 403 million tons of coal were taken from the ground.
By 1980, stripping will have ripped up 5.8 million acres, an area the size of New Jersey, the U.S. Bureau of Mines estimates.
Since the advent of mining in the nation, 4.2 million acres of the total 11.3 million acres affected by coal mining have been stripped, the bureau says.
Although 22 states have surface mining laws, the bureau figures that only 2 million acres have been reclaimed in some fashion so far.
Much of the strip mining in Kentucky is done with the help of much hated board form deeds.
Mineral Rights
Upheld only in Kentucky, the documents allow a company owning the mineral rights to a piece of property to mine the land anytime it wants to, despite the surface owner's objections.
In many cases, ancestors of current land owners traded all mineral rights away forever in exchange for only a few dollars.

To soothe the pain, coal companies usually pay a token fee to the present land owner, 10 cents a ton of coal or up to 50 cents a linear foot.
"I got nothin'," grumbled one Perry County man who had been chased from his home by a huge glob of mud torn loose in mining operations.
"My barn filled up with mud 'n' a tree grow'd out of it."
Not all property owners think the've been give the short end of the financial stick.
In Henrysburg, Ohio, an elderly man conceded he was satisfied with money paid him when blasting damaged his house, but as to the amount: "That's none of your business."

A Charleston, W.Va., area home owner kicked up such a fuss that operators paid him $500 for a broken window and a slightly chipped fireplace chimney.
Public Relations Drive
Harassed by conservationists and the news media, which generally have been hostile to strip mining, industry officials are on a campaign to beautify their image.
Some top company executives spend almost half of their time escorting visitors around showpiece reclamation lands.

When a group of Boy Scouts camped at Sallie Buffalo Park, 408 acres of formerly stripped land near Cadiz, Ohio, Hanna Coal Co. stocked the lake with 700 hungry trout, at $3 apiece.
Officials of Cannelton Coal Co. in Charleston, W. Va., are so publicly conscious they telephoned newsmen to come out and watch the thrashing of oats planted on reclaimed land.
Conservationists and mine operators, meanwhile, are polarized over whether gutted land can ever be satisfactorily restored.

"Reclamation is a joke in this state," says Kentuckian Begley. "When I saw the streams go, when I saw the beaver go and when I'm seeing the hills go — and I'm only 53 — what's going to happen in 15 years?"
"Sure, it's as ugly as hell when the mining's under way," counters Don Richter, field director of the Ohio Reclamation Assn., an organization formed by mining concerns to handle much of the reclamation work. "But give us a moment to reclaim and we'll show you something that's nice and green."

Bulldozer frames the scene at an active eastern Kentucky strip mine operation.

Hijacked Airliner Returns

Miami (AP) — An ex-convict who said he was a left-wing radical took a stewardess hostage and held a gun on her for three hours as he hijacked a partially-loaded Eastern Airlines jet from Detroit to Cuba Saturday.
The hijacker, identified by Wayne County, Mich., Sheriff William Lucas as Richard Frederick Dixon, 31, of Pontiac, Mich., claimed he was a Kansas State University graduate and had a distaste for the American way of life.
Eastern officials said Dixon, who tried to board Flight 953 to Miami and San Juan, P.R., at Detroit Metro Airport, was stopped for questioning after he appeared nervous. He then pulled a gun and ordered the plane to Havana.
All 33 passengers, five airline employees and six crew members aboard landed safely in Miami after a seven-hour flight.
Stewardess Annely Schrot, 26, said for three hours the gunman sat in the passenger section with his pistol pointed at Carol Bollinger, 23, another stewardess he had sitting next to him.
Miss Bollinger said the hijacker described himself as the product of a "white middle class establishment family" and told her he admired black militant Angela Davis and Soledad Brother George Jackson, who was killed at California's San Quentin prison last Aug. 21.
Lucas said in Detroit that Dixon was paroled last Aug. 27 after serving five years of a sentence for larceny from the Diamond Crystal Salt Co. credit union in St. Clair, Mich.
Miss Schrot said when the plane landed in Cuba, the hijacker asked for political asylum and was escorted away by uniformed men.

Shah Is Tossing Party of All Time?

Paris (UPI)—Pierre Gachet, the urbane export director at Maxim's Restaurant, rattled off into the telephone his grocery list for the dinner: 90 peacocks, 25,000 bottles of wine, 12,000 bottles of whisky . . .

In a workroom on the other side of the Seine, two of France's most expert engravers, Claude and Pierre Tolmer, carved Persian miniature designs on wooden covers for the dinner menu. And at Porthault's table linen workrooms in the east of Paris, Marie-Louise Martin, 23, bent over her needle embroidering a tablecloth 190 feet long.

The finest artisans of France, from chandelier makers to pastry chefs, are finishing preparations for the party of the century. It just may be the party of all time, the days of Louis IV and Cleopatra included.

"Well, has there ever been a

Shah of Iran

party like it? Has there?" asked Louis Vaudable, the director at Maxim's.

50 or So Kings

The shah and empress of Iran are having 50 or so kings and heads of state over to a French dinner in the middle of the South Persian desert Oct. 14 to celebrate the 2,500th anniversary of the creation of the Persian dynasty by Cyrus the Great.

The Shah asked Maxim's Restaurant to feed the array of rulers and Jansen's decorating firm of Paris to round up the best creators of French elegance to create housing for the party on the desert for five days, Oct. 13-18.

The final preparations were for the food, and Maxim's head chef, Alex Humbert, after a year of conferring with the shah's emissaries and Maxim's staff, has settled on a menu for the Oct. 14 feast fit for 50 kings: quail's eggs with caviar, crayfish tail mousse, stuffed roast lamb with truffles, champagne water ice, those 90 peacocks baked and reconstructed, feathers and all, nut and truffle salad, creamed figs and raspberries in port wine, and all washed down with the most famous wines of France, including a pink champagne created for the occasion.

Banquet Tent

Chef Humbert is flying to Iran with 150 maitres d'hotel and waiters and 30 assistant chefs from the Hotel de Paris in Monte Carlo and the Hotel

Palais at St. Moritz. They will cook on gas stoves and electric ovens flown from Paris.

The anniversary dinner Oct. 14 will be staged in a banquet tent 223 feet long, with blue silk walls, pink silk draped ceiling, blue and gold wool carpet and crystal chandeliers.

Meanwhile, already on the site at Persepolis is Jansen's tent village, shipped in 40 trucks from Paris to Iran. The bathrooms were sent prefabricated with the plumbing already installed. Three hundred workers went along to assemble 60 beige and blue striped tents around an enormous fountain, arranged so one visiting head of state has no more important tent than another.

Questions are shrugged off in Paris as to the bill for this party. But according to reports the Shah has promised to match as much money on schools and roads as he spends on the party.

40% of Children 3 to 5 Attending School

Washington (UPI) — The Office of Education reported Saturday that 40% of America's children aged 3 to 5 are attending school this fall. The increase triggered new debate about the value of early learning.

Seven years ago only 25% of the 3 to 5 year olds were in school.

The latest estimate, based on Census Bureau data, does not include children enrolled in day care programs, in which the care is primarily custodial. But it does include children in nursery schools, Head Start, kindergarten, church-operated preprimary schools, some combination nursery-day care and other private schools.

In the last school year, 4.1 million of the 10.9 million children in this age group were in school, the report said. This fall's estimate was based on expected increases over last year.

"This remarkable increase in the number of 3 to 5-year-olds attending school has profiled implications for the future of American education," said Education Commissioner Sidney P. Marland Jr.

"The increasing evidence from research, declaring that perhaps as much as 80% of a child's intelligence is developed by age 4 or 5, has galvanized the interest of parents and educators alike in the importance of early childhood learning."

Concern Expressed

Dr. Edward F. Zigler, chief of the Office of Child Development, expressed concern about the growing emphasis on early schooling.

"What is trouble-some to me about the vast increase in nursery school enrollment is that much of it is accounted for by middleclass children whose parents believe that nursery school experience will result in increased I.Q. and later school achievement for their children," Zigler told UPI.

"In fact, there is much evidence that preschool educational programs do not produce accelerated intellectual development among middle-class children, although such programs can be effective with economically deprived children and children with special needs."

Findings of Report

The report said, however, that the heaviest increase in preschool enrollment has been among middle-class children. It cited these findings:

—A significantly higher percentage of the nation's white 5-year-olds (712) were enrolled last year in preprimary programs than black 5-year-olds (57.8). But among 3 and 4-year-olds, the percentages of black children in school were slightly higher than for whites.

—The percentage of children in preschool classes increased as family income grew, rising from 24% where income was under $3,000 a year to more than 47% in families at $10,000 or more.

—Enrollment among children of farmers (23.6) is even lower than among children of the unemployed (34.2).

—Enrollment rates are highest for children living in suburban areas (43.2%), followed by central city (39.4) and small cities and rural (30.2).

—Rates are highest in Western states, where 44.1% of all 3 to 5-year-olds are in school, followed by Northeastern (43%), North Central (39) and Southern (28.3).

Bishops Loyal to Pope On Issue of Celibacy

(c) Chicago Daily News
Vatican City — After pocketing celibacy as a doctrinal issue, the 210 bishops of the third Vatican synod buried it — perhaps for years — by a unanimous vote Friday night.

They removed celibacy, which its critics call the cause of half-empty seminaries and 13,000 priestly resignations among 440,000 priests of the world, out of the list of "practical" problems of the priesthood, next on their order of discussion.

The most striking factor about the decision of the bishops to shelve celibacy was that nowhere in the open conclave was any mention made of a 306-page secret report recently completed by the Rev. Emilio Colagiovanni, a sociologist of the Vatican.

The report, made at the orders of the Congregation for the Doctrine of the Faith, formerly the Holy Office, bought out the important fact that 85% of the resigning priests cited the rule of celibacy as a cause for their withdrawal.

Many ex-priests claimed that they did not intend to marry, but felt optional marriage would allow many men to join the priesthood, or return to it.

This important work of two years' research has been circulated within the "congregations" (that is, ministries) of the Vatican and is known to several of the cardinals appointed to the synod by Pope Paul VI. But none of them broke the official silence. They stayed loyal to Pope Paul's 9,500-word encyclical of 1967, calling celibacy a "jewel."

The bishops left the door open to the ordination of mature, meaning elderly, married men as priests. An American cardinal told friends: "we have two such older men in training now. But in both cases their wives are in the terminal stages of cancer. They're not sure whether they want to be ordained or to marry all over again."

Free Bicycle Rides Offered

Toronto (AP) — The city has provided free bicycle transportation for at least two of the two million people living in this area.

Mayor William Dennison decided that two bicycles presented to the city by a CBS television program would be left in the streets for public use.

"I've got great faith in the honesty of Toronto people," said the mayor.

New Education Program 'Corner Druggist's Image to Change'

Baltimore (AP) — Remember the old wood-paneled, jar-filled apothecary? The white-haired town pharmacist sitting down to chat about your rash or backache?

Since those days, the changing role of the druggist in the burgeoning pharmaceutical industry has cast him before the public as little more than an impersonal dispenser of pills.

The University of Maryland, in an unusual student pharmacy program just three years old, hopes to remake this image of the corner druggist and give the nation's overburdened physicians a helping hand as well.

"We want people to select a family pharmacist as they would a family doctor," says William K. Kinnard Jr., dean of the university's School of Pharmacy.

Hospital Rounds
Pharmacy students are now making hospital rounds with doctors, talking to patients about drug reactions and seeing the results of the drugs they dispense.

"The emphasis in pharmacy training is shifting from the product to the patient," Kinnard said.

Traditional courses in cat anatomy have been scratched for human anatomy. Courses dealing with the history of pharmacy and communications were abandoned.

Kinnard believes the shift in emphasis has long been needed, citing the gap between the physician's knowledge of drugs and the high number of unfavorable drug reactions suffered by patients both in and outside the hospital.

He quoted a recent medical survey in Pennsylvania which found that one person in every four saw four or more doctors in a year and had an average of 35 prescriptions filled.

Dr. James Freston, head of clinical pharmacology at the University of Utah, reported that between $5 billion and $6 billion is spent each year untangling problems caused by adverse drug reactions.

The Maryland program intends to eliminate some of these problems by keeping better tabs on both drugs and patients, while forging a closer working bond between druggist and physician.

5-Year Program
The new five-year program includes two years of general studies and two years of basic science. The fifth year eliminates the traditional pharmacy apprenticeship — working in a drug store — to give the students experience in community and hospital pharmacies.

"We trained wrong in the past," said Kinnard. "We educated in isolation, and never once did the student have to take courses or work with other health professionals. He was not educated in patient-care areas."

System Criticized
Kinnard criticized the old pharmacy intern system, saying: "Sometimes pharmacy students even worked behind cigaret counters and got credit for it."

Among radical modifications at Maryland is the "extern" program which places students in various pharmacies approved by the school.

Students work with the professional pharmacist and get no academic credit for the experience.

Kinnard concedes the expanded role he envisions for pharmacists may take new legislation and a remodeling of ideas on the part of most physicians regarding the druggist.

Mary Connelly, head pharmacist at Baltimore's Mercy Hospital, among the institutions participating in the new "extern" program, finds an improving relationship between druggist and doctor.

"There is the notion that in the past pharmacists have been hiding," Mrs. Connelly said, "but now, doctors are seeking their advice."

New pharmacy training programs have been established at other schools, including the universities of California, Virginia and North Carolina, but Maryland's is unique in that the final year eliminated the apprenticeship.

"The change is coming about slowly," Kinnard said.

Foreign Trade Discussion Set Thursday

Profit for the nation, consumer choice and price competition in a friendly world community are benefits of foreign trade that will be discussed at a public 9:15 a.m. meeting of the League of Women Voters Thursday at the Trinity Methodist Church, 16th and A.

Dr. James Kendrick, author and professor of agricultural economics at the University of Nebraska, will speak on "Issues in International Trade Today." A "trading game" will precede Dr. Kendrick's remarks.

Gallup: GOP Allegiance at Lowest Level Since '64

Princeton, N.J. — Republican party allegiance among persons of voting age is at its lowest level since 1964 when President Lyndon Johnson and the Democratic party were riding high.

An important contributing factor in the GOP decline since last year has been the enfranchisement of 11 million Americans 18 to 20. This group has been included in all Gallup surveys conducted since the Supreme Court ruling went into effect at the beginning of this year.

The most recent surveys, based on a total of 8,935 interviews conducted between June and September, show only 25% of citizens, 18 and older, classifying themselves as Republicans. This compares with 44% who identify themselves as Democrats and 31% as Independents.

1964 Survey

In 1964, mid-year surveys found the same proportion of the electorate as today. 25%, classifying themselves as Republicans, 53% describing themselves as Democrats and 22% as Independents.

Before FDR

The GOP has had minority party status for more than three decades. Prior to the FDR era Republicans for three decades had enjoyed the same wide advantage that Democrats hold today.

By 1940 the two parties were nearly equal in numerical strength, 38% to 42% respectively, with another 20% of adults classified as Independents.

The next 24 years, from 1940 to 1964, represented a long-term decline for the GOP, while the Democrats made corresponding gains. The proportion of Independents changed comparatively little.

Since 1964 the proportion of Independents has increased, while the Democrats have tended to lose ground. The proportion of Republicans had changed little until this year.

one of the two low points since the turn of the century.

Today's report points up the problem facing a Republican presidential candidate. To win, he must not only keep his own party's ranks united, but he must also win a sizable majority of the Independent vote and even win some Democratic support.

Machine Picks Up Litter

Lubbock, Tex. (UPI) — A machine designed to take the backache out of picking up litter along the nation's highways has been developed by a Texas masonry contractor.

N. A. Mattison, 43, sold his first "litter getter" in March. Now they're being used in Missouri, Tennessee, North Carolina, Virginia, Pennsylvania, California, Arizona, Georgia, Texas and Canada.

The machine has no engine. It's belt driven from trailer wheels and can be easily towed behind any vehicle. It picks up bottles, cans, wood, paper — any type of litter which can be thrown from a car window — at a working speed of up to 15 mph.

The machine is constructed so it can be run through tall grass ahead of a mower, or can be pulled behind a mower to pick up litter at the same time the grass is mowed.

The machine sells for $3,950. It is designed so one man can operate it, and even change litter bags when they become filled.

"During one demonstration, we recovered about 98% of the litter we threw out in tall grass," Mattison said.

Analysts Say Podgorny No. 2 in Soviet Union

Washington (AP) — Soviet President Nikolai V. Podgorny has bypassed Prime Minister Alexei N. Kosygin and now ranks No. 2 behind party chief Leonid N. Brezhnev in the Moscow hierarchy, administration analysts say.

The findings of U.S. specialists in Soviet affairs are confirmed by a number of knowledgeable foreign diplomats familiar with the Moscow scene.

Compared with Brezhnev, both Podgorny and Kosygin have slipped in the Soviet power equation but Kosygin "has slipped more," as one analyst put it.

Brezhnev makes a point of letting it be known to top-ranking visitors that he is speaking as Russia's No. 1 man and not solely as first secretary of the Communist party.

The official title of Podgorny, 68, is chairman of the Supreme Soviet Presidium, but outside the Communist orbit he is generally called president of the Soviet Union. The job traditionally ranked No. 3 behind the party chief and the chairman of the Council of Ministers, generally known abroad as premier or prime minister.

The first sign of Podgorny's replacing Kosygin in the No. 2 spot came last April when Podgorny was listed behind Brezhnev at the 24th Congress of the Soviet Union's Communist party.

Since then, it has become clear that Podgorny is getting an increasingly greater share of action than Kosygin, the analysts say.

He frequently travels to problem areas such as North Vietnam, while "important, but not necessarily gut issues" are left to Kosygin, one analyst says.

This change of places in the hierarchy by no means represents Kosygin's demotion, diplomatic observers say. His current trip to Algeria and Morocco should be regarded as a renewed Soviet effort to penetrate the western part of the Mediterranean.

In fact, one diplomat says Kosygin might have suggested himself that Podgorny handled issues of substance going beyond the ceremonial tasks usually assigned to his predecessors.

Kosygin, the diplomat says, has been overburdened and a third man had to be elevated to share in international fence-mending efforts of Kremlin leaders.

Aid to Black Colleges Rises 16%

Washington (UPI) — Federal financial support to the nation's 111 predominantly black colleges increased 16% in the last school year from $107.9 million to $125.5 million, the government said Saturday.

Of the 100 top colleges in terms of federal aid received, however, only one is a black school, Howard University in Washington.

"This administration, more than any other, has demonstrated concern for the future of black colleges," said Secretary Elliot L. Richardson of the Health, Education and Welfare Dept. (HEW).

"It has backed up its concern with money."

The government listed these 10 top black colleges receiving federal funds last year: Howard, $10.2 million; Meharry Medical College in Nashville, Tenn., $6.7 million; Tuskegee Institute, Tuskegee, Ala., $5.4 million; Wilberforce University, Wilberforce, Ohio, $4.8 million; Bishop College, Dallas, $4.6 million; Southern University A&M College, Baton Rouge, La., $3.4 million; Florida A&M University, Tallahassee, $2.7 million; North Carolina A & T University, Greensboro, $2.7 million; Texas Southern University, Houston, $2.5 million, and Federal City College, District of Columbia, $2.2 million.

These schools gathered 36% of the 1970-71 federal funds to black colleges.

Richardson said the proportion of federal funds spent on higher education in black institutions and students has increased from 1.3% in 1962 to 3.4% in 1970.

During the last school year, black colleges enrolled 177,000 or 2% of the nation's 8.6 million students. About 45% of their federal support is in the form of student aid and 55% in institutional aid.

Chiang Plays Reduced Role in Taipei

(c) New York Times
Taipei, Taiwan — President Chiang Kai-shek appears to be playing a greatly reduced role in the Nationalist government and has reportedly turned over most administrative responsibilities to his son, Deputy Premier Chiang Ching-kuo.

Well-informed Chinese and foreign observers, while uncertain whether Chiang's decreased activity is attributed to a definite decision on his part or to his advanced age — (he will be 84 on Oct. 31) — believe the change has been very marked since last spring.

Since then, the report, Chiang, who has served for more than 40 years, has passed up several occasions at which he has usually appeared in the past, such as the ceremonies for Confucius' birthday and graduation at the nationalists' military academies.

At the same time, officials here believe, the Nationalists' key decision-making machinery and paper work has been shifted from the president's office to that of his son.

Some observers in Taipei feel Chiang's reduced role may help explain the Nationalists' more flexible attitude in the United Nations, where they have accepted the Nixon administration's two-China policy. For years, Chiang Kai-shek had insisted that his government would withdraw from the U.N. if the Peking regime was admitted.

For the first time there is speculation that the president, who has led the Nationalist party since it came to power in 1927, will not stand for reelection when his six-year term expires next spring.

But despite Chiang's reduced presence, officials caution that he is still overwhelmingly regarded as the only clear-cut Nationalist leader and that his son has not yet acquired the president's vast prestige with Nationalist officials and soldiers.

FDA Inspections Cut

Washington (AP) — Federal inspectors' heavy involvement in the Bon Vivant botulism investigation means that inspections of 2,300 other food-processing plants scheduled for this fiscal year will not be made, the Food and Drug Administration (FDA) says.

And two other major cases in fiscal 1970 canceled 2,800 inspections that were to have been made that year, the FDA added.

The agency gave these data in a letter to Rep. Lester L. Wolff, D-N.Y., responding to his request for greater vigilance in the area of food safety.

Wolff said that as a result of the FDA report he is requesting the House Appropriations Committee to provide at least enough supplemental funds to bring inspections back to normal levels.

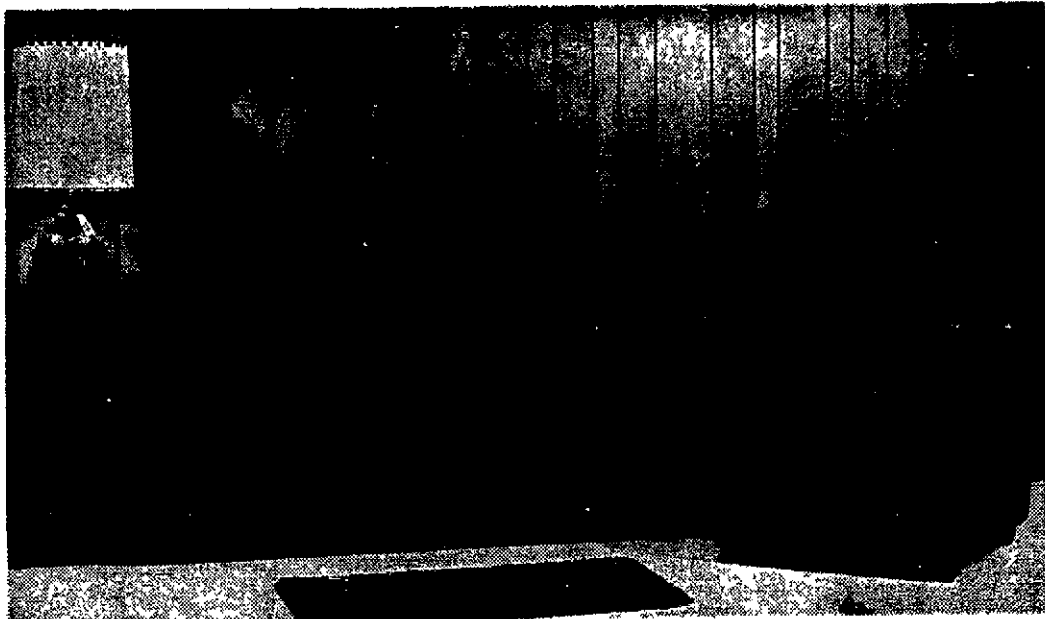

M. J. Ryan, director of legislative services for the FDA, told Wolff that the Bon Vivant investigation took 125 FDA man-years and thus far has forced a 20% reduction in the 11,500 plants that would have had their products sampled and analyzed this year.

Should meat be refrigerated while still hot or should it be cooled? I've heard both ways and in view of the salmonella problem in the news lately, I'd like to know. —S.H., Lincoln

ACTION LINE: According to Esther Kreifels, Lancaster County Extension Home Economist, the myth that food should be allowed to cool before refrigeration is a holdover from the days of ice boxes. The only problem then was that hot food placed in the ice box would melt the ice faster.

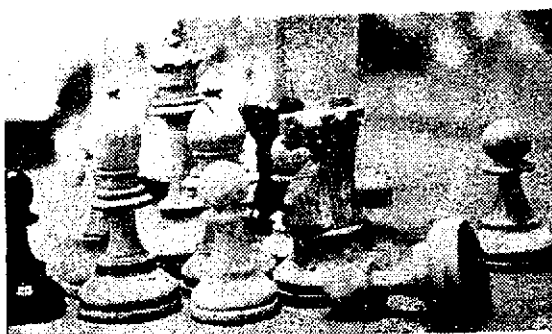

It is not harmful to cool meat rapidly, she says. On the other hand, the meat will not spoil if left out from the time it is cooked until mealtime, says the home economist. If cooked meat is refrigerated immediately after a meal, she said, it should keep for two to three days. Mrs. Kreifels also advises that cooked meats should be tightly covered when stored.

What was the result of the Bobby Fischer-Tigran Petrosian chess match? —Bart Lewis, Lincoln

ACTION LINE: This column is a pawn for the public interest, someone says.

Up to their break Friday, the score was 1½ points each for Fischer from the U.S. and Petrosian from the U.S.S.R. Play resumes Tuesday in Buenos Aires, Argentina, in the 12-game match which began Sept. 30 and continues through October.

Fischer, 23, who recently astonished the chess world with several 6-0 wins over chess masters around the world, played his first national chess tournament in Lincoln in 1955. He did not win and, according to chess experts, did very badly.

ACTION LINE learned the writer of the above inquiry defeated Fischer in that U.S. Junior Chess Championship. Fischer was 12 years old at the time.

I recently learned of a plan to build a "super expressway" connecting the villages of Funk and Cambridge. Who proposed this idea and how did it carry this far? What is the practical purpose of an expressway in this area, running parallel to the Interstate? Most important, how can concerned citizens express their concern? —Mrs. Daniel Marr, Lincoln

ACTION LINE: This is part of the Cambridge-Holdrege corridor expressway study done by R. W. Booker of St. Louis, Mo., for the Roads Dept., according to a department spokesman. Perhaps you are giving the term "expressway" an extra meaning. As explained to ACTION LINE, the expressway mentioned means an improved two-lane highway.

Hearings were held in Holdrege Sept. 21 on this proposal to determine if it is workable. This information is being analyzed by the Roads Dept. Remember, the corridor idea is still in the thinking stage and no final plans have been made, according to the road official. Numerous public hearings will be scheduled at which you may express concern.

Practical purpose of this expressway, the spokesman says, is to provide an upgraded roadway. To use the Interstate would take the traveler out of his way a considerable distance, the official notes.

Nixon Economic Policy Draws Mixed Lincoln Reactions

By GINGER RICE

The man — or woman — on the street in downtown Lincoln Saturday was chilly, but his — or her — thoughts on President Nixon's recently sketched economic picture ranged from warmly enthusiastic to downright frosty.

A large number had not yet formed strong opinions about how effective Phase II of the new economic program may be in controlling inflation and unemployment, but most seemed open minded and willing to give it a chance. Many were also unsure just how it would affect them personally.

Typical was young Calvin Rife Jr., a student living at 2000 J, Apt. 9, who summed up his feeling with a shrug: "If it works, fine. But it's like everything else — nothing's fair."

Another student, Karen Taylor, 3851 Smith, was for the plan. "I think it's a pretty good thing because society seems to be struggling right now."

The Southeast High School sophomore observed that "people seem to be worried about getting their raises and prices going up." As a student, she said, it doesn't look like it will have much effect on her personally, but over-all, "I think it's a good thing right now."

"It Stinks"

Another man didn't have time to stop and elaborate, but said simply: "It stinks."

Most people seemed inclined to give the new program a chance — to try it for a while and see if it will make things any better. For instance, businessman, Tom Toogood, a partner in Automation Inc. at 4621 Hartley, commented: "If it does any good, it'll be all right. But I haven't been able to see any change yet."

Smiling skeptically, he said of Phase II: "We can hope."

Toogood observed: "Prices always seem to be going up. They're going wild. It's harder to sell cars when money's so tight. If it (Phase II) loosens up things, then I'm definitely for it, but as I say, I haven't seen any change yet."

"People can't seem to save any money—it takes everything just to live. So when they go to buy something big, they have to borrow almost the whole amount. This makes it hard to do business."

Like Toogood, Lola Fowler, 919 No. 23rd, was concerned about how fast paychecks get eaten up. But she was less optimistic about the success of the economic plan.

"Gone Before You Know It"

"Oh, yes, it will affect us," she said of the policy. "I'm not for it. I'm not for it at all."

Mrs. Fowler, a housewife who works from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. for the Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service office in Lincoln, spoke of her paycheck: "All that money and it seems like it's all gone before you know it." What's left, she asked of her upcoming $15 Christmas bonus, after taxes are deducted? "Considering everything, she concluded that the wage-price freeze "won't have that much effect."

But Joe Furasck of Valparaiso said: "Sure, it affected me. We were sup-

LINCOLN, NEBRASKA, OCT. 10, 1971 SECTION B

The new Game and Parks Commission complex at 2200 No. 33rd St., to be dedicated next Saturday with an open house, brings together departments formerly housed in five different locations.

Commission In New Building on UNL East Campus Public to View Game, Parks Complex

By SCOTT HOOBER

The fountain in the lobby isn't stocked with bass, and no pheasants are hiding in the bushes out front, but the new, attractive building on the University of Nebraska-Lincoln East Campus is home for the State Game and Parks Commission.

The building—actually two buildings joined by a second-story cross-over — brings together Game and Parks staffers from five locations, none of them as livable, convenient or downright good-looking as this one.

Visitors will have a chance to see the complex just north of Pershing Armory for themselves Saturday during 10 a.m. dedication ceremonies and the open house to follow.

The smaller of the two structures, a wildlife laboratory, was built with three-quarters of its costs paid by federal funds with the remainder from state coffers. But the larger of the two, which houses the commission's offices, is actually not a state building at all—at least not legally.

Instead, the city of Lincoln holds title to it. The state is not allowed to go into debt, so the city handled financing of the $1.75 million building (along with the educational television building four blocks to the south along 33rd Street) and leases it to the state. Under the lease-purchase plan, the state's roughly $180,000-a-year rental will equal the city's costs after 20 years.

Any time after Jan. 1 the state could pay off the city and take over the building, but more than likely it will wait 20 years and buy it at a bargain $1.

The complex is distinctive for its use of brick and tile, landscaping, roof-top patio, ample parking and facilities for the handicapped—including Braille on the elevator control panel for blind visitors.

Although commission staffers have been in their new offices for several months — and the wildlife lab people in theirs since December — there are still some things missing.

For instance, drapes ordered to cut the glare from windows still have not arrived. And there hasn't been enough money to buy new furniture yet, so the commission is making do with a collection of hand-me-downs.

Nonetheless, old commission hands are unanimous the improvement is a great one.

Some 1,200 guests have been invited to the Saturday ceremony, including all 49 state senators and Nebraska's five-man congressional delegation. Besides the landlord, Mayor Sam Schwartzkopf, speakers will include Gov. J. J. Exon, former commission director Mel Steen and director Willard Barbee.

Wallas Have Misfortune in Wholesale Lots

By SAM THORSON
Outstate Nebraska Bureau

Valparaiso — Misfortune often comes in wholesale lots, as John Walla and his family can attest. Witness:

Late Saturday night two weeks ago, his wife and three sons asleep in bed, Walla was napping in a recliner chair. Outside, gale-force southerly winds were whipping about the house. Awakened suddenly by an explosion in the garage, Walla got up, opened the door to the garage and was scorched by a blast from a raging fire. Stoked by the high winds, the flames were spreading quickly to the house.

Walla called the fire department, shook his wife awake and went for the boys. Arnold, 11, was so sound asleep he had to be carried out the back door. Adrian, 20, and Alvin, 14, escaped out the front door. Safely outside, Adrian heard a noise from inside and realized it was his mother struggling on the hall floor.

Mrs. Walla, drugged by the sedatives she takes regularly for a bad heart, had fallen and was unable to get up. Groping his way back in through the smoke, Adrian dragged her from the building.

The house was now burning like tinder and was too hot to approach. As the fire trucks arrived from Valparaiso and Raymond, the Wallas stood in their night clothes and watched the flames destroy their home, garage and two cars. It was dawn before the wind-whipped fire could be controlled.

Starting Over From Scratch

For the present, the Wallas are staying a mile north of their gutted home with their daughter, Deloris, married to farmer Lowell Bachle. They're starting over from scratch.

Inside the house were all their personal belongings, including Mrs. Walla's new dentures and $700 worth of medications for her heart. Arnold's cat and three Chihuahua pups were trapped inside.

Also lost was Mrs. Walla's diary, a chronicle of a lifetime of freak family accidents and disasters that might have conquered Job.

It was the fifth fire on the Walla farm. Another had destroyed their barn along with 129 head of swine and eight feeder cattle. The chicken coop had burned in a separate fire. Another fire started when a spark ignited the lard Mrs. Walla was rendering in the kitchen. Yet another was touched off by a bolt of lightning which cracked the walls of the house, ripped apart the furniture, knocked Adrian unconscious, and followed the plumbing around the home, setting little fires.

After the lightning struck, Walla and his sons spent five years remodeling, expanding and refurbishing the house, piece by piece, room by room. The paneling on the west side was all that remained of the job.

The Wallas' misfortunes didn't stop at their pets and possessions. Mrs. Walla, a scarlet fever victim at eight, has a bad heart valve. She has suffered a heart attack and five relapses in the last four years.

After the arm was damaged by a falling stack of hay on a stack-mover, doctors told Walla it would have to be amputated. He refused, and found a doctor who saved it by rerouting a damaged nerve from the outside of his arm to the inside.

Three years ago as Walla was baling hay, he stepped into a gopher hole and fell forward into the machine. The blades tore up his face and broke his jaw. Realizing that he would be decapitated if he didn't get loose, Walla caught a blade with his left arm and pulled his head out just as the arm broke. The blades started whirling again, slashing his upper arm repeatedly, leaving it dangling by a thread of flesh and the rerouted nerve. The baler had to be dismantled to get Walla out.

Walla was saved, his face restored with plastic surgery, and his upper arm replaced by a prosthetic device which connects the forearm to his shoulder. There is no feeling in the forearm and hand, and he has had to learn to operate his fingers again.

Door Cuts Elbow to Bone

His arm replaced, Walla was leaving the doctor's office after a checkup when a freak whirlwind slammed the door shut on his other arm, cutting his elbow to the bone. Walla's son-in-law, while helping finish the injured farmer's baling, fell off the hay rack and had his foot broken.

Months later, Walla stumbled while getting out of a pickup and was unable to regain his balance due to the disabled arm. Falling to the ground, he slipped a disc. Now he has to wear a brace.

That's not all. Walla lost all the toes of one foot in an accident with a lawn mower some 15 years ago, and nearly lost an eye because of a splinter which flew out of a rock-grinder he was using to cut stone for the front of his house.

And then there were the auto accidents — three in one year (none the Wallas' fault) about 25 years ago, when their daughter Deloris was a baby and the boys were not yet born. One accident snapped the truck in which Walla and Deloris were riding and knocked them both unconscious. Walla was found clutching his daughter by the ankle, preventing her from falling out the door into a ditch. Another accident sent all three to the hospital with severe cuts.

Then the crops. The Wallas were hauled out of two

2 Questioned Woman Is Shot; Man Held

Lincoln police arrested and jailed Ralph Mease, 28, of Omaha in connection with an incident Saturday evening at 56th and Cornhusker Highway in which an Omaha woman received gunshot wounds in the abdomen.

Mattie Taylor, 34, received "gunshot wounds, plural," according to officials at St. Elizabeth Community Health Center, where she is listed in serious condition following surgery.

According to Lt. Roger LaPage, the incident allegedly occurred in a car during an argument. He said police confiscated a small caliber revolver.

LaPage said another Omaha couple, also in their late 20s or early 30s, was in the car at the time of the incident. Police talked with them but did not hold them.

Police found Miss Taylor in the rear seat of the parked car shortly after 8 p.m.

LINPEX Ends Today Freaks, Errors Are Schiff Stamp Topics

Jacques C. Schiff Jr. has two words of advice for collectors of freaks and errors: complete omission.

Schiff, a New York stamp auctioneer, was talking about stamps at the two-day LINPEX '71 stamp show sponsored by the Lincoln Stamp Club at the Lincoln Hotel. The show ends today.

He explained that errors are stamps in which one or more elements, such as a color or perforation, have been completely omitted. Freaks, he said, are stamps that contain a flaw but no complete omissions. The distinction can make a big difference in selling such stamps, according to Schiff.

"Recently, some people have been trying to sell freaks as errors. That amounts to fraud in every sense of the word," said Schiff.

He cited a case in which a man in Oklahoma claimed to have discovered an error that was allegedly worth $10,000, but it actually turned out to be a freak and was worth much less.

Schiff expressed fear that some collectors might be taken in by these widely publicized claims and purchase a freak that was alleged to be an error.

Schiff said some errors bring very high prices, depending on

Western Literature Assn. Cather and Neihardt Honored in Red Cloud

By DEAN TERRILL
Southeast Nebraska Bureau
Red Cloud — Two of Nebraska's writing greats, one deceased but the other thrillingly alive and present, were honored here Saturday by college professors traveling as far as 1,500 miles.

The choosing of Willa Cather's Red Cloud for its sixth annual meeting was in itself a tribute by the Western Literature Assn. Previously, the group had met in such populous glamour spots as Sun Valley, Colorado Springs and Salt Lake City.

But the Nebraska scheduling also was to recognize the genius of Dr. John G. Neihardt, the state's 90-year-old poet laureate. He was made a lifetime member of the association in a moving climax to the two-day conference.

A scholarly audience of some 60 English professors sat spellbound as the white-haired oldster spied off work after work from memory. A standing ovation brought numerous encores of recitations.

"I feel very tempted to call this man an epic figure in a non-epic age," said Dr. John Milton, outgoing association president from the University of South Dakota.

A dissertation on the Nebraskan's "Black Elk Speaks," one of several papers presented on various authors, had lauded that book particularly. Sally McCluskey of Northern Illinois University termed the work "not just autobiography or history or anthropology or philosophy, but literature..."

"Like a Nasty Novel"
The poet-philosopher himself grinningly noted that the book, though written 40 years ago, is "selling like a nasty novel."

Officers elected for next year were Dr. Tom Lyon of Utah State University, president; Dr. Max Westbrook of the University of Texas, president-elect; and Dr. Sam Bullen of Sonoma State College, Calif., vice president.

Officially recognized along with Dr. Neihardt was the late Harvey Ferguson of Albuquerque, N.M., author of "Wolf Song" and 13 other books. He was invited to accept the honor before his recent death.

'Plant Trees for Centennial'

State officials, concerned about the loss of elm trees from Dutch elm disease, said Saturday they hope Nebraskans will join in the spirit of next year's Arbor Day centennial by starting major tree planting programs.

"Next year marks the 100th anniversary of Arbor Day," said Stan Matzke, State Economic Development director and a member of the Arbor Day Centennial Foundation Commission.

Acting state forester E. H. Benson said Nebraska "is experiencing a major onslaught in elm tree destruction at the present time. The history of Dutch disease indicates that the state will lose 95% of its elm trees before the destruction ends."

Benson said cities will lose almost all of their elm trees in another three or four years.

6 ETV Groups Meet Tuesday

Six curriculum committees for the Nebraska Educational Television Council will meet in Lincoln Tuesday to review past lessons and recommended new ones.

The meeting will be held at the Nebraska Center on the Lincoln Agriculture campus of the University of Nebraska.

Public Employee Bargaining Norfolk Opinion By Industrial Court Is 'Far-Reaching'

"It was the most far-reaching opinion to come down yet on public employee collective bargaining. Now everything is negotiable except that which is clearly within management rights."

That is the assessment made by Lincoln attorney Theodore L. Kessner of a Nebraska Court of Industrial Relations ruling last week, favoring a Kessner client, the Norfolk Education Assn.

Kessner said the long-range impact of the decision should influence the entire area of public worker-employer collective bargaining in Nebraska.

In the Norfolk case, the industrial relations court directed the Norfolk school board to start "good faith" talks with the teachers group on a range of possible contractual items other than salary.

Previously, the board had balked at discussing such matters as teacher work hours, the school year calendar, grievance procedures, method of teacher evaluation and assignment of extra-standard duties.

It is not known whether the Norfolk school board will appeal the industrial court's decision to the Nebraska Supreme Court.

Two Landmark Points
Kessner said the Norfolk case ruling may be noteworthy on two landmark points.

For the first time, the five-judge court has begun major definition of what can be included in public worker-employer contract talks in the broad area of "conditions of employment." Pursuing a cautious course since the 1969 Legislature enacted the public employee collective bargaining measure (LB15), the industrial tribunal had not been faced before so directly with issues in the Norfolk litigation.

The other major aspect of the decision was the court's citation of National Labor Relations Board (NLRB) and federal court interpretations in making appropriate Nebraska holdings.

At the time of LB15's controversial passage, there were some privately-voiced beliefs the body of future industrial court precedent would be developed independently of NLRB lines.

High Court Ruling
But in the only case to reach it growing out of LB15, the Nebraska Supreme Court earlier this year took cognizance of "decisions under the federal law" in forming the state decision.

Federal courts, in NLRB cases, have provided broad construction for the terms wages and conditions of employment, legal experts say.

For example, wages has been interpreted in one case to "extend to all direct and immediate economic benefits flowing from the employment relationship," Industrial Court Judge Dean Kratz noted in the 10-page Norfolk opinion.

"And conditions of employment has been interpreted to be more inclusive than the term working conditions as used in the Railway Labor Act," he added.

Kratz is more widely-known as an Omaha lawyer who usually represents management in construction field collective bargaining. A member of the Nebraska Republican Executive Committee and long-time political associate of Sen. Roman Hruska, Kratz was appointed to the court by former Gov. Norbert Tiemann. That appointment brought a sharp criticism from organized labor.

UNL Homecoming Plans Take Shape

Students, alumni, and faculty at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln are planning 1971 homecoming activities leading up to the Nebraska-Kansas football game in Memorial Stadium at 1:30 p.m. Saturday.

Although the traditional large house displays will not be seen this year, members of Tassels and Corn Cobs, student pep organizations, hope the homecoming will make a lasting contribution to the University through gifts to "Make Love (Library) No. 1."

A trophy will be awarded to the living unit which contributes the most money per person to a special fund for Love Library in the University Foundation. Alumni and other interested persons are also being encouraged to participate in the effort.

A special homecoming pep rally Friday evening at Love Library will be followed by a concert in the University Coliseum featuring Jim Webb and Crow. The homecoming queen and her attendants will be presented during the concert and at halftime ceremonies at the Kansas-Nebraska football game Saturday afternoon.

Hit Songs
Webb, at 24, has written at least 10 songs which have sold over one million copies for their respective performers, and produced million-selling albums for both and Fifth Dimension and Richard Harris, netting Webb 11 Grammy Awards. He has written such hits as "Up, Up and Away," "By the Time I Get to Phoenix," "Wichita Lineman" and "MacArthur Park."

Crow's first single, "Evil Women," sold 600,000 copies and reached 14th place on the national charts.

The annual Alumni Assn. brunch will be Saturday morning in the west ballroom of the Cornhusker Hotel from 10:30 to 1. Special guests will include Interim Chancellor and Mrs. C. Peter Magrath, the 1971 homecoming queen, her attendants, escorts, and parents. Reservations are being accepted by the Alumni Assn. in the Nebraska Union.

Members of the College of Dentistry Alumni Assn. will hold their annual reunion Friday and Saturday at the Nebraska Center.

Students and faculty in the UNL Colleges of Agriculture and Home Economics will host a homecoming coffee for alumni and parents from 9 to 11 a.m. Saturday in the East Union. There also will be a coffee and open house from 9:30 to 11:30 a.m. Saturday for alumnae and former members of the Department of Physical Education for Women in the building at 14th and Vine.

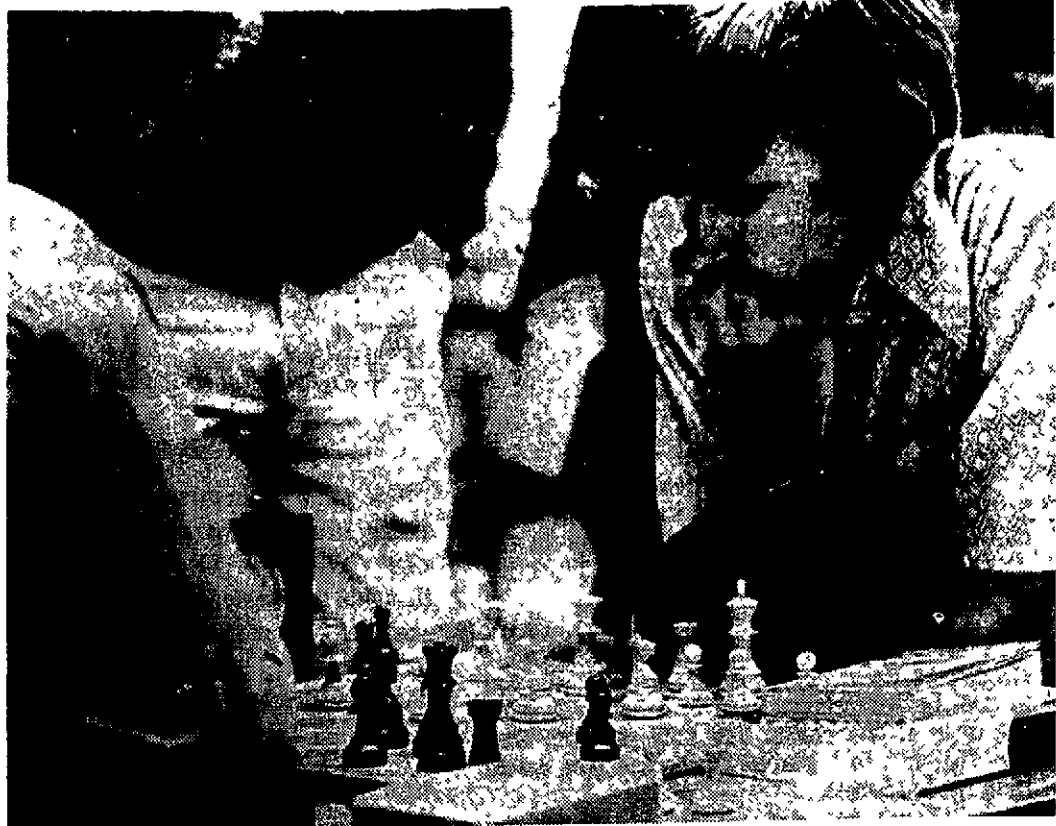

More than 200 alumni are expected to arrive in Lincoln at 3 p.m. Thursday in the Californians for Nebraska group. The group will make its headquarters at The Villager. President D. B. Varner will host a luncheon for the California group Friday in the Nebraska Union followed by a tour of the campus.

Crash Injures 3 Lincolmites, Davey Woman

A five-year-old Lincoln girl was listed in serious condition at Lincoln General Hospital following a head-on crash Saturday afternoon on U.S. 77 between Fletcher and Havelock. Andrea M. Sheridan, 5, her brother, Jason, 3, and her father, Dewey, 30, 1848 No. 25, sustained injuries when their southbound car collided with a car driven by Violet L. Dahl, 60, of Davey, who was also injured. She was listed in fair condition.

Sheridan was reported in good condition, and the boy was treated and released, according to Lincoln General officials.

Chess Players in Competition

Defending Nebraska champion John Tomas, right, was upset in the third round of the Midwest Chess Tournament Saturday evening by Peter Washington, Omaha. Besides Washington, four of the 60 players still have perfect scores going into final play today: Jon Frankle, Des Moines; Jack Spence, Omaha; Mark Bellnap, Des Moines; and David Handy, Sioux Falls, S.D. Other competitors come from Minnesota, Iowa, South Dakota, Virginia, New Jersey and Wisconsin, according to Tom Bracke, president of the Lincoln Chess Club and director of the tournament.

Baby Girl Killed in Mishap

Five Added To Road Toll

Traffic Fatalities	1971	1970
Nebraska	350	329
Lancaster County	22	18
Lincoln	9	11

By United Press International
Five deaths were added Saturday to Nebraska's rapidly growing list of traffic accidents.

The four brought to 350 the number killed on Nebraska roads so far this year, compared with 321 on the same date a year ago.

The latest victims were Leo Luger, 79, of York, Michael Hayes, 67, North Platte, and four-month-old Jennifer Bazant, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Allen Bazant of South Omaha.

Mr. Luger died Saturday afternoon in a Lincoln hospital of injuries suffered earlier in the day in a car-truck accident.

He was the driver of a car that was in collision with a truck owned by Consolidated Blenders, Inc., of York at a county road intersection one mile west of York.

The driver of the truck, Virgil Ackerman, 20, of York escaped injury.

Mr. Hayes died of injuries suffered Wednesday when the motorcycle he was riding was in collision in North Platte with a car driven by Patricia G. Bendiburg of North Platte.

The Bazant infant was killed Friday night when the car driven by her father collided with a trailer camper being pulled by another car. The collision demolished the trailer.

Her 22-year-old mother was in fair condition at a hospital.

Larry Murman, 13, rural Glenvil, was killed Friday in a car-truck collision at an intersection near Glenvil. The youth was a passenger in a car driven by Peggy J. Murman, 15. It collided with a truck driven by John B. Peshek, 76, Fairfield.

The State Patrol also issued a delayed report of the death of Quentin D. Johnson, 46, Holdrege, who was fatally injured Oct. 4 in a collision of his pickup truck with a car driven by 15-year-old Roger Johnson of Holdrege.

Federal Income Tax Returns Go to Utah

Omaha, Neb. (AP) — All federal income tax returns from Nebraska next year should be mailed to Ogden, Utah, instead of to the processing center in Kansas City, Mo., it was announced Saturday.

Richard P. Vinal, director of the Nebraska IRS district, said Ogden would be the regional processing center for Nebraska and 12 other states.

Vinal said individual returns will be sent to Ogden starting on Jan. 1, with business returns making the switch on July 1.

The new address will be: Director, Internal Revenue Service Center, Western Region, 1160 West 1200 South St., Ogden, Utah, 84405.

successive crops several years ago and haven't gotten enough rain the last two years.

"All of Those Things Are Minor"
Walla said, relaxing in his daughter's kitchen. "We don't know what we're going to do." Thieves are stealing parts from his farm equipment, but he can't afford to rent a trailer to stay close to the remaining property.

"We just keep getting knocked down and knocked down," said Mrs. Walla. "We could have had the most beautiful mansion from all our doctor bills. And now we were just settling down to live a little, and my heart was getting so I could just begin to enjoy life."

"The way I was brought up, you just took what God gave you," Walla said, commenting on his family's ability to survive disheartening disaster after disaster. "When we got a small crop, we didn't leave any of it."

"I always figure if you give up, you're done. You have to just buckle down and go further."

Instances of human generosity have been the only source of cheer for the Wallas since the fire. Neighbors have been bringing food and clothes. A banker made some overdrawn checks good out of his own pocket. A pharmacist donated a large quantity of heart medicine to replace that lost in the fire.

And of course the family itself is still miraculously intact, if hobbled and scarred.

"I just hope nobody on this earth has to go through all this again," Mrs. Walla said.

'Price Freeze Is Good'

posed to get a raise, but we didn't get it."

The Olson Construction Co. worker added, "Some places it's good; others it's not worth a darn." The part that's good, he said, is the price freeze.

Also questioning the impact of the economic program was Victor Bauer, 1500 Manatt St. Bauer, who works for Cornhusker Cartage Express and belongs to the local teamsters union, said: "We've thought about it, but I don't think we understand it yet."

Stop Inflation
A young landlord from Grelina, Jim Warren, voiced the same concern about the inflationary trend the economy has experienced. "I do think inflation has to be stopped someplace," he said. I think he (the President) waited too long anyhow."

Asked if the freeze would affect him in any way, he said no, but even if it did, "the little bit it would affect me wouldn't matter if it could help the economy."

"I wasn't going to raise the price anyway," he said of his rental property. "I had it set where I wanted it, and I'm getting plenty of money out of it."

Two housewives voiced their approval of the economic controls, one saying, "I think it's a very necessary thing."

Mrs. Linda Kinney, Route 8, on leave from teaching said that when she goes back to her fourth grade Bennet classroom next semester, she doesn't expect to get her regular pay increase for last year's experience. Nevertheless, she supports the President's plan.

Mrs. Susan Vanneman, 6620 East Shore Dr., an elementary school librarian, said she, too, favored the plan, even though she got a pay raise this fall only for her course work during the summer.

Strike Ban Urged
Also of the belief that "they should have done it a long time ago" was Guy Fields, 2238 Dudley, head feedman at the University of Nebraska farm. "You never know what they're going to do, the government," Fields said.

One thing he wishes Congress would do is "pass a law that you can negotiate for wages but ban strikes."

Also unsure about the ultimate outcome of the freeze and of its total effect on him was Shinji Goto of Japan, a graduate student at UNL. Observing that his assistantship salary is fixed, he indicated that holding prices down is good for him. He rents quarters for his family at 1625 No. 31st and but didn't know what the chances of a rent increase might be without a freeze.

Jewelers Elect Grand Island Man President

Robert Meyer, Grand Island was elected president of the Nebraska and South Dakota Jewelers Assn. at the group's annual meeting at the Radisson Cornhusker Hotel in Lincoln Saturday and today.

Other officers elected at the Saturday morning business session were Charles Allen, Pierre, S.D., vice president, and A. R. Shalberg, Lincoln, secretary-treasurer.

Saturday morning's meeting also included discussion of moving the convention to South Dakota next year. "One of the biggest factors influencing this decision is Lincoln's liquor laws," said Don Mauw, executive director.

Curiosity is one of the behavior characteristics expected of journeymen in this craft. So it was normal that a newsman's nose twitched last week when some freshly-endorsed federal fund application forms routinely came from the Department of Administrative Services (DAS). Why should a couple of forms submitted in January and March be winning approval status so late?

A check with University of Nebraska authorities revealed NU had, at its last count, 285 applications seeking federal funds jammed in the Statehouse pipeline. Of the 285, it was reported 185 were awaiting Gov. J. J. Exon's personal review and signature while the remaining 100 had yet to get DAS' blessings, even before reaching the governor's desk. Also passed along: A number of those applications were transmitted from NU to the Capitol way back last December. The outgoing Tiemann administration apparently decided to let the incoming Exon administration pass judgments.

NU Executive Vice President for Administration Howard Neville said from the start of the new fiscal year on July 1 to date a total of 29 university federal fund applications he knew of had cleared Statehouse channels.

When the 1969 Legislature passed the law requiring the governor to sign every state agency application for federal funds, it concentrated more power over so-called "independent agencies" into the chief executive's hands. This tale of apparently stacked-up NU federal fund applications is suggestive the Exon administration intends to be deeply involved in monitoring internal university affairs. There are, of course, fiscal consequences to reckon with in federally-funded programs.

Long Time, No See

Lancaster County Democratic Chairman Chuck Pallesen had a mild needle working last week as he introduced state government department heads appearing at a party function. State Engineer Tom Doyle was identified as "formerly with the labor department, but now with labor pains." That was recognition of Doyle's somewhat tender relationship with the Dept. of Roads Employees Assn.

Gov. Exon praised his subordinates and documented their dedication to his administration. Aide Norman Otto was cited with putting in "87 or 88 hours a week. I know," Exon said, "because I'm there watching." The governor also related a recent experience of deflating dimensions. He said he had been walking down an Omaha street and nobody recognized him. Finally, some man in working clothes did come up with a big hello. Cautious conversation informed Exon it was a person he had probably known years ago, when his interests centered more about office equipment, duplicating machines, etc.

"Still at the old rat race?" the man asked.
 "Well, no," Exon said, "I'm in state government."
 "In the printing department, huh?"

Goody! We're Pure! We're Clean!

Lincoln Police Lt. Paul Jacobson informed a relieved Legislative Council drug abuse committee last week there is "very little prostitution" in the Capital City and what there is, isn't connected with narcotics. Which prompted Sen. Terry Carpenter, given his not-exactly-singular view of the world and contemporary young people, to ask: "How much is being charged for and how much is being given away free?"

After the committee meeting, Carpenter disclosed he had inadvertently been on something of a pill-popping trip recently. The little yellow tablets a doctor had prescribed for the senator's indigestion really were "downers," it later turned out. For several weeks, Carpenter said, "I was asleep almost by the time I hit the front door. It solved my nervous stomach but my wife was giving me hell for sleeping so much." Now the solon is back to ordinary tummy soothers.

Here, There, Everywhere

—Hawaii's ombudsman Herman Doi said in two years of investigating complaints against state and local governments, the government is right 64% of the time. Nebraska ombudsman Murrel McNeil said the time Nebraska state government is found correct in a complaint situation is "substantially higher" than 65%. "We've got a pretty good state government," McNeil allows.

—Check signals: Instead of the legislative fiscal analyst being forced to move to accommodate those federally-financed law clerks for the Nebraska Supreme Court, it is legislative bill drafter Jack Wilson who must now find new quarters.

—In the judgment of Secretary of State Al Beermann, "any relationship between Nebraska's corrupt practices (election) law and modern-day political campaigning is purely accidental." The law has 19th Century roots.

—Strictly personal, a belated thank you to the management of this paper, allowing this transient to cover a couple of days at the U.S. Supreme Court and be enthralled with seeing Justices Black and Harlan, now history book figures. Probably everybody has forgotten it was Nebraska Sen. George Norris who rallied behind Black, when his Klu Klux Klan membership became an issue. Said Norris: "Justice Black is being subjected to all this criticism because he is a liberal, because he wants to bring the Supreme Court closer to the people, not because he was a klansman" —Look for a bill in the 1971 Unicameral requiring local grand juries to meet and physically inspect county jails, with indictments when state law sanitation specifications aren't being complied with.

—Three out of every four illegitimate children born in Nebraska last year had white mothers, the Bureau of Vital Statistics has reported.

—One of the all-time-great Mr. Dooley quotations: 'A fanatic is a man who does what he thinks th' Lord wud do if he knew the facts in th' case.'

Varner Makes 4 Suggestions Proposals To Move 2 UNL Programs Liked

Four proposals by University of Nebraska President D. B. Varner would move two programs from UNL to Omaha, initiate a new one for the Lincoln campus and possibly strengthen another.

The directors of the two programs that would be moved if the proposals are adopted by NU's regents expressed optimism over their departments' opportunities if moved to Omaha.

Robert D. Gibson, dean of the College of Pharmacy, which Varner suggested be shifted to NU's Omaha Medical Center, said the inclusion of pharmacy in a medical complex can be "very desirable."

Theodore D. Ernst, director of the Graduate School of Social Work, which Varner suggested be shifted to UNO, said he is strongly in favor of moving the program to Omaha.

Varner suggested initiating a two-year nursing program at UNL and talked about restructuring engineering education on the Omaha and Lincoln campuses.

One NU source said restructuring and meshing the campuses' programs would quite likely involve Lincoln's administration becoming the dominant one.

Kiernan Firing Case May Go to Supreme Court

State Justice Dept. action this week in the lawsuit filed by the State Roads Dept. Employees Assn. with the Nebraska Court of Industrial Relations has raised the possibility the suit may wind up before the Nebraska Supreme Court and-or result in future legislative action.

In a special appearance and demurrer filed by Asst. Atty. Gen. J. J. Duggan, it was contended the court has no jurisdiction over the dismissal of highway engineer Richard Kiernan, fired for questioning the professional qualifications of State Engineer Thomas Doyle.

It was further contended that LB15, the controversial 1969 law authorizing public employees to organize, violates the Constitution by giving the court authority in disputes involving state employees, since this gives the judicial branch of government authority over the executive branch.

In line with this reasoning, Duggan Saturday instructed Doyle and Roy Gardner, deputy state engineer for administration, to refuse to answer any questions from Douglas Marti, legal counsel for the Employees Assn.

Duggan's alvices was followed by Doyle and Gardner after they answered an Industrial Relations Court subpoena to give depositions in preparation for the scheduled Oct. 20 hearing on the lawsuit.

It was anticipated the scheduled hearing may likely center on the constitutional questions rather than issues raised in the lawsuit.

The Employees Assn. and Kiernan contend Doyle's action abridged Kiernan's freedom of speech, was in retaliation for his work in organizing the association and sought to harass development of the association.

Canney pointed out that electric bills may now be paid in branch offices in Havelock and College View.

A more convenient method of paying bills, he suggested, could be closing the two branch offices and either using return envelopes for billing or making arrangements for paying bills through banks or other businesses.

Canney said he intends to initiate a comprehensive study to determine costs and feasibility of putting overhead power lines underground in residential areas.

Underground lines are generally more reliable against power outages—such as Lincoln has suffered from time to time because of storms—and also more pleasing on environmental and aesthetic grounds, he said.

The LES board also directed LES officials to explore the possibility of phasing out two branch offices for payment of electric bills and of offering a different method for payment of electric bills.

Canney pointed out that electric bills may now be paid in branch offices in Havelock and College View.

A more convenient method of paying bills, he suggested, could be closing the two branch offices and either using return envelopes for billing or making arrangements for paying bills through banks or other businesses.

Canney said he intends to initiate a comprehensive study to determine costs and feasibility of putting overhead power lines underground in residential areas.

Underground lines are generally more reliable against power outages—such as Lincoln has suffered from time to time because of storms—and also more pleasing on environmental and aesthetic grounds, he said.

The LES board also directed LES officials to explore the possibility of phasing out two branch offices for payment of electric bills and of offering a different method for payment of electric bills.

Changes in Church-State-School Area of Law Due?

By DICK HERMAN
The Nebraska Supreme Court, rarely required to deal at all with the sensitive subject in the 20th Century, is about to begin making law in the church-state-school area. It could mark the beginning of a period of fairly brisk litigation, given the present by more militant posture of private school sponsors.

The high court last week listened to oral arguments in the Hartington school district's lawsuit against the State Board of Education. The northeast Nebraska school sued when the state board refused to okay a federally-funded program involving the lease of classroom facilities in the town's Catholic high school.

In cooperation with the church school, Hartington wants to hold remedial classes there, open to both public and parochial students. Hartington was successful in its suit against the board at the Lancaster County trial court level.

If there are situations in Nebraska where public schools presently are renting space in parochial schools, it isn't known to authorities in Lincoln.

Could Increase
But it is the position of Catholic educators the practice certainly isn't illegal, thinking of the attorney general to the contrary. And Paul O'Hara, Nebraska Catholic Conference executive officer, speculated a wider employment of the rental practice might be seen if the Supreme Court sustains the District Court in the Hartington case.

In communities where public schools are crowded and classrooms available in non-public schools—O'Hara cited West Point and Omaha as examples—the future could bring situations of partial public school use of parochial facilities on a rental basis.

An essential complaint currently raised to federal officials by Catholic educators in Nebraska is the refusal to allow federally-financed remedial programs to be conducted on church school premises.

That is seen by the state as violating Nebraska's strict constitutional ban against public aid to non-public educational enterprises.

The Hartington case is one in which a public school board wishes to conduct Title I programs on private school premises.

Established Ability
The Hartington case also, Lincoln attorney Robert Crosby insisted to the Supreme Court, involves nothing more than the established ability of a public school to lease outside facilities.

Who would challenge the right of a school board, faced with acute room shortages, "to lease space in the basement of a Catholic church," if it wished, Crosby wondered.

Asst. Atty. Gen. C. C. Sheldon, subjected to questioning by five of the seven high court judges, urged the bench not to confine itself to the narrow issue of rental powers.

"I don't think the school district would want the court to resolve only the limited question," he said. Repeating the U.S. Supreme Court's new doctrine of avoidance of "excessive entanglement" in church-state-school areas, Sheldon said "if we ever establish the precedent of winking at the constitution" for a spot good, "we are taking the first step toward abrogating the constitution."

Sheldon avoided a discussion of the question of dual enrollment in public and non-public school—an issue never before the Nebraska Supreme Court.

"In our country, because a student is enrolled in a Lutheran School or another parochial school," Crosby asserted, he can't be prevented from also being a public school pupil. The constitution forbids a religious test for receipt of public services.

Warnings Repeated
The assistant attorney general repeated warnings uttered by U.S. Chief Justice

Warren Burger in June against perils to religion and community relations when the matter of church schooling becomes deeply involved in the political arena.

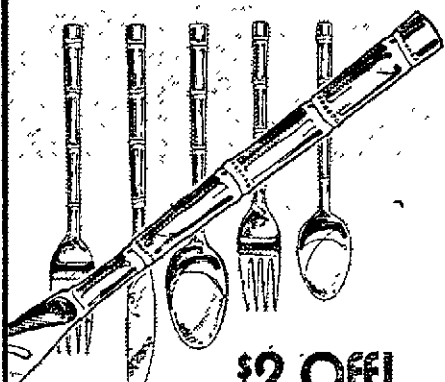

Beyond the Hartington case, a test lawsuit looms over the 1971 law requiring public schools to freely loan textbooks to private school students. When the Legislature passed the statute, senators did so publicly saying they were bucking the constitutional question to the Supreme Court.

Youth-Oriented Programs Help Thousands

Tom is 7.
A student at Hawthorne Elementary School in Lincoln, he lives with a brother and sister and his mother, who works all day away from home.

Tom never sees his father, but he has a Y-Pal through the Lancaster County Sheriff's Y-Pal Program, which matches youngsters with adults whose companionship would otherwise be denied them.

Raymond is 15.
Since the age of four, when he was orphaned when his parents died in a fire, he has lived at Cedars Home for Children in Lincoln.

A mentally retarded youngster, he tried the Boy Scouting program for the retarded at General Arnold School, but "couldn't make a go of it."

Back at Cedars, he became a Cub Scout through the "intercity" program sponsored by the Boy Scouts.

Now, for the first time in 11 years, Raymond is in a foster home, strengthened partly by the achievements he made as a Cub Scout.

Felicia is 16.
A high school junior, she has long been active in the programs and clubs of the Malone Community Center at 2030 T.

Since she was a child, she has shown "a deep passion for learning" according to those around her, a passion encouraged by the Malone Center's programs.

Recently, she was announced a winner of a scholarship from the United Nation's Tour and Travel Seminar.

Three of Thousands
Tom, Raymond and Felicia are just three of the thousands of youngsters who are the focus of the many youth-oriented agencies in the Lincoln community.

Tom, for example, is one of the 180 children who are paired with adult friends through the Y-Pals program, in operation for about a year through the cooperative efforts of the sheriff's office and the YMCA.

Tom and his Y-Pal, a married college student who lives on a farm south of Lincoln, have been seeing each other weekly since February.

The two spend a lot of time at the farm, where Tom has gone tractor-riding and fishing, and they've taken in a football game or two and have gone "exploring."

The result, program officials believe, is exposure to the male adult world that Tom would otherwise have missed.

Raymond is one of 850 boys in the area served through the two-year-old intercity scouting program, designed to help low-income and disadvantaged children from 8 to 20.

As a Cub Scout at Cedars, he became more confident as he accomplished things he never dared before.

Bobcat Badge
Although he cannot read or write, for example, his fellow scouts helped Raymond memorize what was necessary to earn the Bobcat badge.

And he 'was quite proud of his uniform," say Cedars of-

Nurses' Institute To Study Care Of Newborn

A nurses' institute for care of the newborn will be held Thursday at St. Elizabeth Community Health center where one of Nebraska's two neonatal (newborn intensive care) centers is in operation.

The institute is to acquaint nurses in other hospitals with the services and facilities of the Southeast Nebraska Neonatal Center at St. Elizabeth, to help them identify "high risk" newborn who need the services of such an intensive care unit, and to help them care for such newborn until the baby can be transferred to a neonatal unit.

Neonatal centers are being encouraged on a regional basis throughout the country to help reduce infant mortality, said Mrs. Reatha Westrope, assistant administrator for nursing service at St. Elizabeth.

Thursday's workshop faculty will include neonatologist Gerard Van Leeuwen, chairman of the pediatrics department at the University of Nebraska College of Medicine in Omaha. He is consultant for the St. Elizabeth neonatal unit.

Pediatricians and obstetricians representing all Lincoln hospitals will be faculty members for the 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. workshop.

ficials. This made a great difference in him," a difference they believe helped them find a foster home for him.

At the Malone Center, Felicia has been both a participant and a volunteer in the settlement's many programs over the years.

At as young an age as 10, she was rounding up friends to participate in Saturday sessions in effective communication and in French. "She has a positive approach to the problems of the world," say Malone leaders.

All three of the youths are involved in programs that are aided, directly or indirectly, through dollars Lincoln citizens give through the United Fund drive, which is under way.

Y-Pals, aided through the cooperation of the YMCA, will be helped additionally by a $12,232 matching grant when the Y-Pal program merges with the Youth Service Bureau.

The 1972 Community Services budget includes $55,000 for the Boy Scouts, and $5,800 has been tabbed specifically for the intercity program.

The Malone Center's estimated budget for 1972 is $63,414.

At the Malone Center . . . youngsters enjoy activities in a recently instituted program for preteen girls.

Medical Schools Share in Glory

By BESS JENKINS
Nebraska's two medical colleges are sharing the reflected glory earned by their June, 1971, graduating seniors who scored the highest weighted FLEX (Federated Licensing Examinations) average among the 30 states and Province of Saskatchewan using this licensure test.

"I've believed for some time that our two medical schools in Omaha were second to none and had no reason to hang their heads this confirms it," said Rex Higley, director of the State Health's Dept.'s Bureau of Examining Boards.

Higley referred to his report from the Federation of State Medical Boards in Fort Worth, Texas, of all individual states showing Nebraska's 80.0 was the highest mean weighted averages scores this June.

Eighty-five or about half of the June graduates from Creighton University School of Medicine and University of Nebraska College of Medicine took this licensing approach—a consecutive three-day test shortly after graduation.

Mean Average Score
The mean average score is derived from results of the first day's basic science examination, a second day of clinical science subjects and a third on clinical competency.

Higley said the other 50% elected to gain licensure through National Board examinations in which the final third part cannot be taken until after the medical graduate completes his internship or first year of post-graduate training. The first and second parts are taken during medical school training.

National board exam standings now available (for 1970 graduates taking third or final part this spring) placed Creighton 25th out of 77 medical schools and Nebraska 46th. It was reported the median grade was 81.4.

National board licensure is recognized by practically every state today. The FLEX method is nearing this point with state participation to increase from its present 30 to 39 by next June. Both cost the applicant the same: $100.

Just a point below Nebraska at 79.0 was Oregon's three FLEX candidates. Louisiana, with 205 taking the test, had a 78.9 average, and Utah, where 14 took the exam, scored 78.2.

The 107 Nebraska medical graduates taking FLEX in 1970 came close to its 1971 score with a 78.8 average. This put them in third place after Oregon's 83.6 and Utah's 79.8.

In a mean weighted averages compilation of those taking FLEX between June of 1968 through June, 1971, Nebraska came in third highest with 79.0. This covers 447 graduates, with a 10.5% Flex failure rate. Bettering Nebraska slightly in the four-year period were Oregon's 17 participants with a 79.2 score and Utah's 53 being highest with 79.7.

(c) New York Times
New York—The Nixon administration has now drafted a basic blueprint for controlling inflation in Phase 2 of its economic stabilization program that bears promise of a reasonable measure of success, if it attracts the broad cooperation and support from all segments of society that the President has sought.

Whether it does achieve the desired results—a sharp reduction in inflation, the creation of many new jobs and greater economic activity—will depend on the institution of workable wage-price policies by the new agencies constituted to prepare them and the degree of determination in Washington to see that the standards to be established are enforced with the same vigor that has prevailed in the current freeze.

The second phase of economic controls, which will come into effect on Nov. 14 after the wage-price standstill expires, won't immediately and broad support from the business and investment worlds but preliminary skepticism from labor's ranks.

Top labor officials withheld immediate reaction to the President's plans for Phase 2 of his control program, pending a special meeting of labor leaders Tuesday.

The financial markets anticipated the new administration program rather warmly before Nixon's discussion of it on Thursday night, then greeted his decisions quite warily the next day. The stock market closed on a downturn, still wondering about specific details of the wage-price program.

It was clear that businessmen, economists and investors were pleased with the administration's general outlines for reducing inflation without placing the economy in a straitjacket of severe restrictions on wages, prices, credit, profits and dividends. They liked the form and the flexible nature of Phase 2.

Awesome Big Red Machine Rips Mizzou, 36-0

By HAL BROWN

Columbia, Mo. — Nebraska, a near-unanimous choice as the nation's No. 1 team in the first four weeks of the 1971 football season while playing on its own artificial turf, proved here Saturday afternoon they also deserve to be No. 1 on natural grass.

The Huskers turned Missouri's Tigers every way but loose — the defensive Black Shirts refused to do that — in rolling to a 36-0 triumph, the worst beating suffered by a Missouri team since 1958 when Oklahoma won a 39-0 contest.

The Husker defense which had found various ways to lose that coveted shutout in the first four games, was hardly threatened by an inept Missouri offense.

The Tigers found they couldn't run against the Husker Black Shirts, gaining only 9 on 23 rushes. And while they gained 104 yards in passing yardage, Husker defenders latched onto one-third as many Tigers passes as did Missouri receivers with the NU Black Shirts intercepting three times.

But the Husker Black Shirts also got a lot of rest during the afternoon as one had to wonder whether the NU offense or the Missouri defense would wear out first. The Husker offense ran off 112 plays while the NU defense had to be on the field for only 59 plays by the Tiger offense.

That edge was even more decisive in the first half when the Huskers ran off 65 plays to only 29 by the Tigers. The average number of plays for one team normally is about 75 for an entire game.

The answer as to which was going to wear out first became obvious in the second quarter when the Huskers put 16 points on the scoreboard after being blanked in the first quarter for the first time this season.

By the time the Huskers punched their first score across with 8:45 left in the first half, they already had racked up 16 first downs, but had been turned back by a tough Missouri defense at the Tiger 10 and the Tiger 20.

It was a credit to a Missouri defense that the score wasn't worse than 36-0, but if you let water drip on a rock long enough, it will eventually wear a hole in the rock.

And that's about what the Husker offense did to the Tigers, hitting them repeatedly up the middle and occasionally going wide on Jerry Tagge runs.

Tagge was so effective that he rewrote his own Nebraska total offense record with 319 yards, erasing the 301 he gained two years ago at Minnesota. The Husker quarterback, who yards and running for 85 on nine carries.

His 319 yards was more than half of the Husker total of 603 gained by the Huskers, only 25 short of the team record against Hawaii in 1954.

The 603 yards was most ever given up by a Tiger defense, bettering the 602 gained by Oklahoma in 1956.

And the Husker defense was so tough that Missouri didn't get into NU territory on its own until early in the fourth quarter — after the score was 30-0 and the Husker reserves had entered the game to work against the Tigers' first team.

The Tigers then moved from their own 42 to the Husker 30

Dallas (AP) — The Wishbone-T monster that Texas coach Darrell Royal created rose up to crush his third ranked Longhorns 48-27 Saturday in the form of a determined eighth-ranked Oklahoma and pint-sized Greg Pruitt.

Running the intricate triple option offense to perfection, Oklahoma's Big Red rolled over and around baffled Texas with the 5-9, 179-pound Pruitt flashing for touchdowns of 1, 4 and 20 yards.

He gained over 200 yards rushing and averaging 10.8 yards each time he touched the ball.

"They just riddled us all the way around," said Royal, whose Longhorns embarrassed the Sooners 41-9 last year when Oklahoma used the Wishbone for the first time.

AL's East Loop Gets Milwaukee

Baltimore (UPI) — American League club owners voted Saturday to transfer the Milwaukee Brewers to the eastern division of the league.

It had been previously reported that the Chicago White Sox were slated to move to the eastern division.

The vacancy occurred when the Washington Senators moved to Dallas-Fort Worth.

The owners met in Baltimore Saturday and scheduled another meeting in Pittsburgh tentatively on Wednesday.

Baltimore, McNally Score Series Win

BALTIMORE (AP) — Dave McLuckey did it again.

That's what the Baltimore Orioles call Dave McNally, despite the left hander's feat of winning 20 or more games four straight years.

The Baltimore pitcher was reminded of the tag after he beat the Pittsburgh Pirates 5-3 with a three-hitter Saturday in the first game of the 1971 World Series.

"I've had it (McLuckey) so long it doesn't bother me," said an unemotional McNally in the dressing room after another McLuckey performance.

Again the Orioles took him off the hook, battling from behind after McNally surrendered three runs in the second inning. But this time McNally was around at the finish. He settled down and pitched no-hit ball over the final seven innings.

McNally said his second-inning problems were a result of poor rhythm and control.

"I was missing the plate by two feet," he said. "I just lost complete control of everything. It came back in the third. I don't know why."

What did Baltimore Manager Earl Weaver say to McNally when he went out to talk with him in the second?

"I told him, 'they got one ball out of the infield. They haven't hit the ball. Get the next hitter and we'll be all right,'" Weaver said.

Was McNally upset with the way things went in the second inning, the usually tight Baltimore defense committing two errors?

"No, I felt that I would get my control back and that the defense would tighten. I was rushing and overthrowing the ball. It was just a combination of my not doing what I should and lapses by the fielders."

"We're strictly human," added Weaver, after his Orioles had behaved in a super-human manner humbling the Pirates behind Merv Rettenmund's three-run homer and McNally's pitching.

Frank Robinson and Don Buford also homered in a display of Baltimore power that sent controversial Pirate starter Dock Ellis to an early shower and left a sellout crowd of 53,229 pleased at the continuation of the Orioles' amazing season-ending winning streak.

Murtaugh agreed that Ellis didn't have much at his command.

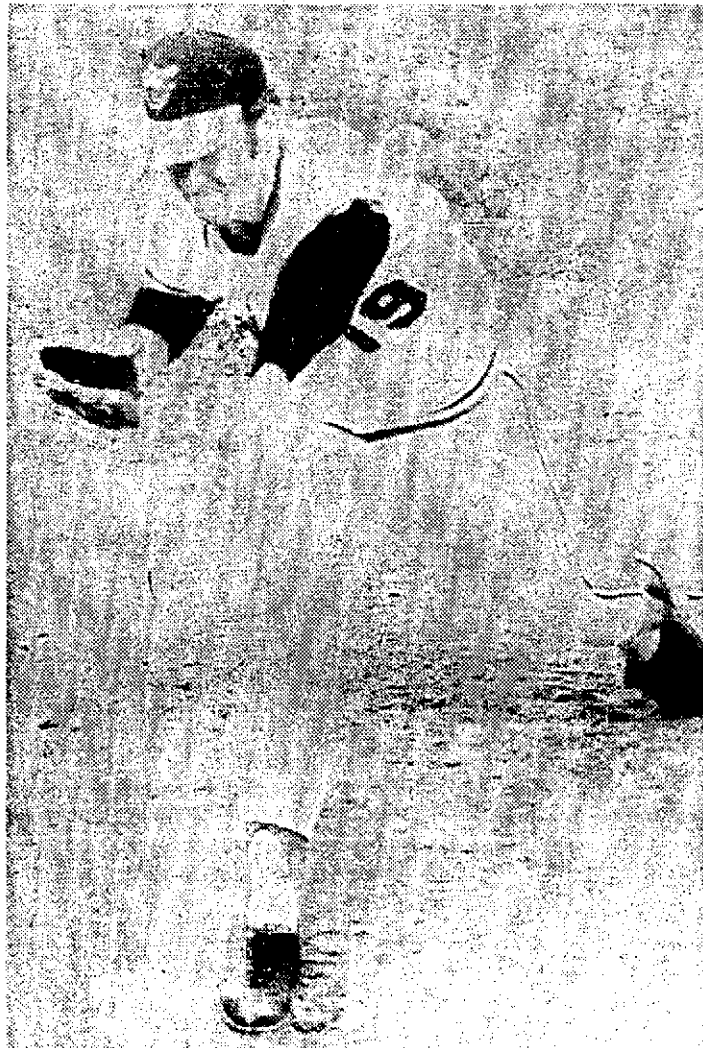

"He didn't have it today," Murtaugh said. "He didn't have his good fast ball or his hard slider."

Win Interests Tagge Most

By DON FORSYTHE

Columbia, Mo. — Nebraska quarterback Jerry Tagge was one of the last to know that he'd cracked his school single game total offense record with 319 yards against Missouri Saturday.

"Is that right? That's unbelievable," Tagge responded. "I was just happy and fired up because we beat Missouri the way we did. It was an incentive game for us. They beat us here two years ago and we were anxious to get back at them," he said.

The win obviously was more satisfying than the record.

"Statistics are for after the season. I just want to be a good quarterback and move the team," he emphasized.

Tagge had excellent success as a runner on the option play out of the spread formation.

"The defensive end was taking the fullback . . . and that's the way they should play it. They'd rather have me run the ball than Bill Olds. The only surprising thing was that they didn't catch me sooner than they did," he said of his runs of 25, 35 and 16 yards on the option.

Tagge-Rodgers Combo Tough

For the sixth time this season Tagge connected with wingback Johnny Rodgers for a touchdown.

"It was a play we put in at the half. They were taking him out so he ran a post pattern," said Tagge.

"I try to watch around and see what I can pick up," explained Rodgers. "Most of the time they see what I can do from the press box, but sometimes I can see things on the field that they don't. I told them I could run a post pattern out of a tight slot and they let me try it."

Rodgers claimed Missouri was as tough a foe as the Cornhuskers have met.

Offensive tackle Carl Johnson noted that some slight alterations in blocking assignments helped the Cornhuskers move the ball on the Tigers.

"They're good hitters and mix it around so much that it had me confused a little. But I'm happy with how it went. We changed our blocking from last year and took advantage of everything they gave us," he said.

Line coach Carl Selmer noted that the Missouri defense always forces some offensive mistakes. "We undoubtedly had mistakes again today, but we had fewer mistakes and had control of the game," he said. "If we can control the ball like that we'll be happy. The line really did get with it and did a good job."

Goose hunter Bill White of Grand Island retrieves three snow geese from out of the decoys, looking all the time for more geese to come over.

Waterfowl Prospects Promising

By BOB MUNGER

With the 1971 goose season a little more than a week under way (it began Oct. 2), and the current duck season one day old today, waterfowling is off and running for this year.

"It began none too soon to suit me," Bill White of Grand Island said. "I'd rather shoot geese than any other bird, and besides they're darn good eating."

Bill, a former Lincolnite who moved to the Third City when employed by the Hornady Mfg. Co. there, hunts a lot in the Plattsmouth vicinity where he was born.

Nebraska's goose season lasts through Dec. 15, but from Dec. 1 on only one Canadian goose a day may be killed in Keith County. A hunter may take five geese a day if he shoots all snow geese, but of this five only two may be Canadas or their sub-species.

The duck season is a divided one. It runs Oct. 9-31, then closes, reopening Nov. 4-Dec. 20 in the eastern half of the state, roughly divided by Highway 83. West of this line the season continues until Jan. 9. Duck hunters again are enjoying the point system of last year for bag limits.

"Last year I hunted quite a bit at the Plattsmouth Waterfowl Area," waterfowler White said. "We got pretty lucky a time or two and got some good shooting at snow geese."

"I also found out they are pretty good eating, too," he says.

Others are finding out the same thing, and many veteran waterfowlers are turning from the scarcer ducks to geese for their sport.

Prospects look good for this year for both ducks and geese. Ducks Unlimited reports from the breeding grounds in Canada are quite optimistic. There are more ducks on the prairies this year than last, and the migrations have already begun.

Pruitt Scores Pace Oklahoma Rout

Oklahoma coach Chuck Fairbanks said: "It's a chore to stop Texas' Wishbone. We executed the offense today. We had the better end of the Wishbone this time."

Oklahoma quarterback Jack Mildren said: "I believe we should be ranked number one after today."

It was Texas' first defeat of the year against three losses and the first time the Longhorns had lost to the Sooners since 1966.

It was the most points scored against Longhorn coach Darrell Royal since he came to Texas and was the most yardage ever yielded by his team.

Oklahoma piled up a 31-21 halftime lead after Texas took brief leads of 7-0 and 14-7 in the early going. Reserve quarterback Donnie Wigginton sped to touchdowns on runs of 5, and 44 yards and halfback Jim Bertelsen pulled three yards for another touchdown as Texas hung tough against the determined Sooners.

But Roy Bell ran three yards for a touchdown for the Sooners and John Carroll kicked a 26-yard field goal with one second left to give Oklahoma a big halftime lead.

Quarterback Jack Mildren of the Sooners scored on runs of 7, and one yard in the second half and Carroll kicked a 27-yard field goal.

The only other Texas score was on a 15-yard run by Bertelson.

It was only Royal's third loss in 15 games as coach at Texas against his old alma mater.

The game was a sweet victory for Sooners coach Chuck Fairbanks who installed the Wishbone T offense last year in an attempt to surprise Texas, and the Sooners were drubbed 41-9.

The 66th renewal of the rivalry began with Texas driving 44 yards after an Oklahoma fumble and Wigginton, subbing for number one quarterback Eddie Phillips, rammed it across from five yards out.

The Sooners quickly retaliated on a 46-yard run by Pruitt which set up his one-yard touchdown run. A 44-yard run by Wigginton and a three-yard run by Tell left it tied 14-14.

But runs of 4 and 20 yards by Pruitt in the second quarter put Oklahoma comfortably in the lead to stay before 73,580 fans in the Cotton Bowl, which saw the series record now 42-22-2 in Texas' favor.

Fort Worth, Tex. (UPI) — Quarterback Brent Blackman hit Steve Pettus with a six-yard touchdown pass with 68 seconds left in the game Saturday night to bring the Oklahoma State Cowboys from behind to a 14-14 deadlock with Texas Christian.

Oklahoma State field goal kicker Uwe Preuss missed a 39-yard field goal attempt with 23 seconds left in the game which would have given the Cowboys their third victory of the year.

The Cowboys' only other touchdown of the night came in the third quarter on a 19-yard run by Tommy Woods.

The Texas Christian got its points on two big plays — a 59-yard run by fullback Bobby Davis and a 54-yard pass from Steve Judy to fleet Freddie Pouncey.

Other than the four touchdowns, the game was marked by a lackluster offensive performance and a rash of turnovers.

TCU, for instance, had not made a first down until the play before Davis' touchdown run late in the first period.

Davis, who ran 19 times for 167 yards, got that first down with a 21-yard run just before he set sail on his 59 yarder. On his touchdown trip Davis broke through the middle of the line, cut to his right and outran Glenn Bonner to the end zone.

The Horned Frogs had also made just two downs in the second half when Judy hit Pouncey with the 54-yard bomb which drifted just over the outstretched fingers of Cowboy Tom Carraway.

Woods' touchdown came after Oklahoma State's biggest gainer of the night — a 24-yard pass from quarterback Brent Blackman to Dick Graham, plus a 15-yard penalty for piling on that was attached. That put the ball on TCU's 19 from where Woods ran in.

The tying touchdown was set up by a six-yard punt by TCU's John Hetherly which left the ball at the Horned Frogs' 36.

Oklahoma quickly took the ball in to score, but instead of going for two points and the win the Cowboys went for a tie. On the ensuing onside kickoff Oklahoma State recovered at TCU's 49.

Blackman negotiated the Cowboys down to TCU's eight, but a penalty set Oklahoma State back to the 22, at which point Preuss' field goal went wide. It was his second missed field goal attempt of the night.

AMES, Iowa (AP) — Colorado Coach Eddie Crowder praised his team's defense for making the big plays Saturday in the wake of the fifth-ranked Buffs' 24-14 victory over Iowa State.

"The big play on fourth-and-one when we held Iowa State after the field goal was the play of the game," said Crowder.

before monster back Dave Mason picked off a pass to end that threat.

Prior to that, Missouri's only appearances in Husker territory came when the Tigers recovered a Bill Olds fumble at the Husker 42 early in the game and when an NU personal foul moved the Tigers from their own 46 to the NU 39 midway in the third quarter.

On that Tiger intrusion, Missouri advanced to the Husker 15 before Bill Kosch picked off a pass at the one-yard line to keep the NU goal line untouched.

After bending, but refusing to break under Husker pressure in the first quarter, the Tiger defense finally did break in the second stanza when NU went on a 67-yard scoring drive in 14 plays.

Large Chunks

Tagge picked up large chunks of yardage on that drive with passes of 13 yards to Johnny Rodgers and 10 yards to Bill Olds, plus rolling out on his own for a 15-yard scamper.

The rest of the yardage was gobbled up on thrusts up the middle by Jeff Kinney and Olds, running behind superb blocking by the middle of the offensive line, center Doug Dumluer, tackles Daryl White and Carl Johnson and guards Keith Wortman and Dick Rupert.

Kinney got the final yard, going through a hole opened by right guard Wortman and right tackle Johnson, with 8:42 left in the first half.

Moments later, the Huskers' Monte Johnson was inserted at middle guard where it was thought his 6-6 height might help on the rush should Missouri decide to try a quick kick on third down from their own six, a tactic they had used twice previously.

Strategy Works

The strategy worked as Johnson burst through to block Jack Bastable's quick kick attempt and the ball squirted through the back of the end zone for a safety, giving the Huskers a 9-0 lead with 4:47 left in the first half.

The Tigers didn't try the quick kick again.

After taking the Missouri kick that followed the safety, the Huskers moved methodically 55 yards in 14 plays for another tally with 1:13 still left in the half.

The Huskers twice were faced with fourth and one situations. The first came at the Missouri 46 where a punt might have been the strategic thing to do. But head coach Bob Devaney, showing he had confidence in his offense, let them go for it and Tagge sneaked for the yard needed.

Colorado 41 and trapped George Amundson behind the line forcing the ball back to Colorado on downs.

"We are not physical enough to clamp down and hold someone off defensively," added Crowder. "We need interceptions and have to count on big plays."

Dean's interception with a

The second came at the Missouri 7. This time Tagge called on Kinney, who dived for two yards. Tagge handed to Kinney twice more, the second one a three-yard burst for the touchdown and Rich Sanger's placement made it 16-0 at halftime.

It didn't take the Huskers long in the second half to make it 23-0, going 72 yards in only six plays the second time they had the ball.

Two of those six plays were passes, from Tagge to Kinney to move the ball from the NU 31 to the Missouri 33, and from Tagge to Rodgers, covering 23 yards for the touchdown.

Rodgers took the pass at the five and carried Tiger Lorenzo Brinkley piggy-back style into the end zone with 7:57 left in the third quarter.

Score Mounts Up

The next time the Huskers got the ball, it was 30-0 before the Tigers got it back on the kickoff. This drive covered 81 yards in 15 plays.

Tagge hit Woody Cox with a 20-yard pass, Rodgers with a 25-yarder, both on third and long yardage situations, and handed to Olds for 21 yards up the middle.

Tagge kept the ball himself for the final yard with no time showing on the clock in the third quarter and Sanger booted a fourth conversion.

Things were then turned over to the Husker reserves, who responded with a touchdown of their own and who kept the Black Shirts shutout intact.

Brownson Directs

The score came on a 51-yard march with Van Brownson doing the play calling, most of it running plays with the exception of a 19-yard toss to Glen Garson to put the ball at the Tiger 11.

Jeff Hughes carried the final nine yards around left end on a pitchout with 5:04 left in the game. Sanger missed his first conversion kick of the day, but it mattered little since the score was now 36-0.

That final margin topped the 35-0 count the Huskers racked up against Missouri in the 1966 game at Lincoln and was the biggest NU winning margin in the series since a 48-0 triumph in 1922.

The victory was the first for Nebraska here since a come-from-behind 16-14 squeaker in 1965 and extended the Huskers' unbeaten string to 24 straight, dating back to a 17-7 loss here in 1969.

The defending Big Eight and national champions return home this week to face Kansas in a Homecoming Day contest at Memorial Stadium.

little more than a minute to play and the Buffaloes leading 17-14 was that kind of big play, added Crowder.

Iowa State fourth-year coach Johnny Majors concurred.

"We had a chance until late," Majors said. "Make that several chances. We dropped two passes at the one-yard line and they lost the ball once, so it could have been 21-14 for us at halftime."

Despite the defeat, Majors called the Cyclones' performance "the best of any Iowa State team since I have been here."

Majors, whose team went into the game at least a three-touchdown underdog, added: "Our players are more confident now and gave a winning effort. It's a shame we didn't win."

Crowder singled out two defensive players, linemen Carl Tabbi and Bud Magrum, as having played "a heck of a game."

The Colorado coach also liked the performance of tailback Davis, who finished with 113 yards "even though Iowa State shut off his bread-and-butt play — the option."

Senior Iowa State Tri-captain Keith Schoreder paid homage to Davis also.

"He's a hell of a back," he said. "I just hope he's the best one we see this year. We should have had them, but I guess that's water under the dam now."

"We played well enough to win, but we didn't," majors said as the Cyclones' dropped their 10th straight Big Eight opener.

"Colorado is just a great football team," he added.

Crowder complimented the Cyclones' for their effort. "I can't say enough about what a fine team Iowa State's the coaching job done by Johnny Majors and the way the Cyclones played."

Tagge Climbs On Charts

Columbia, Mo. — Nebraska quarterback Jerry Tagge moved into second place on the all-time Big Eight passing chart with his 234 passing yards Saturday.

Tagge now has a career total of 3,802, moving him past Oklahoma's Bob Warmack, who threw for 3,744 in the 1966-67-68 seasons.

Tagge started the season as the No. 9 man in the league's offensive passing career charts and in only five games has reached the No. 2 spot. The all-time leader is Kansas State's Lynn Dickey with 6,208.

Huskers' Balance Impressive

Columbia, Mo. — Among the people who stopped in to congratulate Cornhusker football coach Bob Devaney in the Nebraska dressing room Saturday was Missouri athletic director Sparky Stalcup.

"I think that's the best football team I've seen," said Stalcup.

"Thank you," replied Devaney. "We've got good balance."

The balance was evident Saturday as the Cornhuskers got their first shutout of the season while piling up 603 yards in total offense.

"It was a real good combination," said Devaney.

"The defense got the shutout it had been seeking and the offense, for the first time in five or six years, really dominated a Missouri team," he added.

"I'm real pleased to win. I felt we won quite decisively. This Missouri team, year in and year out, has been very tough on us," he said.

The Cornhusker coach acknowledged the Tigers had been tough again Saturday. The Cornhuskers failed to score in the first quarter for the first time this season.

"Until the latter part of the third quarter the game was tougher than the score showed," claimed Devaney.

One of the surprises for the Cornhuskers was the success of the option play. Quarterback Jerry Tagge, finished with 85 yards in nine carries.

"We didn't figure the option play would be a real good play. We thought the backbone of our offense would be to run right at them," Devaney said.

Devaney noted that the Cornhuskers had failed to cash in on some early scoring opportunities.

On the first drive Nebraska cleeted to try for a first down on fourth and three at the Missouri 10 and was stopped short.

"If it would have been the last quarter and the score had been tied 0-0 we'd have gone for the field goal. It was a matter of field position," Devaney said.

"If you miss the field goal Missouri has the ball on the 20. If you make it you kick off against the wind. We didn't make the first down, but we had Missouri in bad field position," he said.

"I felt we could get it and I was wrong," he added.

Lawrence, Kan. (AP) — David Jaynes, who spurned a scholarship at Alabama to play close to home, gunned three touchdown passes in less than 10 minutes Saturday to fire Kansas to a 39-13 smashing of slightly favored Kansas State.

The Jayhawks, unable to mount a serious threat behind regular quarterback Dan Heck in the first quarter despite excellent field position, turned to Jaynes, a sophomore from nearby Bonner Springs, Kan., in the second quarter.

Jaynes, who once announced he was going to Alabama to play for "Bear" Bryant, then changed his mind to stay home, completed 12 of 18 passes for 163 yards, playing barely more than two quarters.

Tight end John Schroll caught nine of his tosses for 88 yards, tying a school record for number of receptions.

Kansas Depth Aids Harriers

Lawrence, Kan. (AP) — David Hill of Southern Illinois captured first place in a dual cross country meet here Saturday, but Kansas swept the next five places to swamp the Salukis, 20-37.

Hill was timed in 25 minutes 13 seconds over the four-mile course at Lawrence Country Club. KU runners Terry McKeon, Dave Anderson, Kent McDonald, Doug Smith, and Jon Callen took the next five places.

Jaynes took Kansas 37 yards to a touchdown on the first series after he took over. The Jayhawks, opening their Big Eight Conference season, got the 7-0 lead following a short punt with Jaynes passing nine yards to Delvin Williams for the score.

K-State made a game of it briefly at the start of the second half, sweeping 57 yards in four plays with the kickoff. Dennis Morrison's 44-yard pass to Fred Barrill set up the touchdown that made it 10-7.

Jaynes exploded the Wildcats' hopes for a comeback, however, drilling touchdown passes of 13 yards to Schroll and 50 yards to Marvin Foster within a span of two minutes, 44 seconds midway through the third period.

Kansas, rebounding after two non-conference losses on the road, kept on the pressure with Bob Helmbacher's 32-yard field goal and Jerome Nelloms, one-yard plunge for a touchdown after a pass interception.

The Jayhawks then completed the rout with Williams' 46-yard scoring run early in the fourth quarter after Jaynes had departed.

Kansas State, which had given powerful Colorado a mighty scare the week before, salvaged a late touchdown on Bill Butler's 12-yard run.

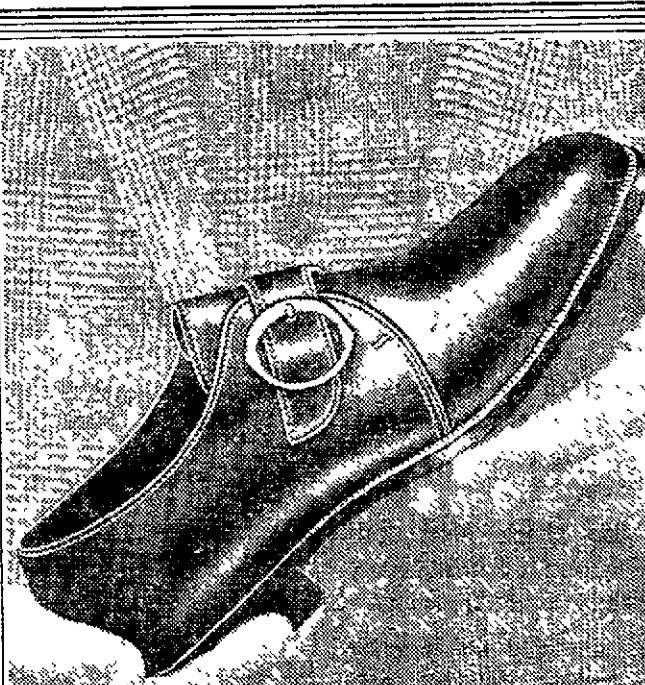

Aside from their two spurts, the Wildcats could do nothing offensively, as fantastic punting by Marc Harris and Heck and an aroused defense, spearheaded by Eddie Sheats, crippled the Cats' attack.

The KU homecoming crowd of 51,617 was the largest ever to watch a sports event in Kansas.

Trailsmoke

by Bob Munger

The owner of a cycle shop in Columbus, O., has what amounts to a great idea . . . a "noise park."

Faced with a possible recession in sales because of "No Motor Bikes Allowed" signs in Ohio parks and recreation areas, Dick Klamfoth built a campground that advertises for campers with motor bikes.

He reasoned that golfers have golf courses, swimmers have pools and even fishermen have streams and lakes. So why not a park for users of off-road vehicles? The result is Honda Hills.

Dick says he doesn't want campers without bikes because they won't be happy at Honda Hills. His 130-acre park is strictly for campers looking for a place to ride their bikes.

He has one restrictive rule — no riding at night. This is "beddy-bye" time and it is reserved for sleeping, not bike riding.

The park boasts five miles of trails and a hard-packed circular race track for those who are competition-minded.

Try Camping Now

Incidentally, if you are one of the many campers who hibernate on Labor Day and put your gear away until May, now is a beautiful time to enjoy the outdoors.

The fall plumage of deciduous trees is striking, and the weather perfect for enjoying the view. It does get pretty snappy at night, however, and you may need a tent heater to keep your tootsies warm, particularly if you are among those owning small children.

Every year, especially during hunting season, you hear about people who have died from using a portable heater in a tightly closed auto or trailer, so play it safe and let some air in your tent.

A tent may "breathe" enough to prevent such an accident, but don't forget this may not hold true when the tent is wet. Always open a window or keep the bottom of the tent flap open to provide circulation.

There are dozens of heaters on the market, no doubt most of them well worth the chips, but the most popular is undoubtedly the catalytic types that heat without a flame. These are available either fueled by white gasoline or propane, and both do a fine job. The propane ones are lighter in weight, more easily lighted and usually more expensive.

Catalyst Usually Platinum

In a catalytic heater, combustion takes place only when a catalyst is present, and platinum is most generally used. The catalytic reaction begins when the grid is heated — shortly thereafter total combustion takes place.

The hydrocarbons which make up the fuel combine with oxygen and free the total calories in the fuel, transforming the carbons into carbon dioxide and the hydrogen into steam. No poisonous carbon monoxide is released.

Another "plus" for the catalytic heaters is the fact that clothing, paper or even gasoline dropped on them will not ignite when they are operating. Even tissue paper will only char and smoke a bit.

Whichever of the many tent heaters you choose, it will free you for immeasurably more camping time, and at a time when it is purely wonderful to be out of doors. Just a little cold, that's all.

Grouse Season Closes Sunday

Grouse hunters in Nebraska will get their last chance at the state's sharptails and prairie chickens next Sunday, closing day of the 1971 season.

Gunners opened the hunt on September 18, registering better-than-expected success. Hunting pressure has been light since then, however.

According to reports from the field, best grouse hunting areas this year have been in the central and eastern Sand Hills.

The GM bid was about $350 per coach higher but included, according to the City Attorney Richard Wood who advised acceptance of the GM bid, a more appropriate tire with longer mileage.

Young Hunters Clinic 'Successful'

By BOB MUNGER

"If we had enjoyed decent weather this morning we would have had a thousand youngsters wanting to take this course," Larry Schenkel, chief administrator of the Young Hunters Safety Clinic, said.

As it was, even though plagued by a drizzling rain and a bone-chilling north wind, more than 200 boys and girls turned out for this first annual safety clinic, sponsored by the Lincoln Sunday Journal and Star with the cooperation of the National Shooting Sports Foundation.

"I gave up hunting on the opening day of the duck season to bring my young fellow out here," Carl Bodenstener of Lincoln said, "and after going through the instruction with him I'll tell you I'm darn glad I did."

Young Jeff York said he was impressed by the demonstrations — "especially the contest between the machine gun and the muzzle loaders."

Eleven-year-old Jeff was taking the course with the others, and he said he had learned a great deal about gun safety.

Nearly 500 persons were on hand for the clinic, held at the Isaak Walton League grounds southeast of Lincoln. Included were the 200 youngsters participating, some 150 adult volunteer workers and a host of parents.

Those taking the clinic went through five instructional stations. At station No. 1 they learned the correct methods of crossing a fence, using a dummy gun, and the basics of guns and ammunition.

At station No. 2 they learned how to get in and out of a boat with guns, and the basics of hunter safety. The third station taught safety in the field and the home, the basics of survival training and correct behavior in a duck blind.

At station 4 they were taught farmer-hunter relations, the basics of archery and how to load and unload a car. And the last station was where they got the opportunity to fire a .22 rifle at their souvenir targets.

At the conclusion of the clinic those passing the test, and almost all did, were given their Hunter Safety Course cards from the National Rifle Association as well as a certificate of excellence for passing the course.

"I can't thank the volunteer workers enough," Schenkel said. "The National Guardsmen were terrific, the Lincoln Jaycees and their wives, the Lincoln Police Department, the State Highway Patrol, the Lancaster County Sheriff's Department — the list just goes on and on.

'Should Hunt Outside Cars' Hunters Need Exercise

Minneapolis — Hunters can do wildlife and their own physiques a favor this fall by doing more of their hunting outside their cars, the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service says.

"A lot of small game hunters could use more of the exercise afforded by walking in the woods and fields," according to Forrest Carpenter, regional supervisor of the Service's Division of Wildlife Refuges.

In addition, they can avoid causing serious damage to wildlife habitat by refraining from off-the-road motoring in search of game.

In the northern sections of the Great Lakes and Great Plains areas, with their short growing seasons, serious damage can be done to vegetation in prairies and marshes by motor vehicles. Tire tracks from a single vehicle often can be seen on the prairies for two or three years. Compaction of vegetation often destroys important plants which afford food and cover to wildlife.

Tire ruts also invite erosion of soil from wind and water, adding to the damage to wildlife habitat.

Carpenter said federal regulations prevent off-the-road driving by hunters on federal wildlife refuges and waterfowl production areas. These regulations will be rigidly enforced this year.

Off-the-road driving also can constitute a fire hazard, he said. He added that hunting from a moving motor vehicle is illegal in most states as well as a way to invite firearms accidents that could have fatal results to the hunter.

"Roads are designed to furnish access to the hunter to hunting areas. If the hunter wants to help protect his sport as well as his bank account, he can start by doing all his hunting on foot," he concluded.

Restrictions against off-the-road driving apply on other federal lands as well as most state-owned properties.

HUNTING CLOCK

The following applies to any point in Nebraska that is due north or due south of each of the cities and towns. For each 9 miles west of any designated city, add one minute. Shooting hours are one-half hour before sunrise to one-half hour after sunset for big-game sunrise to sunset for wild turkey, and one-half hour before sunrise for all other species.

Omaha Project Gets Federal Aid Approval

Approval for a federal grant-in-aid has been given the Game and Parks Commission to assist the City of Omaha in building a swimming pool, bathhouse, and parking lot in Adams Park, according to Willard R. Barbee, Commission director.

Project cost is estimated at $216,000, with 50 percent of that amount to be paid by the Land and Water Conservation Fund. Another 25 percent will be contributed by the state, and the City of Omaha will bear the remaining costs.

As director of the Game and Parks Commission, Barbee is Nebraska's liaison officer to the Bureau of Outdoor Recreation, administrator of the Land and Water Conservation Fund on the federal level. Matching grants are made by the fund for acquisition and development of outdoor recreation facilities, and the states, in turn, transfer funds to political subdivisions for approved projects.

Leg or Head

Hunters in Nebraska must leave one leg or the head on pheasants and grouse for identification of sex and species.

"The State Game and Parks Commission volunteered a number of conservation officers as instructors, and private individuals from all over the Lincoln area turned out to help — I just can't thank them enough."

Larry also gave a tip of the hat to the Isaak Walton League, which volunteered the use of their new area for the clinic, as well as preparing coffee and sandwiches for the hungry workers.

Included in the many demonstrations during the day were the landing of the Lincoln police helicopter, rides on a Cushman trackster for the youngsters, tours through the State Highway Patrol demonstration van, a shooting contest between a gunman with a submachine gun and four men shooting muzzle loaders (the old-timers won, incidentally, to see which would first break off a four-inch post), a demonstration of the LPD police dog and precision big-bore rifle shooting by expert Steve Zinsmaster of Lincoln.

Was the clinic a success? "Yes," was the resounding answer from youngsters and adults alike. "Please have it again next year."

Building Of Canal Postponed

Washington, D.C. — Construction of the controversial Tennessee-Tombigbee Canal has been postponed by a federal court order. Citing potential hazards to the environment, the U.S. District Court in Washington, D.C. issued a preliminary injunction against the project.

The suit for the injunction contends that the environmental impact study submitted by the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers is misleading and incomplete. It asks that a full study be made before work starts, as required by law.

The 245-mile waterway would provide passage for ship and barge traffic from the Gulf of Mexico to the Tennessee Valley area. It also would create a massive pollution problem, according to the Environmental Protection Agency, when industrial wastes, including high levels of mercury, are routed from the Tennessee River into the Tombigbee.

EPA further stated that the redirected waters would create a stratified oxygen situation which would "alter the dominant fish species and fish food." It would inundate some 24,000 acres of wildlife habitat and intermittently submerge 46,000 acres more.

The suit stated that the Corps had not explained how it will handle the 260 million cubic yards of dirt that will be dredged from the canal. This is almost twice the amount excavated for the Panama Canal. The Corps has stated that the method for final disposition of the dirt has not yet been determined.

Congress authorized the project more than 25 years ago. EPA has recommended that a reevaluation be made, because the canal might not bring more prosperity to the area as originally anticipated and "a scenic and natural area will be irreversibly damaged for all time."

Anglers Distracted

Ever watch a fisherman-hunter come fall? He has difficulty concentrating on his fishing. His ears are tuned to shore noises, and his eyes are constantly moving to catch creature movements and observe cover patches.

As he moves along a shoreline, he occasionally pickers up and gives out with a bob white call. Then he pauses to listen. If a bob white call comes back, he smiles and records this area for attention later.

Occasionally a cock pheasant scolds him from tall weeds. "Okay, old boy," he smiles, "I'll be pluckin' your feathers before the season is more than an hour old."

Squirrels chatter from a tall den tree, and he notes an area particularly populated with young fox squirrels. He salivates a mite as he mentally savors a stew and all the usual trimmings.

Then, he notices a great blue heron suddenly spear a minnow, and another, just ahead, "Ho-ho" he conjectures, "a school of bass food. Where there's minnows there's bass." So he flips a shad lure into the spot, and the battle's on. He's a fisherman again, but not for long.

Lincoln High, with four finishers among the top ten, ran away with the Trans-Nebraska Conference cross country title over the Pioneer Park course in Lincoln Saturday morning.

Grand Island's Bob Hapwood won the individual crown with a 9:42 clocking, but Lincoln High's Jerry Wolford and Phil Hunt followed him across the finish line to pace the Links winning team effort.

Dave Hudson was fifth,

Bob Hapwood
Trans-Nebraska Champ

Adam Loos tenth and Bill Wendling finished 21st to account for Lincoln High's low team total.

"I expected those top three to be up close," Lincoln High coach Harold Scott admitted, "but in our other meets we have dropped off badly after that. The fact that Loos ran so well contributed greatly to our success."

Capital City schools ran 1-2-3 in the team scoring. Southeast, with John Gulick fourth and Pat Bridger sixth, finished as the runnersup, with defending champion Northeast third.

Individual medals were awarded to the top seven finishers.

1. Bob Hapwood, Grand Island; 2. Jerry Wolford, Lincoln High; 3. Phil Hunt, Lincoln High; 4. John Gulick, Southeast; 5. Dave Hudson, Lincoln High; 6. Pat Bridger, Southeast; 7. Paul Woods, Grand Island.

Prep Perspective

Will wonders never cease! The past week was filled with the usual number of phone calls and letters from high school football coaches wondering why their team isn't listed in the top ten ratings.

Then came a letter from a coach who is in the top ten, questioning the wisdom of the choice!

"I feel some concern over our placement in the top ten," he wrote. "We feel that we have not played competition in the same class as some of the others in the state."

"Even though we are unscored on and have held our opponents to a total rushing average of just 76 yards per game," he continued, pointing out the reason his club nailed down a top ten berth, "we know that the tough part of our schedule is still ahead of us. If we continue to fair successfully, then I will feel justification in your choice of our team in the top ten."

What a refreshing switch. Usually it's a coach whose team has lost a game to another unrated club who can't understand why he's not in the ratings.

Memory Flashback

When Northeast High junior Mel Knopp scored the first touchdown of his varsity career last weekend, it came on a pass from quarterback Gaylen Kennell.

If Kennell hadn't been in the Rocket lineup, it would have been quarterback Rob Ketterer. In case you haven't caught it, the names all start with a "K".

If you turn back the pages of time exactly 25 years, you get to a Lincoln High passing combination which accounted for a lot of Link TD's. Their names also started with "K" . . . Knopp to Kortum.

That was also Mel Knopp (the father) and Pete Kortum. The elder Knopp — he'll hate that label for he looks like he could still outrun most guys his age — was a pass-throwing halfback, while Kortum played quarterback. ("But that was a blocking position in the single wing system we used in those days.")

The Knopp-Kortum tandem were juniors the last year Ralph Beechner coached and seniors during Bill Pfeiff's first season, which should also produce a lot of memories for longtime Capital City prep football followers.

When You're Hot, You're Hot

Lincoln East, which claimed the Class A basketball championship last March, is rolling along — at least for the moment — as the No. 1 football team in the state.

But the Spartans — or any other school in Nebraska — will have to go some to match the momentum of winning established last year by Curtis High of University Place, a suburb of Tacoma, Wash.

Curtis was ranked No. 1 in the state in football after a 9-0 season. Then came a 24-0 basketball campaign and the school's first title.

In its AA league, Curtis captured titles in football, cross country, golf, basketball, wrestling and track. It reached the championship playoffs before losing in baseball and tennis. In all, the Vikings rolled up victories in 64 consecutive league contests before losing a baseball game in the spring.

The latest major sport superiority by a single school in Nebraska came when Boys Town was declared No. 1 in football in the fall of 1965, then won the basketball crown the same school year (1966). Creighton Prep turned the same trick in the school year of 1963-64.

Pro Football Races Predictable Except for Surprising Redskins

By Associated Press
For the most part, the National Football League's divisional races seem to be settling down as expected.

The most notable exception, of course, is the National Conference East, where Washington's amazing Redskins, the only team still without a setback, leads the surprising New York Giants and the equally surprised Dallas Cowboys.

The usual four-way rumble is underway in the Central Division while San Francisco has taken a slim lead over the rest of the West.

In the American Conference, Oakland and Kansas City have entered their annual two-way struggle for leadership of the West, Cleveland and Pittsburgh lead the Central and Baltimore has a slight edge over Miami in the East.

And it appears unlikely there will be any major changes as a result of this weekend's action.

The 'Skins will try to cement their hold on the NFC East as they go for victory No. 4 in their home opener against Houston on Sunday. And in Monday night's nationally televised (ABC, 8 p.m. CDT) game, the Cowboys will be aiming to stay on Washington's trail by defeating the visiting Giants.

Sunday's other games have Baltimore at Buffalo, Oakland at Denver, Green Bay at Detroit, Los Angeles at San Francisco, Miami at Cincinnati, Minnesota at Philadelphia, New Orleans at Chicago, the New York Jets at New England, Pittsburgh at Cleveland, St. Louis at Atlanta and San Diego at Kansas City.

The Colts have given up only 17 points, fewest in the league, while the Bills have allowed 97, second only to Philadelphia.

Daryle Lamonic has hit his stride for the Raiders, but they're still most potent in the AFC on the ground.

It'll be the irresistible force against the immovable object in Detroit as the Packers, with the best rushing game in the NFC, slam into the Lions' top NFC ground defense.

The 49ers open their new home, Candlestick Park, against the arch-rival Rams, who beat them 23-20 in preseason play.

Ken Anderson will probably start for the Bengals in place of stellar quarterback Virgil Carter, who suffered a shoulder separation against Green Bay.

The Vikings are No. 1 in NFC defense and the Eagles are last.

The Bears are expected to welcome running back Gale Sayers to the starting lineup, along with Kent Nix, taking over for Jack Concannon, who will be out for a while with a knee injury.

The Steelers and Browns will be battling for supremacy of the AFC's Central Division. Pittsburgh will be going for its first victory in Cleveland since 1964 and will have to contend with the conference's leading scorer in Leroy Kelly.

Bob Berry of the Falcons has thrown for 300-plus yards in his last two games but his team still ended up with a tie and a loss.

It's the second meeting of the year for the Chargers and Chiefs. Kansas City led the first game by two touchdowns before losing 21-14. San Diego is tops in AFC offense.

Pro Grid Violence Continues to Rise

By JACK GRIFFIN
(c) Chicago Sun-Times

Pro football has started breaking up the merchandise again, two quarterbacks and a defensive back being wrapped in bandages and carried away before last Sunday was finished.

The most serious of these was Cincinnati's defensive back Ken Dyer who suffered a broken neck and he was followed by the Bengals' baby-faced quarterback, Virgil Carter, with a shoulder separation.

The Bears, who could start an infirmiry of their own with all the people they have had in plaster of Paris, added Jack Concannon to the list of casualties and he's probably gone for the season.

It's been that way since the beginning of the long exhibition tour, a torn ligament here, a busted arm there, a knee gone and sometimes a whole career. Some teams, notably the New York Jets, were wrecked before they even got to the starting gate.

Bears Biggest Losers

The Bears now have lost their starting quarterback and their first round draft choice. Los Angeles took an early whipping and others have felt the damage.

There is a cry now and then for an end to all the carnage and explanations are offered on how it has come to be. Certainly, the injured have multiplied in recent years.

The players contend that the artificial turf, with its quick braking effects, adds to the normal dangers present on a football field and increases the possibilities for injury, particularly to the knee.

The tender-hearted say the rules favor the violent ones and that game officials often are unmoved by bloodshed.

Doctors repeatedly have advised the world that the human body is not manufactured for football, that if it was the knee would be on a swivel, not a hinge.

Probably, all these are true, but the major contributing factor is the very nature of the game. Professional football is built on violence. For all of its refinements, football still basically is a confrontation of violent men. And people get hurt that way.

It is unlikely that football players are any meaner now than they were 10 to 20 years ago. A guy has to have a streak of violence in him, or he doesn't last long in this game.

But football players are bigger and faster than they were 20 years ago and mix that with the nature of the men who play the game and injuries become understandable, if not altogether acceptable.

All this could be tempered, of course, by changing the rules, by overprotection, or at least more protection for those most vulnerable to attack.

Rule Changes Unlikely

But changing the rules means changing the game and football is not about to consider that. The old Roman colosseum played to standing room because the loser was usually carried off on his shield and they never tampered with the rules.

The fan who howls for so much blood, from the protection of the stands, might turn green and sick if he was exposed to very many locker rooms after the game.

Being a peaceful man, I do not advocate violence, but I do not know how to stop it in football. Not, while people are filing the stands to watch the loser go out on his shield and there are men willing to play the game.

Jockey's Life Hard For Gal

New York (UPI) — Despite attempts by male jockeys to boycott races in which women were scheduled to ride, Diane Crump became the first girl to race against the boys at a major track in February of 1969 at Hialeah, Fla. Later that spring, Miss Crump became the first member of her sex to ride in the prestigious Kentucky Derby.

While there still are male chauvinists in racing who contend that women are too fragile to participate in such a dangerous sport, the girls have begun to make definite inroads in the "Sport of Kings."

At 97 pounds, Mary Bacon is one of the hardest riding women in the business and her record over the past two years bears out her aggressiveness and savvy in the saddle. She won 55 races and was the leading apprentice rider at Finger Lakes in upper New York state in 1969. She rode and won three times as many races as any lady jockey in the nation last year, winning on 63 of her 697 mounts.

While Mary mostly rides at the smaller tracks in the southeast and midwest — she says she'd "rather be a big fish in a small pond than a small fish in a big pond" — Robyn Smith, a one-time Hollywood starlet, is doing well as an apprentice on the most competitive circuit of all — New York's Belmont-Aqueduct-Saratoga wheel.

Wins Big Race

Last August Miss Smith rode Beakins, a 6-year-old gelding, to a record time in a seven furlong dash at Saratoga. That didn't impress Mrs. Bacon, however. Mary feels that most lady jockeys are "weaklings" and that includes Miss Smith.

"I wouldn't want to be on the inside of her coming home if she had a horse lugging in," said Mary. "She's got a gimmick. I'm no model or a movie star. I'm a jockey and a good one. I'd like to see Robyn Smith ride seven, eight and nine horses on the smaller tracks."

While there remains some question as to who is the best lady jockey riding today, none is more outspoken nor has had a more controversial career than Mary Bacon.

Nothing seems to stop Mrs. Bacon from getting up on a horse — not the accidents she's involved in, not her pregnancies, not even the times she was kidnapped and threatened face-to-face with a gun.

"Look, I've broken my back and I rode in three races the same day I had my baby," said the 21-year-old who has been married to jockey Johnny Bacon since she was 16. "If you want to ride, you go out there and do it. You go out to win. It's a business. One girl in a million will make it in this business. I want it to be me. Spills aren't going to stop me."

Perhaps, Mary's most remarkable feat was riding while she was pregnant. Although many people doubt the story, she insists it's true.

Rode Same Day

"The day my daughter was born I rode at Raceway Park in Toledo," Mary recalled. "I was on this old mare and we were dead last. I just started laughing right in the middle of the race because the mare was pregnant too, and her people didn't even know. She dropped her foal three days after I had my baby."

Mrs. Bacon also survived two nightmarish experiences off the track. In 1969 she was abducted near Wilkes Barre, Pa., by a part-time groom who reportedly had a "crush" on her. She was taken at knife point into a wooded area, but managed to break away and outrun her assailant.

Last May at Shively, Ky., a man police identified as her kidnaper, broke into a motel room Mrs. Bacon shared with her agent, Judy Wilson. During a struggle police say he shot Miss Wilson in the hand and neck before escaping. He was later arrested and is under indictment.

NU Coaches' Wives Live Football All Year Long

By HELEN HAGGIE

There's one attribute not one wife of the Cornhusker football coaching staff claims—that she manages her husband.

"The biggest chore a wife has is to manage to arrange things so that her husband has time to spend with her and the children," said Mrs. Bob Devaney.

So many people think that as soon as the last whistle has blown at the last football game of the season, football coaches have worlds of time on their hands.

But this just isn't so, coaches' wives gathered at the home of Mrs. Bob Devaney the other afternoon agreed.

As soon as the season is over, coaches head out over the state and country to recruit for the next year's freshmen team. They are gone so much, one wife said, that when her husband arrived home one evening in the middle of the week before small daughter had gone to bed, the tot asked him, "What are you doing here?"

Many Games

It is true some of the wives spend more time watching football games than others. Take Mrs. Cletus Fischer, for example. Her son Mike plays with the Southeast Knights. Saturday afternoons her husband is working on the Cornhusker football strategies and son Pat is on the squad. On Sunday, "when the Washington Redskins' game is televised we watch Uncle Pat." (Uncle Pat Fischer is a former NU football player and brother of Coach Fischer).

"Danny plays on Sunday for Leon's midget team and Tim plays sophomore football at Southeast either Tuesday or Wednesday," she added.

Mrs. Carl Selmer is another wife whose football watching is not confined to the Cornhusker games. Son Bryan plays on the Southeast reserve team.

Football activities of their husbands are not confined to coaching and recruiting, wives said. There are evenings when films of Cornhusker games as well as opponents' games are carefully studied—often at home.

And there are many, many appearances at meetings when a member of the coaching staff is the guest speaker.

Emotions

Emotions of wives concerning games are many. They are excited and nervous about outcomes as are all fans. Some bite their nails during tense moments of play. "And we'd lose a game if Maurine (Mrs. Jim Ross) didn't shred up her program," said Mrs. Warren Powers.

"If I wear one red outfit to a game and we win, I rather feel as though I should wear the same outfit to the next game," Mrs. Ross admitted.

During home games wives sit together in one section. Mmes. John Melton and Fischer sit on the ends of the row. "We spend our time passing Cokes to the rest. Next home game we're going to take waiters' towels and put them over our arms," Mrs. Melton said.

Mrs. William Thornton, who loves it in Nebraska after coming from Toledo, Ohio, said that for a bit son Bill, 7, wondered why his daddy (Coach Bill Thornton) was away from home so much.

"But Bill took him to practice one afternoon and now Billy understands," she smiled.

'Summer Best'

Coaches who have the "upstairs duty" (watching the game to see where the Cornhuskers can make advantageous adjustments in the play of the game) can be injured, Mrs. Selmer said.

"When Carl was in the press box he got bursitis from leaning so hard on the table. They need to wear elbow pads when they work up there," she added.

The wives all agreed that the times spent at bowl games were wonderful. But year after year, they believe, summer is best.

"It seemed so short this year," one said. "With fall camp starting so early and the first game on Sept. 11, it seems as if we had hardly put the 'Go Big Red' clothes into mothballs when it was time to take them out again."

Coaches wives plan their activities around the busy schedules of their husbands and do their best to keep superficial troubles from them.

The most satisfying part of being a coach's wife is to have her husband come home "all smiles and grins after we've won."

To a woman, NU football coaches' wives agreed they wouldn't have their husbands doing any other job—as long as they are as happy with coaching as they now are.

Adoptions 'Fluid'; Fewer Babies Available

More chance for homes for us.

By MARJ MARLETTE

Families are waiting, hearts outstretched, for many more than the number of babies available for adoption this year.

It's a joyful situation for children who need parents and the couples who get them . . . a desperately disappointing one to loving families who want to adopt—and must wait.

In a state of affairs most often described as "fluid," adoptions in Nebraska and the nation have seen great changes in a short period of time.

'No Longer'

No longer must he be Caucasian, healthy, and an infant to be enthusiastically placed with a family . . . which no longer must be unable to produce its own child . . . have a nonworking mother always on the homefront . . . live in a middle class neighborhood . . . or absolutely provide two parents.

Developments in Nebraska adoptions have come fast, including:

—An increase in the number of mixed race babies, and in both black and interracial placements, essentially taking them off the "hard-to-place" list.

—An increase in families adopting others of the "waiting" children — the handicapped, the retarded, the older child

—More babies being adopted through the gray market (placed by doctors and lawyers, without benefit of home studies and casework services)

—Apprehension that the scarcity of babies may lead to more activity on the black market, where babies are sold under the counter for profit. A few such cases have been reported recently in the state.

Happy Aspects

One of the happiest aspects of adoption today is that, while many of the usual white, healthy babies are being placed, so too are youngsters such as Gary, who is mixed black and white, Sara, who is Indian; Jeanine, who has an uncertain heart condition; Colleen, Frank and Johnny, 11, 8 and 7, and came in one family package; Darleen, who is slightly retarded, and Jack, who is old—13.

A few years ago, these children would have had only permanent "temporary" care, in an institution or a foster home, to look forward to. And nobody would have done anything about it.

Today, they all belong to families mature enough to accept their problems and loving enough to help them overcome some of them. All, except Jack, who doesn't yet want to lose his identity with a new name, are being adopted.

Part of the change has come because of greater public acceptance of differences among people—particularly important in interracial adoptions.

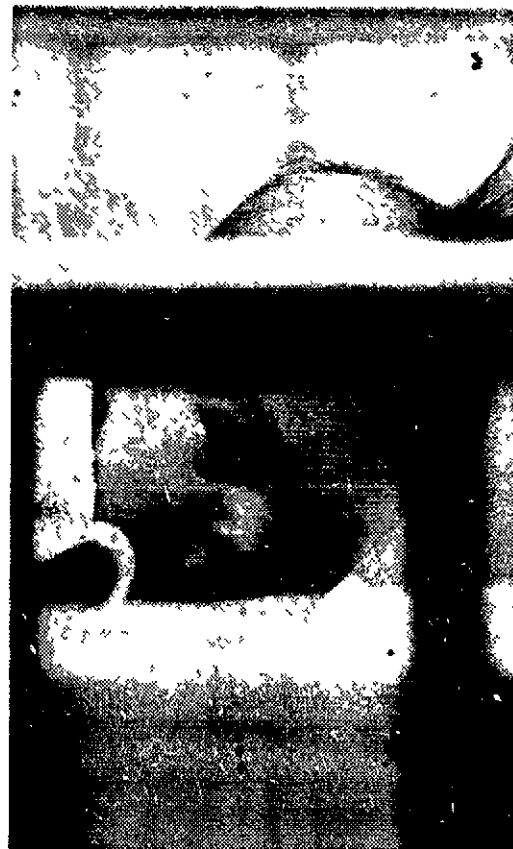

Part has come because many warm and stable parents want to help those who need it most.

Large Part

And another part, a very large part, has come because agencies and caseworkers no longer offer only the "perfect" child to adoptive parents, but are themselves sold on the potential of all children to bring happiness to some special family.

(Occasionally a modern-day social worker will assert that this could have happened before . . . that it wasn't the families

Fewer to adopt.

Family of Four Fed for Under $1

The other day one of my favorite food editors struck a nerve. Annette Ashlock Stover wrote that vegetables need special attention when served with a simple roast or chops.

Now I know that Mrs. Stover meant simple as in unadorned, but I still couldn't get past that adjective.

I thought of the San Francisco cab driver who once told me, "Every night is Saturday night except Saturday night—and Saturday night is New Year's Eve." To me any night you serve a roast or chops is Saturday night. Make that loin lamb chops and it's New Year's Eve.

Nostalgia

I remember when my two oldest children were in grammar school. There were four of us to feed then (the late 1950s) and I used to plan to buy the main dish for the whole family for a dollar or less. If I paid as much as three dollars for a roast I made sure that we would have three or more meals from it.

I was thinking about this the other day with near nostalgia when I realized that I still serve several main dishes that cost less than a dollar for four right now in 1971.

I'm big on omelets. I put together a great omelet from butter or so eggs and the better part of a stick of butter or margarine. That's certainly less than a dollar.

Chicken

Then I make a white sauce and grate just under a pound of sharp cheddar cheese into it for a tangy Welsh rabbit. Poured over toast it feeds four and squeaks in under a dollar.

I can feed four with one fried or broiled or baked chicken. I always pick up several fryers when they're on sale—less than a dollar apiece—and freeze enough to use until they're on sale again.

But other than hamburger patties and a few casseroles, that's about it.

I'd never thought about this too much until the other night when we had dinner at a really good Sicilian restaurant.

I ordered, for my main course, eggplant in tomato sauce. It was served in a piping hot casserole and topped with a little melted cheese. The whole thing was big and filling and absolutely delicious. I doubt if all the ingredients together cost 50 cents. Doubled, it would have fed my whole family.

Adoption Agencies' Goal: Find Homes for Hard-to-place Children

who wouldn't take handicapped or otherwise hard-to-place youngsters, but caseworkers who thought they wouldn't and didn't try.)

And they add, as they point to more black families adopting children—that these same black families hadn't really been encouraged to adopt children in years past. The adoption bureaucracy was then set up for middle-class whites only — not for everybody.

"It's a tremendously exciting time to be working in this area," declares Mrs. Ann Barrett, state supervisor of adoptions and foster home placements.

Agencies Cooperate

State and private agencies work closely to place children, cooperating when one agency has the family, another has the child, she said.

Confirming that here, as elsewhere, the number of traditionally sought after white infants had decreased in adoption availability, she gave as the reasons "a multitude of things."

—Availability of birth control devices.

—More unwed mothers keeping their babies.

—The recourse to abortions, for which women usually go out of state.

—More "gray market" placements.

Despite this, the State Division of Social Services reports placing almost as many children for adoption as before because "we're focusing on the others — the hard-to-place ones," Mrs. Barrett said.

Healthy infants of any race are now being placed in their first year.

This contrasts to an all-too-recent occasion several years ago when a state worker announced she had 12 healthy black or mixed babies available for adoption — and no one to adopt them.

Miss Lotus Nicholas, formerly with Lincoln Catholic Social Service Bureau and now on the staff of the Family Service Association of Lincoln, and Mrs. Jane McGoogan of the new Lutheran Family and Social Services in Lincoln and outstate, both report that more and more mixed and minority race children are being placed by their agencies, often in their first week of life.

Some children are even being sought through the interstate adoption agency, ARENA, they said.

"Parenting," it is noted, is now more concerned with the development of successful human beings and the encouragement of happy people relationships than with the carrying on of a family name and characteristics in the traditional way.

Applications Closed

Intake of applications for white babies and toddlers has been closed at the state agency, Mrs. Barrett said, though 30 families on the waiting list — some for two years — will still be served when babies come along.

By doing this, "We've been able to zero in on older children, those with disabilities, and sibling groups. And we've been very successful."

Families are being sought for these youngsters, both for adoption and for short or long-term foster care, she added. "They're the ones we need now."

In searching for love and a home for each of their wards — who often come to them by court action — caseworkers of the state social services are accepting applications for single parent placements.

And they've found that single parents can work out well for the older child of school age. We've placed both boys and girls, and with both men and women of all races," Mrs. Barrett said.

Of special concern in home studies of single applicants is provision for providing a healthy image of the other sex for the child — possibly through an aunt or uncle, grandfather or grandmother, Mrs. Barrett continued.

"We want our children to have as normal a growing up experience as anyone else."

(Many mothers work, and this too is no longer a deterrent to adoption or foster care as long as feasible plans for child care are made, she said.)

State Help

Subsidized adoptions — in effect for sometime in a number of states — have been authorized in Nebraska in a bill introduced by State Sen. Fern Hubbard Orme of Lincoln at the 1971 Legislature. They are expected to be funded for implementation next year.

With state help on medical bills and extras, many long-term foster parents of handicapped and older minority youngsters will be able to adopt them, and provide the emotional security that comes from being a permanent part of the family they already love, caseworkers point out.

Among private agencies, too, three have also decided to limit intake of applications for adoption: Family and Child Service of Omaha, Family Service of Lincoln, and Child Savings Institute of Omaha. Lincoln's Catholic Social Service Bureau and others are contemplating a similar step, it was learned.

An upswing of adoptive applications six to eight months ago has caused a backlog of approved families waiting for a child, Don Moul, casework supervisor for Family Service, explained. Although intake is closed, the adoption program is "going full swing and we're catching up on families who had earlier made application," he said.

Lutheran Family and Social Services has not closed intake, but, Mrs. McGoogan admitted, "there's no shortage of adoptive couples."

How soon intake will be open depends on the availability of children for adoption, agency representatives said. It is possible at least one agency may concentrate on other needed services and go out of the adoption field entirely an observer suggested.

As to the direction adoption is now taking, caseworkers in the field agreed — to more intensive work finding homes for all hard-to-place children.

And a continuation of the demand-supply situation that gives each baby to be placed, black, Indian, Spanish, and mixed, as well as white, "the pick" of many good homes to find just the right one for them.

Agencies licensed to make adoptive placements include—

Catholic Social Service Bureau, 215 So. 15th St., Lincoln, 68508.

Child Saving Institute, 619 So. 42nd St., Omaha, 68105 (intake closed for normal healthy children.)

Quotable Quotes

Some quotable quotes from women during the week:

"You are only vulnerable in that there are too few of you, 26 against 630 men at present. You can't write mistakes down to experience quite as men can." — Margaret Hilda Thatcher, British secretary of state for education and science, speaking of woman's place in the House of Commons.

"I have always been in love with two men at the same time. The man and my father, or the man and my son. I take care of my man and my son the same way; the only difference comes down to the sleeping hours." — Actress Luciana Paluzzi, in an interview.

"If acting is what you want, what you need, what you are, there's a tendency for it to be all embracing, so you find it hard to have a life of great harmony." — Actress Genevieve Bujold, in an interview.

"I've never liked to paint . . . I don't care about politics. I don't live in reality, really." — Paloma Picasso, daughter of artist Pablo Picasso, jewelry designer.

"The insane hunger for bad shows and bad toys is the problem. It's because we are not giving our children the real values they need for growing up." — Eda Leshan, moderator of "How Do Your Children Grow" on public television, speaking of children's TV programming.

"We are now on the threshold of seeing sexual problems handled the same as a headache or a stomach problem. We're finally getting out of the old hangups." — Dr. Sallie S. Schumacher, director of the Long Island Jewish Medical Center's human sexuality therapy and research program.

At the annual fall court of awards Senior Girl Scout Troop No. 135 presented membership pins to a three-generation family, active in scouting. Mrs. Max Meyer (left) received a 25-year pin. Mrs. Meyer's daughter Mrs. Leslie Boslaugh (center) and her daughter Marguerite Boslaugh received 10-year pins. Of the adults registered with the troop, four received 15-year pins and two 10-year pins. Ten troop members received 10-year pins.

Message of Love Rises From Couple's Ordeals

By GLENDA PETERSON

The romance of Josef Korbek and Erna Von Thun in Czechoslovakia during the early '30s found expression despite the fact they did not share a common language. He spoke Czechoslovakian and she spoke German. Both knew only a little English.

"You can imagine how hard it was to tell the lady I love her," Korbek, now 65, recalled in an interview. Back then, in his early 20s and his heart needing expressin, he bought a book of English phrases and memorized a declaration of love in English, but the right opportunity to express it never presented itself. But when Erna announced that she was leaving Czechoslovakia for one year of study in London, he finally found the right words.

"But I love you, I want to marry you," he blurted. She went away to London, and by the year's end, both had polished their English well enough to exchange marriage vows in 1933.

The couple had worked in the Salvation Army for 22 years in Prague, Brno and Plzen, the three largest cities in Czechoslovakia, when the Communists took over the country in 1948 and the Korbels' persecution began.

Through their Salvation Army work the Korbels preached religion, especially to the young, an act intolerable in the Communist state.

In 1949 Korbek was arrested. He was held 1 1/2 years without permission to see his wife and three children before being sentenced as a traitor to 12 years in prison.

He calls the time in prison "endless. I was tortured and so . . . What's the word?" he turned to his wife for help. "Yes, worked. I was so worked that I was . . ." He spoke the second troublesome word in Czech, depending on her to translate to English. "Crazy," she suggested. "I was not crazy!" he rebuffed, as he sought to explain the psychological and physical torture that wore on the mental well-being of political prisoners in the compound, called the Camp of the Dead by the Czechoslovakian people.

"We were starved the first three years," Korbek said. "They intended for us to die." The inmates ate bats and roots of grass in an effort to appease their incessant hunger. "When Stalin died, the food was improved a very little," Korbek recalled.

Mrs. Korbek, dressed as her husband in the conservative navy blue uniforms of the Salvation Army, sat listening intently, ready to help her husband with his story.

Her life during this time was by no means easy either. When her husband was imprisoned, she and their three children, then 6, 9 and 12, were kicked out of their house in Brno and ordered by the government to leave the city and live in a "solitude place." When she found one, the Communists refused her permission to live there, and the family had to set up residence in a tent on a prairie outside Prague.

Finally, Mrs. Korbek was told she could work as a nurse in a Prague hospital if she passed a political test. With fear, she appeared before the investigating committee. She was asked: "We know you are the wife of a state political prisoner and we want to know if you agree with the Communist government."

The dilemma of the women was terrorizing, for she did not agree with the Communist government, did not want to lie and say that she did but knew her answer would determine whether she got the job that she needed to provide food and shelter for her children.

"I agree as far as you act in the spirit of Jesus Christ," she replied, an answer that she said seemed to perplex her tormentors. After a long pause and hushed consultation among the investigators, one announced, "We refrain from testing you anymore." She got the job.

There is beauty in their appearance—this old couple, both with silvery hair and sensitive eyes that have felt much pain. Both are deeply religious, and found strength in their beliefs during tragic persecution in the home country they loved.

"We have no interest in making propaganda against Communists," Korbek reiterated twice during the interview. "We are talking to glorify God's name."

Korbek finally was released from prison in 1959, his 12-year sentence cut short by two years through pressure from the United Nations. He returned to his family physically broken. "My nerve system was way down. I was unable to work. It took three years of intermittent hospitalization to get his health back to near normal.

One of the hardest crosses of the Korbels' lives was feeling responsible for persecution of their children also. Their eldest son was imprisoned and their youngest son was killed while serving in noncombat military duty. They were told by a fellow soldier that he was shot in the back, although the parents never found out for sure.

Finally, in August 1968, during Alexander Dubcek's brief "springtime of freedom," the two remaining Korbek children and their families escaped to Austria. They pleaded with their parents to come with them, but it was difficult for the elderly couple, already in and near their 60s, to pull up the roots nourished over a lifetime.

Then, in November and December, when it was becoming increasingly difficult to leave the country, first Mrs. Korbek and then her husband gained permission to visit their children in Switzerland. They never returned to Czechoslovakia.

For the next 2 1/2 years they worked for the Salvation Army among the beauty of the Alps, before following their children to the United States.

They arrived in Chicago May 5, and are now on a Salvation Army lecture tour of the Midwest which brought them to Lincoln last week. Their daughter lives in Denver; their son in Los Angeles. "I think in January 1973 we will move to Denver," Mrs. Korbek, 61, said, her eyes twinkling with anticipation.

"It's not sure," her husband insisted, mindful of his Old World role that gives him final say in such matters.

Mr. and Mrs. Josef Korbek . . . refugees from Czechoslovakia.

Basic harmony. In this day and age, nothing may seem to you so impossible to achieve. And yet, difficult as it may be to create within yourself some peace, it is not unattainable. But inner peace is the result of careful thought. To have real inner peace, and to be at harmony with the world, one must first sort out what he believes and know how his beliefs fit into the society in which he lives. Realism leads to peace in the best possible way, and it's never too late to begin.

House of the Week

This Small Ranch Home Is Large in Livability

By Associated Press

Small in area, but totally adequate in the number and size of rooms, this ranch provides sufficient livability to satisfy a family requiring three bedrooms as well as being a fine house for a retirement couple.

Architect Herman H. York, in response to a request for a modest house, reduced the overall dimensions, yet retained two baths, a service area toilet, a covered entrance and a laundry. A bonus feature is a hobby room or home office.

Care has been taken to insure generous wall spaces for furniture placement, this being especially important in smaller houses.

And Design L-18 must be considered small, since it has only 1,175 square feet of habitable area in the main section, plus 275 square feet for the laundry and hobby room.

On entering the house, one sees a fireplace designed in keeping with the basic traditional character. Directly ahead is a view through sliding glass doors of the rear patio and garden. The traffic through all of it being on one side and across the shortest distance.

Your Nurseryman Speaks

Colorful Vines Disguise Dead Elm

Dutch elm disease has turned much of the eastern Nebraska countryside into bleak tree cemeteries. They are sad, sad sights for all tree lovers.

In fact, I was almost afraid to take my annual autumn trip to the hills around Nebraska City. I thought the dead elms might have destroyed the beauty of the other trees that are just now acquiring their striking fall color.

As a nurseryman, I should have had more faith in Mother Nature. As always, she had come up with an answer.

Yes, the dead elms were to be seen in both Indian Cave Park near Nemaha and Waubesa Park on the Iowa side of the Missouri River, but climbing into the highest branches of these dead trees were wild vines turned scarlet and crimson by the frost.

I have always had a natural repugnance for parasitic vines, but now for the first time, I'm seeing that they, too, have a function to perform.

A New Dress?

For example, in some of the older sections of this city are old pine and spruce trees that are still alive, but their appearance is so unsightly that they should probably be removed.

Why wouldn't it be a good idea to plant a quality, broadleaf evergreen vine such as euonymus vegetus in these old trees and, by improving their appearance, give them a new lease on life?

There is a vine of this variety on a high-trimmed old Scotch pine near South St. and Sheridan Boulevard and it's most effective.

Regardless of how hard he tries, man still builds some things that are not too much more attractive than dead elm cemeteries. For example the bare walls of some garages and warehouses are uninteresting. Moreover, some fences are not things of beauty.

Why not take the hint from Mother Nature and cover these with some kind of vine?

One broadleaf evergreen vine has already been mentioned. Another of the same family is euonymus coloratus. This plant not only retains its foliage in winter but also turns an attractive maroon-purple color.

Boston ivy produces a beautiful fall coloration, but should be given plenty of room in which to develop.

Will It Cling?

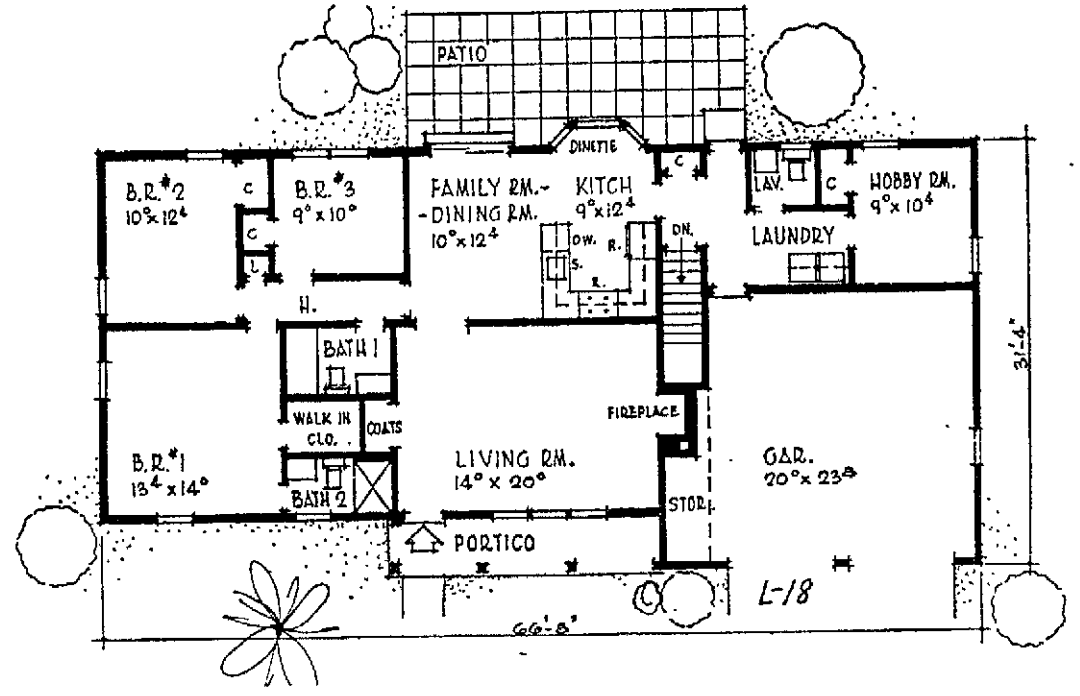

Clematis and silver lace vine are excellent for wire fences. Gold flame honeysuckle and climbing roses work well with both wood and wire fences.

Always ask about the clinging quality of the vine that you are buying. In some cases, a trellis may be needed. And, in other cases where the vine could dig its tenacles into a building or fence, another kind of plant might be better to soften the unpleasant view.

Nonetheless, vines are not getting nearly as much use as they deserve.

New England farmhouse styling marks exterior of Plan L-18.

Rooms are of generous size: halls are kept to a minimum.

Note that the hall space in the bedroom area has been held to a minimum.

Generous windows provide sunlit bedrooms. The master bedroom has a private bath and a large walk-in closet.

Wood shingles and vertical siding make up the entire side wall treatment of the exterior, giving it an early New England flavor. The entrance portico adds a sense of luxury and provides the exterior detail needed to create a focal point of interest where it is most needed.

Let Soil Cool Before Mulching

EMERY W. NELSON
County Extension Agent

Don't be in a hurry to mulch the perennial flowers and vegetables. Mulching early tends to keep the plants warm and they are likely to mold and decay.

Mulching is applied to plants to keep them cool rather than warm. Once the plants are dormant after a few hard freezes and the soil is cool, the mulch is applied. This gives them the protection they need from fluctuating temperatures and becoming too warm. It is usually the hard freeze that comes after the plants break dormancy that causes them winter kill.

Many materials are good for mulching. Soil around roses is probably the best. Leaves do a satisfactory job unless they pack down and smother some plants. Sawdust, straw are also satisfactory mulches. The straw should be clean and free of weed seed.

Leaves Can Be Hazard For Auto

Autumn leaves drifting by a motorist's windshield can create more than a pretty picture. They can produce a driving hazard.

Experts advise motorists to be especially cautious when fallen leaves on a road become wet. The leaves become extremely slippery, causing possible slides and skids. The message:

If a sudden shower hits while you're sightseeing during the fall, slow down.

Man and His World

Ignorance Is Not Bliss In Disposal of Wastes

Sewage disposal settling tanks fail to inspire the soul as does a range of mountains or the surf along an ocean beach or green expanses of prairie. But don't scoff at them. Within the muck one of the most fundamentally important of all life processes is occurring.

If it weren't for the microorganisms of the sewage, we couldn't live here, and if it weren't for us, neither could they.

We live together in mutual dependency in a never-ending cycle of resource use. We borrow nutrients from the plants we eat or from the animals which have eaten plants. We use them to construct and run our own bodies, and then discard them in our body wastes. The microorganisms, in turn, extract energy from our cast-off materials, breaking them into smaller molecules as they do. The large organic molecules ultimately are reduced to their component elements through this decay action and the materials in elemental form are again available for use by plants.

What Happens?

As population pressures force us to improve our water supplies, we are examining more carefully all phases of water usage, including waste water treatment plants, and discovering some startling gaps in our knowledge. In scientific jargon, we're finding a lot of "black boxes," places where we know what goes into a process and what comes out, but not what transpires within.

We really know very little, for example about the growth requirements of the microorganisms in our activated sludge sewage disposal plants.

If one wishes to encourage the growth of a crop plant, corn, for example, one adds fertilizer, eliminates weeds, provides water at the right time, and, in general, supplies the things known to be needed for the best development of the plant. But we can do this in only a very general way for the microorganisms necessary for the breakdown of sewage.

For one thing, we are still uncertain about the important organisms that we should be culturing in sewage sludge. Certain ones are present in almost all systems, but our inventory methods fail to distinguish the workers from the hangers-on in the sludge. Perhaps we should be cultivating some of the "weeds" in the system.

What's Crazy?

There are many ways we could change our cultural processes if we thought the rate of water treatment would be improved. For example, we might pump oxygen into the sludge, or heat the tanks. Maybe we should be adding nutrients.

Crazy idea you say? The sludge is full of nutrients. We use it as a fertilizer. To be sure it contains high levels of nitrogen and phosphorus and some other macronutrients, but what about the materials needed in minute amounts by all living things? Are these micronutrients limiting the growth of the sewage microorganisms?

We know that many microorganisms like to live on surfaces rather than deep down in the liquid that is their home. Should we redesign our holding tanks which presently have low surface-volume ratios?

Do microorganisms have a rhythm to their lives? Other organisms do. Perhaps the biorhythms of the sludge organisms don't correspond to our own diurnal periodicities and we load the system with wastes at the wrong time for their most efficient breakdown. Holding tanks that dumped the load at the right time would take care of this.

Patented Process

Are there microorganisms which could take care of phosphorus control in domestic sewage? Gilbert Levin and Joseph Shapiro think so and patented their process ten years ago. The trouble is, no one else can get it to work.

Their idea is simple. Bacteria can be made to take up more phosphate than they need for growth by extra aeration of the system and then induced to give it up by changing the system to anaerobic conditions. If it could be made to work, a simple modification of existing sewage treatment plants could go a long way to ease phosphate-induced eutrophication problems say the editors of Air and Water News.

Working with municipal wastes may not have the glamour of expeditions to the jungles of the Amazon, but the rewards of discovery are probably greater at home. And you don't have to worry about buying a movie camera — you'll never be able to sell your film to TV.

ICE Plan Aids Car For Winter

In having your car serviced for cold weather, let the word ICE serve as a reminder. I, C and E are the initials for the ignition, cooling and electrical systems, the three affecting a car's dependability when temperatures drop.

Car Care Council says these are the points that should get attention:

Ignition system — You may be well advised to invest in a tune-up if you're nearing the 10,000 mile mark since the last time that work was done. This usually involves replacement of distributor points, condenser, and rotor plus spark plugs (and sometimes wiring). The service includes adjustment of ignition timing, idle speed and automatic choke. The mechanic also will check the condition of various filters and pollution control devices.

Cooling system — There's more to cooling system maintenance than flushing the radiator and replacing the anti-freeze. The system should be pressure tested for potential leaks. Hoses and belts should be examined and replaced a necessary

The thermostat, which maintains engine temperature within specified limits, should be checked, too, if it's not working properly you could have either an overheating engine or reduced engine efficiency.

A faulty thermostat also can cause your car's heater to lose its effectiveness.

Electrical system — That sickening "click-click" that signifies a dead battery may be nothing more than a corroded connection creating an abnormal resistance in your starting circuit. Or it could be a problem in your car's alternator or voltage regulator.

Then again, it could be the battery itself. A battery's average life is from 26 to 36 months. To play it safe, have your car's charging circuit, battery and connections checked.

A safety check may be in order, too, including tires, exhaust system, lights, brakes, windshield wipers and washers, shock absorbers and steering mechanism.

Park Board Workshop to Hear Matzke

Stan Matzke, director of the State Department of Economic Development, will speak at the Friday noon luncheon of the Recreation and Advisory Park Board - Commissioners Workshop.

Robert Dula, chairman, said the one-day workshop will be at the Radisson Cornhusker Hotel.

Information will be presented on laws affecting board members, state and federal aid and advisory board responsibilities.

The meeting is sponsored by the Nebraska Recreation and Parks Assn. in cooperation with the League of Nebraska Municipalities, the Nebraska Committee for Children and Youth and the University of Nebraska Extension Division.

'Mavericks' New Mascot Name at UNO

Omaha (AP) — The University of Nebraska-Omaha mascot henceforth will be the "Mavericks."

The name replaces the Indian as the mascot, as members of the Student Senate voted to outlaw the long-time name of the team on the basis of discrimination.

The new name was announced during the homecoming game Saturday afternoon.

The name was submitted by cheerleader Wendy Meyer and voted upon the student body in elections the past week.

Final Council Action Expected Monday on Antinoise Ordinance

The anti noise ordinance, currently on the pending list before the City Council, is expected to be brought before the regular meeting of the Council Monday for final action.

If approved, the ordinance would forbid excessive noise from motorcycles, autos, trucks through the use of sound level meters.

Originally, the pending ordinance contained provisions which would also have forbidden excessive music noise from rock bands, as well as from garbage men before 7 a.m. in residential areas.

Those two provisions, however, may be amended.

City Attorney Richard Wood explained the ordinance, if approved Monday, would go into effect Oct. 26. Wood also indicated that a $700 sound level meter will be used to apprehend noise violators.

On another matter dealing with motorcycles, the Council will be asked to approve a resolution which requests that motorists drive with their headlights on during both the night and day.

The Council will also consider a resolution which calls for Council support of the concept of the construction of a multi-purpose building on the block at 11th and O Streets.

In other action, the council will:

Student Fee Control Bill Being Prepared

Nebraska Young Americans for Freedom (YAF) said it is preparing a bill for the upcoming Legislature session "to control the expenditure of student fees."

The bill, which YAF state chairman Terrell R. Cannon said will be introduced by State Sen. Jerry Stromer, is partially in response to last week's Human Sexuality Conference at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln.

The bill would deal with "the problem of student fees being used to further the projects of small interest groups, often acting against the interests of the United States," Cannon said.

An initial draft of the bill provides that no university or college "shall require or permit the imposition or collection of a student activities fee or charge from its students for the purpose of furthering any normal or political philosophy."

Cannon said "moral or political philosophy" will be further defined and that the bill is aimed at speakers and publications.

The bill, unlike some previously-proposed legislation, is not aimed at UNL's student newspaper, the Daily Nebraskan, Cannon said.

"The Daily Nebraskan has shown us just how many improvements may be made in one year," he said. "We see to reason why such improvements should not be continued, and extended, into other areas supported by student fees."

Part of the Nebraskan "improvement," Cannon indicated, is an expressed desire of University officials and Nebraskan staff members to end the use of student fees by making the publication self-supporting.

The enforcement provision of the bill has not yet been completed, Cannon indicated. The rough draft provides that "the state comptroller, upon establishing to his satisfaction that any university or college has neglected or failed to comply with the provisions of this section, shall immediately suspend the payment of the state appropriations to the university or college."

Pen Inmates 'Suggestions To Get Attention'

Gov. J. J. Exon said he will attend to the suggestions presented him by inmates at the State Penitentiary via Sen. Ernest Chambers.

"I am the governor of all of the people of this state, including those in our Penal Complex," he said. "and I certainly will give attention to their suggestions."

"I will also be replying to Sen. Chambers' letter," he added. "But I won't be 'going to press' with my reply. If he wishes to release my reply, he has the right to do so."

Since the list of demands bore no signatures, Exon said, they appear to be "demands from Sen. Chambers." It is impossible, he noted, to tell how many inmates may have had a part in drafting the demands, how many support the action or how many even know about it.

Warden Will Not Comment

Warden Charles Wolff declined to comment on the matter of 24 prisoner demands. Earlier in the week, he had outlined efforts that were already underway to improve conditions in the Penal Complex.

Renovation of facilities in the west cell block will begin next week, Wolff said, and individual television sets are being made available within cellblocks. Plans are also in the works to develop vocational training programs similar to those at the Men's Reformatory, and more reading material is being provided for inmates.

Speaking to a tour group led by Sen. Chambers, Wolff said he has consulted with University of Nebraska faculty members about the possibility of establishing, on an experimental basis, a black studies course at the Penitentiary.

Offices Closed Columbus Day

All federal and state offices will be closed Monday in honor of Columbus Day. The Lincoln Post Office will be closed and no delivery of mail will be made on city or rural routes.

The Lincoln Municipal Court will be closed. However, all other City Hall, and County Courthouse offices will remain open, as will banks and other businesses in Lincoln.

16 Counties Use 'Rehabilitation'

A vocational rehabilitation service is now available to people with emotional and mental problems in 16 counties of southeast Nebraska.

The services established through the Lincoln Regional Center and local mental health clinics are designed to develop, improve or restore the working usefulness of handicapped individuals to the degree that they may become satisfactorily employed.

The rehabilitation representative is Russell A. Roberts of Lincoln. Appointments can be made by contacting local mental health clinics.

Nebraska Hospital Assn. Meet Reimbursement Plan Backing To Be Asked

The Nebraska Hospital Assn. convention opens Tuesday morning at the Hilton in Omaha but the focus apparently will be on the mid-afternoon annual business session when members will be asked to endorse the Nebraska Hospital Reimbursement Plan.

This is the association's plan developed over the past year as its proposal to help hold down patient costs and encourage hospitals to participate in comprehensive health planning.

Injected into the consideration last mid-week, however, was another proposal, the Nebraska Health Responsibility Program, drafted by Nebraska Blue Cross which initiated the rate review and control idea with the hospital association last November.

Discovery: On Columbus' Trail in Spain

Story, Colorphoto by Bess Jenkins

With a few thousand magic carpets or about 50 jumbo jets on hand, it would be tempting to airlift Lincoln boys and girls over to Spain Tuesday for a Columbus Day field trip they could never forget.

Spain can't help but be the best of all places for such an observance in the Old World which Christopher Columbus left Aug. 3, 1492, or in the New World which he discovered Oct. 12 of the same year after crossing the uncharted Atlantic.

Young Nebraskans could leave textbooks behind. In Spain, Oct. 12 is a national school holiday.

It isn't here, though President Benjamin Harrison designated it a national holiday in 1892, four centuries after Columbus landed at San Salvador in the Bahamas. It's up to local schools and classroom teachers if the Admiral of the Ocean Sea even gets passing recognition this week (the official U.S. commemoration of Columbus Day has been moved from the traditional Oct. 12 to the second Monday in October, so it will be Monday this week).

Aside from this, it's really difficult to find anything in landlocked Nebraska to remind one of the Italian native who lived out his life as a Spaniard on land and sea.

Children in nearby Columbus get a small break. They can reflect on the fact that their city has its name because founding fathers came there from Columbus, Ohio, which was named in honor of the Old World explorer. And someday the boys might become "Discoverers", too, if they play football for Columbus High.

State Historical Society Director Marvin Kivett says there should be a reminder somewhere in some niche in a corridor of the Capitol. But apparently either the Sons of Italy in Omaha or state government hasn't done its homework.

A 1969 legislative resolution authorized placement of a bust of Columbus at the request of the Sons. But no one in the Capitol has seen it yet.

Now Spain. It is loaded with Columbus "show and tell" treasures.

At Barcelona on the Mediterranean coast, you will find Columbus recreated in a lifesize statue. It stands high on top of a tall sculptured column that would permit C.C. to play tag with today's flying machines if he weren't always so busy looking out toward the blue Mediterranean.

Replica of Ship

Anchored close by is a beautiful, brightly painted and polished wood replica of Admiral Columbus' Santa Maria — the flagship on his first journey to the New World.

Maybe you and your dad think the ship looks more like the smaller Pinta or Nina. At least one Lincoln ship expert raised that question before the color slide made last November became a newspaper illustration.

But Jaime A. Albarracin-Foz of the Spanish Embassy in Washington, D.C., who comes from Barcelona, insists: "No. It is a replica of the Santa Maria that is berthed at Barcelona harbor."

Barcelona tourism folders also claim the replica is of Santa Maria.

The cathedral and nearby Palacio Real Mayor (Great Royal Palace) in Barcelona also have Columbus connections. Inside the 14th century church one should look to the far left. There behind the usual protective iron grillwork is a baptismal font made of a single piece of white marble. It was there that several captive Indians brought back to Spain by Columbus from his first voyage were "baptized before an astonished crowd (of Spaniards)." The marble font looks big enough for a bath.

Columbus rode horseback clear across Spain after landing at Palos in the southwest March 3, 1493, from his exciting discovery on the other side of the ocean. How his accomplishments were praised as he was received by Queen Isabella and King Ferdinand! You can stand in the immense banquet hall of the Palacio Real Mayor where all this took place and look up the wall to see this festive scene reproduced in an unimaginably big fresco. The artist painted the Indians standing close to the discoverer as the royal pair bestowed the title of "Admiral of the Ocean Sea" on Columbus.

Exciting Harbor

'Omega' for Nail-Biters

Those who enjoy being "spooked-out" by the spooky will want to be sure that The Omega Man, next attraction at the State, is on their film-going list.

Charlton Heston again plays a spectacular sort of character—the last (or nearly so) man on earth. The setting is 1975 in Los Angeles. Heston as Neville, is a scientist who has developed a serum which has made him immune from a plague, which has spread over the world and killed or sharply maimed nearly everyone.

This threat of a bacteriological warfare presents a guawing theme to ponder.

Neville goes around LA by day picking up any new suit of clothes, car or knick-knack he so desires. By night, out comes a clan of mutants whose eyes are sensitive to light. These strange looking creatures are led by Matthais (Anthony Zerbe). Their reactions to scientific and cultural objects is destruction.

Seeing these white-haired, black-robed, nearly-eyeless persons can perhaps be compared to the first time the film-going audience viewed the creatures from Planet of the Apes. They are a nightmarish group.

The formulation of suspense becomes a major asset of the film. Each side is bent on destroying the other, but the night people are the real bad guys. The chases are hair-raising.

Although some may think that the movie roles of Heston as Moses, God and Michaelangelo cannot be paralleled, in The Omega Man Heston is really the savior of the world, or what is left of it. Since his blood contains the serum which makes one immune to the disease, it must be extracted to administer to that small group of young kids who have escaped into the hinterlands of California.

Accompanying the kids is a young and extremely pretty black woman, Rosalind Cash, with whom Heston manages to develop more than a casual relationship.

Some of the language is rather rough for the younger set, but there is a satirical and off-beat manner to the film which makes it engaging. It is certainly no masterpiece, but provides for a good evening of nail-biting. (GP)

John G. Avildsen directed last year's Joe, a hard-hitting film that raised some points to think about, but his Guess What We Learned in School Today, now showing at the Embassy, puts him back with the flunkers.

Not only is the photography worse than a bad home movie, but there is almost no story.

Basically, it is a parody of puritanical attitudes toward sex education of young people. One must believe in wholesome and correct explanations of sex, but this does not fill the bill.

Everyone in the film seems obsessed with sex and promiscuous behavior. This is the type of movie which makes it difficult for those movie industry good guys to have a chance. It is trash. Supporting it will only help to perpetuate it and its ilk. (X)

Taylor's Concert Wednesday

James Taylor

A fast-rising name in the pop field, James Taylor, will be heard in concert Wednesday at 8 p.m. in Pershing Auditorium.

A Boston product, he and his brothers Alexander, Livingston, and Hugh and sister Kate all have cut albums and presented concerts.

James has achieved success as both composer and performer. He has to his name such tunes as Carolina on My Mind, Sweet Baby James and Knocking Round the Zoo.

Taylor formed a musical group in the summer of '66 called the Flying Machine, but if disbanded after a year.

As a child he played cello and studied some theoretic music, but never continued his formal studies. He took up the guitar himself.

Taylor calls himself a "product of a haphazard musical environment, which makes me a folk artist."

A one-act melodrama, The Great Mid-Western Melodrama, is the story of Filbert Fearless, a shy poet from the East who proves himself truly courageous in the capture of the outlaw Two-Gun Percy and thus gains in marriage his true love, Daisy McSkew. Three dramatic recitations with pantomime accompaniment complete the program.

Scott Young, a drama student at Nebraska Wesleyan University, will again direct the group, be master of ceremonies and act in the plays. Players include John Burkhart, Trish Haynes, Arline Kushner, Kip Shawger, Greg Starkweather, Steve Taylor, Ronaele Tridle and Trisha Winters.

Ticket Demand Forecasts Ratings

By CYNTHIA LOWRY

Hollywood (AP) — The hottest tickets in Hollywood are free, those small printed cardboard rectangles admitting the public to the taping of a handful of network programs, mostly variety and game shows.

At NBC's Burbank studios, most requests are received for The Dean Martin Show and The Flip Wilson Show. CBS, at its Television City complex, receives most ticket requests for The Glen Campbell Show, The Carol Burnett Show and All in the Family.

The small "guest relations" staffs at each network, in charge of parcelling out the tickets, don't need to check the Nielsen ratings to find out how their programs are doing: ticket request tell them. When The Dean Martin Show had been on the air for a short time, NBC found it had built up a seven-year waiting list for tickets — and changed its method of handling requests.

Rags to Riches

About a year ago, the staff was scratching around for bodies to fill the small studio theater where the new Flip Wilson Show was being turned out. Three weeks after the series started, the show was "sold out" for the entire season.

When CBS's Merv Griffin changed the format of his late night talk show to definite themes instead of casual talk larded with music, there was an upsurge in ticket requests — certain evidence, they felt, that the folks out there in television land appreciated the revision.

Jay Michels, NBC's West Coast manager of guest relations, said his office receives literally millions of letters and telephone calls each year asking for tickets, including many for programs not seen on his network and for filmed programs which are made like motion pictures, without an audience.

"Our system is to fill requests, if possible, by sending tickets for a specific date to people who live within about 100 miles of Burbank," Michels explained. "The others receive 'guest cards' and we try to get them into the shows of their choice when they get here."

The Distribution

Muriel Horner, who copes with CBS's ticket distribution, tries to fill specific ticket requests, no matter how distant, but only for about one-third to one-half of the available seats. she reserves the rest for on-the-spot distribution.

That is the day-by-day routine. Headaches start when there are special audience requests to fill. When Andy Williams was turning out his weekly variety hour, his producer wanted an audience composed of the young people who bought his records and albums.

Since the Williams shows were being taped in summer, Michels was unable to contact his usual school and college sources and eventually was compelled to distribute about half the tickets weekly to the ordinary run of tourists in town.

When Johnny Carson is visiting Hollywood, ticket de-

With Faye Dunaway, Robert Foxworth and George Rose in the starring roles, William Alfred's prize-winning off-Broadway drama Hogan's Goat is the story of a man's destructive drive for political power among the Irish in turn-of-the-century Brooklyn.

This first NET Playhouse production of the new season will be telecast as the Special of the Week at 7 p.m. Monday on KUON-TV, other stations of the Nebraska ETV network, and nationally over Public Broadcasting Service outlets.

In the National Educational Television production Miss Dunaway recreates the role she originated when "Hogan's Goat" premiered with enthusiastic reviews off Broadway six years ago.

The story, written in verse, centers on Irish immigrant Matthew Stanton (played by Foxworth who starred in the TV series Men at Law). Stanton's long struggle for power has culminated in a chance to unseat the corrupt mayor of Brooklyn (at a time when Brooklyn was not part of New York City).

But his pride and his arrogant manipulation of those who love him, especially his wife Kathleen, bring tragedy in place of glory. Miss Dunaway will be seen as Kathleen. George Rose portrays Mayor Quinn.

Miss Dunaway, of course, is best known for her role opposite Warren Beatty in the film Bonnie and Clyde, which earned for her an Academy Award nomination. She is currently seen as co-star of the motion pictures Little Big Man and Doc.

Bonnie and Clyde bequeathed a kind of instant stardom on Miss Dunaway, but she says "everything" started with the role of Kathleen Stanton in the stage version of Hogan's Goat.

She views the play as "the sensual and spiritual struggle of a woman of good birth, convent-bred, yet dominated by her senses."

Kathleen Stanton is a lady, and Faye Dunaway's cool blue eyes and thin, finely-etched features provide physical reference to the character. But Kathleen Stanton's aloof dignity is more posture than protection "She's pretty much a victim," remarks Faye. "It's like being a movie star, and having people say 'oh of course you must be happy.' Someone in the play tells Kathleen: 'Nobody can hurt you. You're a lady.' Actually she comes from hurt and loneliness, from this desolate past."

In fact, says Faye, "there's enormous sensuality in her. She has a great many pent-up feelings. But she's been forced to deny her tactile responses."

OUR LITTLE TOWN

Hee Haw Finds
Green Pastures

I truly enjoyed my visit to Nebraska.
I love the people and the beautiful land.
Sincerely,
Archie

By GERTRUDE SKINNER
Ruskin

Alive and well at the other end of the tube is TV's favorite barber and teller of tall tales,
Archie Campbell.

It was my privilege to meet Archie during the summer and visit with him for a short time.
A fine man, he is a graduate of Maurice Hill College in North Carolina and the Chicago Institute of Art. He is bright, natural and so full of good humor that he fairly radiates charm.

Star of the country comedy hour Hee Haw, Archie and company were turned out to pasture by CBS network at the end of last year's TV season.

How fortunate for them Hee Haw people, since by independently syndicating their show they have found pastures considerably greener than when they were nibbling away at those of the network. Now seen from coast to coast over 200 stations, Hee Haw's ex-posure has just about doubled that of pre-syndication.

Despite polls which showed the program remained a constant 13th in a field of 250 regularly videoed spots, it was labeled "too country" by network executives and discarded.

Those same executives are now finding to their regret that there must be an awful big portion of country between Mahattan and Hollywood which enjoys humor that isn't shopworn and a little dirty.

'Luther'
At Doane

Crete — Luther, John Osborn's stormy portrait of the man who changed Western religious thought, will be produced at Doane College at 8 p.m. Friday and next Sunday and at 1:30 p.m. Saturday.
Director of the Doane student cast is Walter J. Barry, instructor in theater.

Circus Dates
Oct. 22 to 25

Omaha — Those who missed the Ringling Bros. and Barnum & Bailey 100th anniversary edition at Pershing Auditorium in Lincoln in August can see the same show Oct. 22-25 at the Omaha Civic Auditorium.

In addition to the famous brigade of clowns and elephants, the circus brings a variety of animal acts and feats of skill by talented performers.

Archie Campbell.

A great piece of that country is in Nebraska and in Our Little Town.

One should never define the likes and dislikes of others so I'll speak only for myself — humor can be old or it can be new but for me, by golly, it better be clean and Hee Haw is that — clean.

It may seem like a long haul from Shakespeare's Falstaff
"hands up" humor to Archie Campbell's Hee Haw humor to Ruskin's Main Street humor.
Not so. All three bait their victims with mischief then set them free with a merry laugh.

If you are a little ill from the sick humor dished up on all sides these days, read Shakespeare, watch Archie
Campbell on Hee Haw or visit
Ruskin. Recovery guaranteed.

Chadron State
Has 'Showboat'

Chadron — The lead parts for the well-known musical Showboat have been cast at Chadron State College. Director
Leonard C. Wagner, said the play will be presented Nov. 4, 5 and 6.

The romantic leads of Magnolia and Gaylord Ravenal will be played by Sina Polyakov of Alliance and William Huey of Lusk, Wyo.
Capt. Andy, will be portrayed by Dick Kettlewell of Omaha.
Kathy Kamerzell of Bayard will have the role of Andy's wife.

The parts of Julie and Steve will be handled by Zula Lewis of Chadron and Gary Oakley of Harrison. Joe and Queenie will be portrayed by LeRoy Jordan of Los Angeles, Calif., and Frankie Perdue of Chadron.

Museum's Big Map Traces Columbus Voyages

(New Spain) and go on to other discoveries.

On a Sunday afternoon last November, it was an exciting scene, too. Several Spanish naval vessels and their happy young crews were in. Dock hands were busy unloading cargo from many transports, including a Prudential Lines ship flying the Stars and Stripes and disgorging American cars, handled by cranes as if they were toy models.

C.C. in the Doghouse

Valladolid, about 100 miles northeast of Madrid, is a city nearly 500 years old when Columbus went there to live in 1504 following his fourth and final New World voyage. C.C. was more or less in the royal doghouse because of his handling of affairs in Hispaniola.

Between then and May 20, 1506, when he died, the admiral endured lots of physical and mental pain — physical from arthritis or gout, mental because Isabella had died and Ferdinand refused to restore to Columbus and his heirs the governorship of the New World and his rights in the American trade.

A little of the modest house in Valladolid where Columbus lived and died has been preserved in construction of the museum to his memory on the same site.

Most of the museum articles and authentic copies help tell the story of Columbus' four trips that took him as far as Panama and Peru but never to the Indies islands which he sought as a shortcut western route to the Orient.

The Valladolid Museum has an immense legend map spread across the entire wall of the biggest room on the first floor. It traces the routes taken by the sailor who knew "less about celestial navigation than a modern sailor in boot training in the 1970's."

All that remains of the great man today is entombed in Giralda Cathedral in Seville.

His tomb of steel gray is guarded by lifesize statues representing four of the seamen who served with the Admiral.

He Didn't Know

Now that the C.C. trail through Spain in the 20th century must end, something that Washington Irving wrote in his biography of Columbus may clue in Lincoln boys and girls on the significance of the explorer's contribution to history:

"With all the visionary fervor of his imagination, its fondest dreams fell short of the reality. He died in ignorance of the grandeur of his discovery . . . What visions of glory would have broken upon his mind, could he have known that he had indeed discovered a new continent, equal to the whole of the Old World in magnitude . . ."

That's a little sad, something like our 20th Century astronauts going to the moon and back but without knowing it was out there in space and without knowing they had reached it.

Bird Migration Source of Mystery

By FRANCES L. TAYLOR
Special Writer

As summer's heat yields to autumn's chilly dawn, and trees take on the colors of the setting sun, then somehow the migratory birds know that the time has come for their departure.

Most of them slip away quietly in September or October, moving along at a leisurely pace. Most species migrate individually; others go in flocks. Many travel only at night, seeming to prefer the full of the moon, while others travel in the daytime.

Many northern species pass through Nebraska during migration, stopping over for a day or two en route. Not every small inconspicuous bird in the branches is an English sparrow this time of year.

If it seems to be nervously flitting in and out, gleaning insects from the leaves and bark, take another look; it may be a warbler from the Canadian woods. Sometimes a flock of cedar waxwings can be seen feeding on firethorn berries. Some bird-lovers consider these the most beautiful of all the birds.

Blackbird Flight

The most spectacular event in the autumn migration from the Lincoln area is the departure of the blackbirds. After the first tinge of frost, they gather into large flocks, often mixing the various species — redwings, grackles, cowbirds.

They spend daylight hours in the grainfields and roost together in selected groves of trees at night. The last few days before they take off for Oklahoma or Texas, the flocks become tense with excitement, twittering and chattering noisily. Then one morning, after a pre-dawn caucus, they take their leave.

One evening in September, I watched the blackbird flocks fly in, silhouetted against a golden sunset. As each flock passed over a ripened milo field north of Cornhusker Highway, it swooped down in a smoothly flowing motion, as with perfect unity of thought, circled once around, then continued on its way toward the trees in Lincoln. Each flock left a few birds clinging to the rust-colored heads of grain. These were then swept back up into the swirl of succeeding flocks so that there was a continuous, rhythmic exchange.

Then I noticed that one flock passed directly over the trees where I live, with some of the birds dropping out into the branches. When I got home, the trees were all a-chatter with grackles. Possibly these were the same ones I had watched throughout the nesting season.

They had sparred with English sparrows for territorial rights, clung to their nests through windstorms and rain, visited my birdbath, banded together to ward off predators, and some had started all over again after their first efforts failed. They had been conspicuously absent the last few weeks, and it was good to see them again.

Missing Feathers

That evening, as I watched the flocks fly over, I wondered how many birds would make it all the way south and back again. There were so many with missing feathers — important flight feathers in wings and tail. One poor fellow had hardly any tail at all and flutted along at the rear of the flock barely able to keep up with the others.

Then I remembered that most birds moult before migrating. Perhaps these grackles were just in the process of getting a new set of feathers for their journey.

Three mornings later, I was awakened by a great chattering in the trees. The grackles seemed to be having a heated discussion over some very momentous matter, and that was the last I saw of that flock.

Record of Dates

Lincoln bird-watchers might like to make a note of the last date they see each summer resident in their neighborhood and report these to Esther Bennett at the Chet Ager Nature Center. She can use them in compiling a list of Lancaster County latest-sighting dates to be published in The Nebraska Bird Review, along with reports from the other counties. Likewise, the apparent arrival dates for each winter resident is needed.

Observers' records such as these continue to play a major role in man's effort to gain an understanding of bird migration. Banding methods and clever laboratory experiments have contributed a great deal of information, but the dynamics of migration still remain a mystery.

Five Million Pennies Would Build a Pool

Shell Rock, Ia. — The kids in Shell Rock have figured out that 5 million pennies, weighing 34 thousand pounds, when stacked would reach 4.9 miles high and when utilized would build a swimming pool.

They are trying to get 100,000 pennies from each state in the nation for their Penny Pool Project.

Contributions coming in include some interesting pennies like a 42-year collection of Indian head pennies which will be sold at auction to help build the fund that will build the pool.

Jim Gibson of the Security State Bank in Shell Rock is receiving the contributions.

TV Ticket Line Has Regulars

mand is huge. Michelis says there is an occasional contretemps involving "people who shouldn't be together."

"Once in a while you'll see a man, perspiring profusely, trying to run out of the theater after being informed that the cameras will sweep the audience. He's hysterical and trying to drag some woman behind him. That usually occurs during the winter—summer audiences are usually family audiences, people on vacations."

The Stars' View

Stars hate empty seats in the audience. One performer flatly refused to go on stage to start his live-on-tape show one night when he counted 36 empty seats around the bleachers. The harried head of guest relations hurriedly rounded up enough staff to fill the empty seats, but not before the furious entertainer had put in long-distance calls to the network president and a string of vice presidents.

All the shows have devoted fans, and there are "regulars" who make a career of attending tings.

Miss Horner knows the CBS regulars. She was particularly concerned when she learned from the security men that one Merv Griffin fan who was in the ticket line daily was actually living in her automobile in the studio's guest-parking lot. Ordered off the lot, the woman moved over to a nearby supermarket parking lot. Ousted from there, she drifted away.

"I don't know how she managed," Miss Horner said. "She was neat and clean and she looked well fed."

Scriabin Fan

New York (AP) — The young American pianist Ruth Laredo has scheduled playing the complete piano sonatas of Alexander Scriabin in two concerts at Hunter College here.

Miss Laredo believes that this will be the first time that a single pianist will have played successively all sonatas.

She also is the only pianist who has recorded all the sonatas.

'Pygmalion' Staged At Lincoln High School

By SALLY HOLTZCLAW
 Lincoln High

Lincoln High School students will present Pygmalion as an all-school play Thursday and Saturday at 7:30 in the school auditorium, 22nd and J.

Pygmalion, by George Bernard Shaw, is the play from which the musical My Fair Lady was adapted. Set in London in the early 1900's, it is the story of Eliza Doolittle, a slum girl who is transformed into a duchess by Prof. Henry Higgins. The professor accomplishes this change by instructing Eliza in proper English manners and speech. After achieving the fine graces of a duchess, Eliza encounters love and rejection and finally comes to dominate Higgins.

Kathy Babcock will be seen as Eliza and Landis Magnuson portrays Higgins.

Supporting players include Paula Harre as Mrs. Pearce, Rita Kumm as Mrs. Higgins, Barb Brauer as Mrs. Emsford Hill, Sue Adams as Clara and Chan Taylor as Col. Pickering.

Other cast members are

Blind Parents, Sighted Children Served by New Book About the Flag

A new Full-Vision Book, The Story of Our Flag, for blind parents of sighted children, has been released by the Christian Record Braille Foundation of Lincoln. It is the 11th book in a series. The story is embossed in Braille and plastic spiral bound with the ink print story and color pages.

With these books, blind parents are able to hold the attention of their sighted children.

These books are distributed free, the foundation said, as a result of generous support given by interested individuals and organizations. "Copies of this book have already been distributed to schools for the blind and regional branches of the Library of Congress," said Mrs. C. G. Cross, librarian at the Christian Record Braille Foundation. "Three thousand books were produced at a cost of about $5 each."

Blind parents with pre-school sighted children are eligible to receive the books free.

Mrs. Cross said that over 40 titles have been selected for production as rapidly as funds are available.

Stamped Envelope For Aging Conference

Postmaster General Winton M. Blount has announced the design of an 8-cent stamped envelope which will commemorate the White House Conference on Aging to be held in Washington starting Nov. 28.

First day sale of the embossed envelope being issued in the 6 1/2 size will be Nov. 15 in Washington.

The stamp is an abstract design created by Thomas H. Geismar of New York City. Printed in blue it shows a central hub, symbolizing the conference. From the outer edges, interlaced in circle form and converging toward the axis, are spoke-like lines representing the many states, national organizations and individuals, including professionals in the field of aging and older Americans themselves coming together to stimulate a new national awareness of the needs and circumstances of older people.

Collectors desiring first day cancellations may submit orders to the Postmaster, Washington, D.C. 20013, with remittance to cover the cost of 10 cents for each envelope.

COIN BOX 'Father of Navy,' John Barry Honored

By JOE PLANAS
Special Writer

The National Commemorative Society has struck a coin-medal in honor of John Barry, who earned the title of "Father of Our Navy" as far as the colonists were concerned.

Barry, born in County Wexford, Ireland in 1745 outfitted the first Continental brig, the Lexington On March 14, 1776, Barry's Lexington distinguished its commodore by capturing the British tender, Edward. The Edward was the first war prize brought into the port of Philadelphia.

The obverse shows a likeness of Commodore Barry with the dates of his life, 1745-1803, inscribed thereon. Beneath the bust of Barry is the title: "The Father of Our Navy."

On the reverse is a likeness of a ship, probably the Lexington. The inscription reads: "In 1775 Barry outfitted the first Continental Fleet. As captain of the Lexington, he captured the first British vessel."

The Barry coin-medal struck in sterling silver, is 39 mm in diameter.

Bigger Than Life

Arfive. By A. B. Guthrie Jr.; Houghton Mifflin.

The term "bigger than life" is one with little concrete meaning, but it can justifiably be used in the latest of the four-novel series chronicling the West from the pen of A. B. Guthrie Jr.

This is the final volume, and if not the best, it certainly ranks well toward the top. Arfive ends at about the time of U.S. involvement in World War I, winding up a tale that actually began in about 1830.

In Arfive, Guthrie has chosen as his theme the conflict of Midwestern and Eastern Victorianism with the rather loose attitudes of the West, in this case Montana.

Schoolteacher Benton Collingsworth moves to the town of Arfive to find a saloon and a house of prostitution active and tolerated, even enjoyed, by the townspeople and the cowboys from the surrounding ranches. To him, they are abominations and should be stamped out.

To the equal protagonist of the epic, rancher Mort Ewing, these are facts of life, neither all bad nor all good.

Yet as the book develops, Ewing and Collingsworth respect and even like each other, held together by the tie of honesty. Through the years, Ewing, as a member of the school board, is thrown into conflict with the "professor," but in each case defends him when it is necessary.

This is not a Western in the common meaning of the term. It is not so much what the characters do, but how they think and feel, which sets this novel apart from the norm.

Arfive is a compelling book, one of the few in current literature that is difficult to put down once begun. In it the narrative leaps and soars, rather than crawling, as many tales do.

Cultural Confrontation

Fire Sermon. By Wright Morris; Harper & Row.

A cameo examination of the cultural confrontation in contemporary America is Nebraska-born Wright Morris' latest offering. It is a mature work of a perceptive artist, perhaps larger and more disturbing upon reflection than first contact.

Morris' central figures in this parable-like tale seem drawn on the extreme.

Floyd Warner is 82, fixed in time and disposition by a lifetime of work, of hatreds, of supremely confirmed opinions, of will and routines. As he represents the developed, the old and the passing society, he is by far the best developed character in this work.

On the other extreme are two vague transients, a boy and his girl, floating across the countryside like dandelion seeds, without aim, without precise beginnings, without end.

And pivotal is a quiet, careful adolescent. He is a youngster not quite 12, for whom the old man is the nearest next of kin in California, once an accident has rendered him an orphan. The child's only other relative is the old man's more elderly sister, living out her days in a locked embrace with yesterday's faith in Chapman, Neb.

Together, the self-sculpted one man and the boy coexist in an ancient trailer until the sister dies. Then comes the labored journey back to Nebraska, to the past, to the encounter with the symbols of America's youth culture.

The senior generation does not come off attractively. It reflects outward a light from surfaces warped by hard experiences.

(Morris' description of an old Nebraska rural house, jammed with the physical accumulation of a lifetime, rings so photographically true. A coal-oil stove, dishes, glasses, lamp shades, cartons full of iron parts, old magazines, dresses, shoes, etc. Many Nebraskans have seen all this while visiting their grandparents' homes.)

Yet one is struck how pessimistic Wright seems to be, if the male hippie and his sex servant characterize the coming generation. They are utterly self-centered, deliberately severed from a cultural base but not at all bashful sponging off that culture. They are pieces of discontinuity.

It has ever been man's view, upon aging, that the young are a raunchy lot. Still, children, like colts and young birds, do age and usually turn out much better than might have been anticipated.

It may not be so in America, although one would wager differently. In any event, without wishing to get one day older, it would be enormously fascinating to know what sort of a value system America's youth of today will be defending and proclaiming in the year 1995.

They may have learned that the mystical purification by fire was terribly cruel, if not self-destructive.

—Dick Herman

Marriage Bureau Mating

Men & Marriage. By Heather Jenner in collaboration with Muriel Segal; Putnam.

The recent harvest of sex books can give any girl a postgraduate course in male-female relations. For those who want to put it to use, this book tells how to find a mate.

No man likes a hard woman, nor do men like women who are bossy, says Heather Jenner, who clings to the traditional view of marriage.

"Not so long ago a man would fall for any blonde with a helpless expression who even faintly resembled Marilyn Monroe," she says. But the way to catch a man today, she concludes, is to be like the girl next door.

As head of London's Bond Street Marriage Bureau since 1938, Miss Jenner has introduced more than 15,000 women to the men they eventually married.

Women who want to go the kinder, kirch, kichel route with an Englishman will find this book invaluable. Its subject is the English male, whom Miss Jenner describes as "cozy, kind and friendly."

Civil libertarians and women's liberation enthusiasts will curdle at the laboratory thinking of lets - turn - a - man - over - and - see - what - makes - him - tick.

Miss Jenner pounds home the theme that the only way to mate is through a marriage bureau.

Former clients say: "We have grown happier with each year together that passes. I am quite convinced that this is easier to do when two people are well matched in the first place . . ."

Or, from the wife: "We are ideally happy and can never thank you enough. Cyril continues to be a wonderfully domestic husband."

You can find something better to spend your money on.

Fighting Through Law School

The Paper Chase. By John Jay Osborn Jr.; Houghton Mifflin.

The law is a jealous mistress, they say, but do her law schools have horns and demand your soul?

That seems to be what Harvard law college graduate John Jay Osborn Jr. is saying in The Paper Chase, a fictional account of a law student's experiences at Harvard during the critical freshman year.

The college could be anywhere. Lawyers and law students should recognize the types of individuals, the attitudes and experiences, the pressures and bewilderment, the dos and don'ts of law college.

The main character is Hart (there are no first names for most students or professors), who ties in with Susan, the daughter of Professor Kingsfield — the meanest, biggest, baddest contracts professor who ever pounded a podium.

A key chapter has Hart and Susan in a fist fight, and she is winning. "You can't hit back and you're not agile enough to avoid me. You're bound to lose. Just like the law school, isn't it?" she taunts.

He finally slugs her, and the message is clear: those who get mad and fight back get through law school.

Did Hart pass? Probably, but he makes a paper glider of the envelope containing his grades and sails it into the sea. Pass or not, he will keep his soul.

Massive Biography Of Ibsen

Ibsen: A Biography. By Michael Meyer; Doubleday.

Everything you always wanted to know about Henrik Ibsen and more is in this exhaustive (and sometimes exhausting) biography of the great Norwegian playwright.

Despite overrecitation of the masterful writer's daily life and habits, the over-all stature of the man clearly shines through Michael Meyer's biography. Not because of the overwhelming amounts of trivia collected about Ibsen, but in spite of it, his greatness as a thinker and a social mover emerges, transcending the author's painstakingly collected and compiled details.

Most readers will wish he had sifted his material with a much more porous sieve, letting more of the inconsequential fall through so that the essential could be more easily found.

But it's there. Meyer, himself an Ibsen scholar of some repute, places the real emphasis on the philosophies that Ibsen's works dealt with — politics, women's rights (this in an era of Victorian prudery when even women weren't widely concerned about the matter), family relationships and human follies as they struck his clear-sighted mind.

Long after the altogether unremarkable diary of Ibsen's days and nights is forgotten, readers who have managed to plow on through this massive genius of Ibsen — a man who stood in the forefront of societal progress, unafraid of change and creating it as surely as he heralded it.

Long live the Ibsens (and even the Michael Meyers) of a world that too often lacks the wit to realize it is shackled until one of them tells it so.

All Seats Sold As Symphony Opens Its Season

Memorial Stadium at the University of Nebraska is not the only place in town with a "sold out" sign hanging on the door.

The Lincoln Symphony Orchestra too is about to open a "sold out" season. Symphony officials say there are not only any season tickets remaining, but no general admission seats are available for the 1971-72 season.

The season opens Tuesday at 8 p.m. at the Stuart Theater with famed pianist Van Cliburn, accompanied by the orchestra. Cliburn will play Beethoven's Sonata in F Minor, Op. 57 (Appassionata) and Tchaikovsky's Concerto No. 1 for Piano and Orchestra, B Flat Minor, Op. 23.

The orchestra will also add Tchaikovsky's Suite from the Ballet, The Sleeping Beauty, Op. 66A, and Francesca de Rimini's Fantasy for Orchestra, Op. 32 to the program. Leo Kopp will conduct.

Louisiana born Cliburn moved to Texas when he was six. His mother, whose New York debut was prevented when her parents forbade a concert career, was his sole instructor at the piano until he went to New York City in 1951 to study with the Juilliard School's famed Mme. Rosina Lhevinne.

He first played in public at the age 4 and made his orchestral debut with the Houston Symphony at 12. He followed one year later with his Van Cliburn.

Carnegie Hall debut as winner of the National Music Festival Award.

In 1954, after winning the Elgar M. Leventritt Foundation Award, he was soloist with the New York Philharmonic and four other major American orchestras. In his Philharmonic debut, cheers broke out at the end of the first movement and he was recalled to the stage seven times.

Cliburn entered the Moscow Competition, won the hearts of the Russians, and by the time he was proclaimed winner of the Tchaikovsky contest, he was front-page news all around the world.

He played for Premier Nikita Khrushchev and returned to be greeted by the first ticker-tape parade New York ever gave a classical musician.

Each season, the noted pianist makes more than 60 appearances in the United States and Canada.

Schatz Will Play in World Symphony

Arnold Schatz, concertmaster and violist for the Lincoln Symphony Orchestra and music professor at the University of Nebraska, has been selected as a member of the World Symphony Orchestra.

Sponsored by the People-to-People programs (founded by the late President Dwight Eisenhower in 1956), the orchestra includes representatives of 150 orchestras throughout the world, 64% in the U.S.

This one-week venture during the week of Oct. 19 has been dedicated to international understanding.

The World Symphony Orchestra will present its premiere performances at Philharmonic Hall in New York City under the sponsorship of the United Nations Assn. of the U.S.A.

The second concert will be part of opening ceremonies for the new Walt Disney World in Orlando, Fla. The third concert will be in the opera house of the new John F. Kennedy Center for the Performing Arts in Washington, D.C.

Eakins Photos Drab; Church Show Colorful

By HELEN HAGGIE

One of the duller, most repetitious and drabest exhibitions Sheldon Gallery has had is Thomas Eakins: His Photographic Works.

There are some 200 black and white (a few of the original Eakins photos have a brownish tone) photographs hanging in the collection at the gallery, at 12th and R on the University of Nebraska Campus.

Several of the pictures are by "unknown" photographers. Most are reproduced by other photographers from Eakins' original films. Who wants to see portrait after portrait of rather ordinary people hung in lines along two rooms of the gallery? Even the matting and framing of the pictures is identical throughout.

Perhaps some photographers will find some historical merit in the collection — but it leaves this viewer cold.

It will occupy gallery space until Oct. 31.

Two-Man Show

On the other hand a very small two-man show in Pilgrim Hall of First-Plymouth Congregational Church, 20th and D, is well worth seeing.

The husband and wife exhibit by Keith and Susann Jacobshagen team is a study in contrasts. He is an assistant professor of art at the University of Nebraska. His work seems to exude a serenity. Clear colors and small figures are used in the pastorals and landscapes. His dexterity in application of paint is particularly good in Winter Landscape and Winter Morning.

Summer Storm is beautifully done and though the clouds are swirling, the landscape is undisturbed.

Mrs. Jacobshagen's work is marked by vivid colors and large canvasses. Even in the one smaller one, Cup and Saucer Still Life, the subjects are oversized.

The figures in Three Sisters and Girl Reading are very large and the colors bright.

This is an exhibit well worth seeing. It hangs until the end of October.

C. C. White Auditorium Again Is Recital Hall

Nostalgia will play a big role in next Sunday's recital by John Lauber, Nebraska Wesleyan voice professor, and his wife, Mary.

Both are Wesleyan alumni. They will present their 8 p.m. recital in the old auditorium in the C. C. White Building, where both performed as Wesleyan students. The White building was replaced as a music center with completion of the Fine Arts Center in 1966.

Lauber, a tenor, and his wife, a soprano, will open the recital with Britten's Cantic II, a dramatic setting of the story of God commanding Abraham to sacrifice his only son, Isaac.

Lauber, who has completed residency requirements for his D.M.A. at the University of Colorado, will present Barber's Hermit Songs, selections composed from anonymous Irish texts of the 8th to 13th centuries.

Mrs. Lauber will present four Negro spirituals.

Lauber will be joined by Cary Lewis, piano, and Patricia Morrow, viola, to present a special arrangement of Four Hymns by R. Vaughan Williams.

Chorale Has Auditions Today

Following its successful public concert, attended by some 300 persons at Gateway Auditorium last Monday, the Lincoln Guitar Society resumes its regular schedule this week. Meetings are at the Nebraska Union, 14th and R, at 7:30 p.m. on alternate Tuesdays, including Oct. 12.

Q. I have been told that the greatest womanizers in the U.S. Senate in the past 30 years were John F. Kennedy, Estes Kefauver, George Smathers, and Henry Jackson. Were all these men great Casanovas? —Louise T. Willens, Chicago, Ill.

A. From time to time these dynamic, handsome men succumbed to the blandishments of the opposite sex. There have been others, however, equally handsome and appealing such as Senators Eugene McCarthy, Edward Kennedy, Birch Bayh, and of course Lyndon Johnson. LBJ in his young days was regarded as the Lochinvar of the Pedernales and only recently has enthralled Doris Kearns who teaches a course at Harvard on the Presidency and helped Lyndon write his book The Vantage Point.

LYNDON JOHNSON

DORIS KEARNS

Q. Why does Richard Nixon have such a deep, enduring, pervasive hatred of the American press? —Victor Onslow, San Diego, Calif.

A. Unlike some members of his entourage the President does not hate the press. He merely distrusts it, believing for years that it has treated him unfairly.

Q. Walter Winchell who raised millions for the Damon Runyon Cancer Fund—is he himself dying of cancer? What is the story? —Harold Wiener, New York, N.Y.

A. Winchell is suffering from cancer of the prostate gland but is reacting well to treatment in Los Angeles where he now resides.

Q. How many foreigners live in Florida? And why has Castro stopped the Cuban airlift? —Enrico Mateo Lopez, Miami, Fla.

A. Two-thirds of the 314,596 foreigners living in Florida are Cuban. There are 210,797 Cubans, 28,089 Canadians, and 14,284 Britons. Castro is fearful of losing some of his most skilled machinists and technicians.

HOLLYWOOD ROYALTY AT PLAY: THE LATE MIKE ROMANOFF DUBS THE LATE ERROL FLYNN A KNIGHT.

Q. Is it true that the late Errol Flynn, the swash-buckling actor, was the illegitimate son of the late Mike Romanoff, Hollywood restaurateur? —Denise Rubin, La Jolla, Calif.

A. Romanoff who died recently at age 81 had no children, legitimate or otherwise. He and Flynn were fast friends, and in Hollywood's golden era involved in the most hilarious of gags.

Q. Has Neile McQueen thrown her husband Steve McQueen out of their million dollar house? —Kathleen McGinnity, Boston, Mass.

A. Neile Adams McQueen, wife of actor Steve McQueen, 41, has filed a petition for dissolution of their 14-year-old marriage in Santa Monica court.

The McQueens were married in San Clemente, Calif., on Nov. 2, 1956, and were separated finally on June 1, this year. They have two children, Terri Leslie, 12, and Chadwick Steven, 10. It is expected the couple will divide approximately $5 million in community property.

IT'S OFF FOR THE McQUEENS

Q. Can you tell me if it is true that the most prevalent disease in veterans hospitals is alcoholism? —Susan Norris, St. Louis, Mo

A. According to Dr. Samuel Kain of the Veterans Administration, approximately one out of every seven or eight VA hospital patients suffers from an alcohol-related disability. But the number-one disease is cardiovascular. And the greatest number of patients are hospitalized for psychiatric reasons.

Q. Can you tell me if actor Ryan O'Neal was previously married before he married Leigh Taylor-Young? —Jon Hunt, Hollywood, Calif.

A. Yes, he was married to Joanna Moore, lost the custody battle for their two sons, Tatum and Griffin. He and Leigh Taylor-Young have a son Patrick.

RYAN O'NEAL AND WIFE LEIGH TAYLOR-YOUNG

Q. Several weeks ago I read that two scientists at the M.D. Anderson Hospital in Houston, Tex., had isolated a human cancer virus. They were Drs. Elizabeth Priori and Leon Dmochowski. Has such a human cancer virus been isolated? —R.P., Croton-on-Hudson, N.Y.

A. Chances are that the cancer virus isolated was not a human virus but one from a mouse. The evidence as yet is inconclusive. If in fact the virus is a human one, it marks a scientific breakthrough. If not, it is a disappointment.

A Jerusalem panorama. In foreground, some of the 5000 new housing units that Israel has constructed in captured Jordanian Jerusalem. In the upper left corner is "Ammunition Hill," from which Jordan's forces fired on Israeli Jerusalem (rear) in the Six-Day War. "Now the Jordanians will never be able to come back there," says Mayor Kollek.

was mayor of just Jewish or west Jerusalem; after the Six-Day War he became mayor of all Jerusalem.)

Anger and admiration

Known to Israelis as a bitzoist, a performer, Kollek has aroused anger and admiration from both Jews and Arabs alike. "He is capable of calling you at 4 a.m. and telling you to get to work, that something has to be done," recalls one of his assistants. "He can be stubborn and arrogant. I have seen him throw ashtrays across the room and I have seen him embarrass the hell out of people. But, even with all this, I respect and even love him. He has done more for Jerusalem than any other Israeli, and also, more than anyone else, he is the man who knows this city—the man who must be listened to."

Following, then, is an interview with

Mayor Kollek, who in fluent English answered vital questions now being raised about Jerusalem:

Q. On June 28, 1967—just three weeks after Israel captured the Jordanian part of Jerusalem—the Israeli parliament passed legislation which brought all of Jerusalem "under Israeli law." You, Mr. Kollek, stated at the time that "Jerusalem will never again be divided." Does this mean that annexation of Jor-danian Jerusalem is irrevocable?

A. There is no annexation. It's the wrong word. Jerusalem was a united city for 4000 years. It was divided by an unfortunate war in 1948, and remained divided for 19 years. Now history has taken its normal course again. That is what I said in 1967, and I stand by that: Jerusalem will remain undivided.

Q. What I would like to know from you is whether any Israeli government willing to give back Jerusalem could remain in power?

A. No, I don't think so. I don't think that any Israeli government that would give back Jerusalem could stand.

Q. In the meantime, then, Israel is going ahead with its building projects, which, in the words of Israel's Housing Minister, Ze'ev Sharef, aims at turning all of Jerusalem into "a Zionist exhibition" . . .

A. Look, before you go on, this was Mr. Sharef's remark, not mine. I think it is very unfortunate that he said this. People should not talk so much. I, too, am trying to restrict myself to less talking.

The city's character

Q. Let me ask then, whether there is justification in the Arab charge that Israel is attempting to change the character of the city to bring about a "Judaization of Jerusalem?"

A. If somebody says we are Judaizing Jerusalem, he overlooks the fact that this was done by a fellow called David 3000 years ago. Everything in this city is Jewish. All the Arab names of all the various districts are Biblical names. Wherever you step it's a Jewish city. Now, if you ask me if we aren't changing the character of the city by putting up housing projects in eastern Jerusalem, I must first tell you that we are financing housing for Arabs, too. And not only housing, but electricity, running water and sewage—more than they ever had under the Jordanians. If you look at our Master Plan for Jerusalem you will see that in 40 years—when Jerusalem will have some 500,000 inhabitants—the combined percentage of Arabs and Christians will remain the same as it is today, roughly 30 percent. So, in these respects, how can anyone say we are Judaizing Jerusalem? This is a mixed city, a kind of mosaic. Each group will continue to have its own culture, its own way of life. Jews will live in their neighborhoods, Arabs in theirs. This is by choice. Arabs want to live around their own schools, their own restaurants; they don't want to move into some place where their neighbors have different ways. That's the way we are here—not some kind of indiscriminate melting pot, but a place where each group goes on living its own life.

Q. Within this context of separate com-

Jerusalem:

Can Israel Make Reunification Stick?

by George Michaelson

JERUSALEM.

In the history of man, no city has been more the focus of love—or hate—than Jerusalem. It is the place where Jesus was crucified, where Mohammed rose to heaven, and where the Jews built their Temple. Destroyed 17 times, always it has risen again to attract man and to haunt him.

Today, no less than before, Jerusalem finds itself on center stage. With the 26th session of the U.N. General Assembly now underway, the Holy City is a hot issue in the Middle East debate. It was discussed in the Security Council a few weeks ago and will shortly come up before the full assembly. The question is whether the Israelis, who "reunified" the city after conquering the eastern half in June, 1967, now have the right to make all of Jerusalem—as one Israeli official put it—"an eminently Jewish city."

This of course is not the first time that Israeli custodianship over Jerusalem (home of 215,000 Jews, 65,000 Moslems, and 12,000 Christians) has come under the scrutiny of world opinion. The U.N. alone has passed a half-dozen separate resolutions "opposing measures taken by Israel to change the status of the city." The Pope has called for internationalization of the city (the Vatican, in fact, doesn't recognize the State of Israel). And the Arab world, seldom in agreement about anything, has repeatedly spoken in one voice against Israel's "annexation" of Arab Jerusalem.

Yet, with all this criticism flying about them, Israelis are nonetheless determined to retain their hold on the city. Recent public opinion polls show that 93 percent of the 2.5 million Israeli Jews insist that Jerusalem not be returned to Jordan in any future peace negotiations.

In support of their claim to Jerusalem, Israelis point out that Jews have been living in the Holy City almost continuously since the time of King David—1000 years before Christ. It is here that the remains of the Second Temple (destroyed in 70 AD) still stand, and it is here that Jewish pilgrims came for centuries to mourn the exile of the Jewish nation. "Ha shanah haba'a b' Yerushalayim (Next year in Jerusalem)": it is what exiled Jews said in prayer, generation after generation, in hopes that someday it would come true.

Establish their claim

And now that it has, the Jews have quickly begun to establish their claim—in asphalt and concrete. Already some 5000 new apartments have been constructed across the prewar border. In addition, Housing Minister Ze'ev Sharef announced early this year that Israel will soon be constructing in formerly Arab Jerusalem another 20,000

Burly Teddy Kollek, 60, has been Jerusalem's mayor since 1965. Presiding over the reunification of the Holy City since 1967, he speaks out strongly about the city's future. The popular Kollek declares: "Jerusalem will never again be divided."

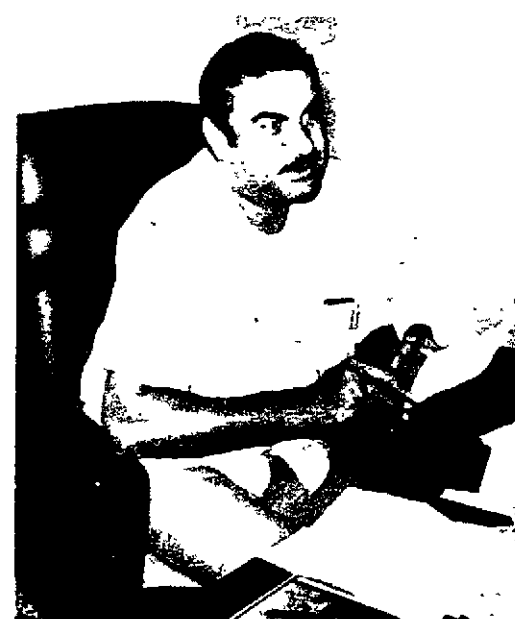

units, accommodating some 100,000 people—almost all Jews.

"It is no secret what the Israelis are trying to do with all this building," says Mohammad Abu-Zalaf, editor of Al-Quds, the influential Arabic newspaper published in east Jerusalem. "They want to give a Jewish face to the city. They have confiscated private property [some 4000 acres according to Israeli sources] and offered very little compensation. They have put up apartment houses on Jordanian public property, and one look at them, and you know that they intend to stay here. And what can we do about it? Nothing, that's what!"

Fatalistic and bitter as these sentiments are, they by no means summarize the Arab reaction to Israeli rule. Among Arab shopkeepers, workers, and housewives, there is at least a partial sense of gratitude for the higher wages, better health care and vastly improved municipal services they now receive under Israeli control. Moreover, even the more outspoken critics of Israel acknowledge that they are tasting more political freedom now than ever before. Concedes editor Abu-Zalaf: "I am much freer now to publish what I want than when Hussein ruled Jerusalem. It is sad but true that under Israeli occupation we are enjoying freedom of expression for the first time."

With all these conflicting viewpoints hovering over the Holy City, one voice, probably the most influential voice on Jerusalem—will not be heard at the U.N. For Teddy Kollek, the 60-year-old Mayor of Jerusalem, refuses to get involved in the U.N. debates, preferring to remain in Jerusalem. There, in his modestly-furnished office, usually dressed in slacks and short sleeves, he puts in an 18-hour day as he has for the past six years. (From 1965 to 1967 he munities, however, do you feel that the Arabs of east Jerusalem have, in any way, changed their attitude toward Israel since the "reunification" in '67?

A. Yes, I think there's been a change. On the first day after we captured east Jerusalem they all went into hiding. I think they were convinced that all their women would be raped and all their children would be taken away and beaten. After three days when they saw that we did nothing to them, well, they came out of hiding. In fact, today the number of Arabs living in Jerusalem is growing, and we have a tremendous number of applications from Arabs living in Arab countries who want to live here. They have been here as visitors and they want to come back. Of course, I am not saying they are in love with us, with Israel, but we are living together in a peaceful way. More than this you cannot expect in so short a time as four years.

Q. Concretely, what efforts toward co-operation between Arabs and Jews can you point to?

A. Arab and Jewish youth meet here on sports grounds and in working places. More and more we have joint Arab and Jewish enterprises opening up. Here in the City Hall a third of the employees are Arabs. Go into a room and look, and you won't know who is an Arab and who is a Jew; they get along very well.

The real problem

Q. But how about the political sphere? Except for a handful of east Jerusalem Arabs, all have refused the offer of Israeli citizenship.

A. This is correct, but the real problem is that there can be no political solution here in Jerusalem until there is a general political solution between Israel and the Arab states. No decent Arab can accept the reunification of Jerusalem, and thereby put himself in a position of being a traitor to the cause. We should have enough respect for them not to ask them to become collaborators by accepting something that the Arabs outside don't accept. They sit on committees with us, work with us, yes, but they cannot be expected to officially accept reunification. To ask this of them would be asking something degrading. And I wouldn't want to do this.

Q. Do you see political cooperation eventually?

A. I have no doubt about it. I see the city someday being divided into boroughs—or some such mechanism—in which the groups would be fairly independent. The question is when.

Q. How do you feel about internationalizing Jerusalem? In the U.N. partition plan for Palestine in 1947, Jewish leadership accepted internationalization. Would it be feasible now?

Religious Jew sitting near the Wailing Wall (remains of the Second Temple, destroyed by Romans in 70 AD) in the ex-Jordanian sector of Jerusalem. For 19 years Jews weren't allowed to go there.

A. I think internationalization would be a bad thing for everybody. It has never proven itself in any city. It's a theoretical solution which may sound very good at the U.N., but internationalization has only made for war, not peace.

Q. What about the 12,000 Christians living in Jerusalem? How would you characterize their reaction to Israeli reunification and rule of Jerusalem?

A. It's very difficult to answer this, because first of all there is no unified Christian position. If you ask the majority of Christians in this city—the Greek Orthodox and the Armenians—you will find they are very satisfied with the arrangements. If you ask Christian pilgrims from abroad, they will tell you they've had freer access to the holy places than ever before. However, if you ask churches predominantly Arabic in character, you will find that their nationalism is probably much stronger than their Christianity. The Vatican, too, which has worldwide interests has... well, sometimes been critical. I can't elaborate on that. If you want more information, you will have to ask the Foreign Minister.

Q. A final question, Mr. Kollek, regarding the Jewish tie to Jerusalem. I have heard that many Jews living in Israel, especially the non-religious Jews, used to say they had no special attachment to Jerusalem. Then, after the Six-Day War, many of these secular Jews suddenly found they felt a deep tie to the city. How do you explain it?

A. I can't explain it. I've seen these secular Jews—Israelis and Jews from other countries—I've seen them come to Jerusalem, go directly to the Wailing Wall and kiss the stones. It's a phenomenon which I can't really explain.

Kollek's attachment

Q. You, too, I understand, are non-religious. Have you had a similar experience about Jerusalem?

A. Well, I have been all my life so immersed in the practical day-to-day matters, and the urgencies of people, that I never really got around to the emotions.

Q. Seriously?

A. Absolutely. I mean, I have had an attachment to Jerusalem before I was mayor. All my interests were always concentrated on Jerusalem. I have collected books and maps on Jerusalem for 40 years or so. But I don't think it has ever been a deeply emotional thing with me. It's more intellectual. I take a deep interest in Jerusalem and I do what I can. That is all.

A GERMAN COUPLE LOOKING PERFECTLY HAPPY

PERFECT WIVES If you had it to do all over again, would you choose the same marriage partner?

When the Wickert Public Opinion Research Institute in Tübingen, Germany, posed that question, it got some surprising results.

Ninety-eight percent of the West German husbands surveyed said they would marry the same woman again. Moreover, 83 percent said their wives were perfect, without any faults.

German women, however, are not so content with their husbands. Ninety-two percent said they would marry the same man again, but only 64 percent claimed their husbands were perfect.

German women complained most frequently about their less-than-perfect husbands on the following grounds: (1) drinking (2) smoking too much (3) spending too little time with their family, and (4) having an "I don't care" attitude.

VD PENALTY VD is a criminal offense in the Soviet Union, especially in Georgia, birthplace of Stalin.

If you should be unlucky enough to contract a venereal disease in the Georgian republic, you will be imprisoned along with your cure. The Georgian Supreme Soviet recently increased the penalty for spreading VD from one to two years in prison.

And for those convicted of infecting a minor or more than two persons, the penalty is now five years in prison.

The British are using yet another expedient in their campaign to eradicate VD.

At the request of public health officials in the city of Birmingham, a local radio station broadcasts the name, age, sex and nationality of defaulters on VD treatment. As a result, some patients have returned to complete their cure.

Many VD patients, explain Birmingham health authorities, mistakenly believe they are cured after a single shot of penicillin. These people frequently cannot be contacted because they give false addresses, hence the radio campaign.

SWEET TAXES

The British Dental Association recently opened a campaign to raise their nation's tax rates on sweets and candy.

The reason: the British eat more candy per capita than any other people in the world, thus require more extensive dental treatment. An estimated one-third of the British population is entirely toothless.

The current tax rate on candy in Britain is 22 percent, compared to 36.6 percent on toothpaste. If candy were taxed at the higher rate, the British Dental Association points out, the increase in revenue would pay the nation's entire dental bill under socialized medicine.

SEX ANONYMOUS

To find out everything you always wanted to know about sex, you don't have to buy a book. If you live in Manhattan, you can just pick up the telephone and make a local call.

At Community Sex Information and Education Service in New York City, 35 psychologists and sociologists stand ready to answer any and all questions pertaining to sex.

Mrs. Ann Welbourne, 28-year-old psychologist, started the service last summer as an aid to the sexually troubled and confused. "It is basically a matter of just providing information to the un-knowledgeable," she explains, "clearing up the myths."

After one month of operation, Mrs. Welbourne reports, her staff was handling 200 calls a day. Callers range from the teens to the twilight years in age, about half are married, most are men. Some seek information about particular sexual problems, others want general information on the order of "what turns a woman on?"

SPY CAPITAL

In diplomatic circles, Brussels is known as the "spy capital" of the world.

The seat of many European and international organizations--NATO, Euratom, the European Economic Community, the European Coal and Steel Community--the Belgian capital simply offers richer and more varied pickings to the alert agent.

Moreover, spies in Brussels are becoming more industrious and ingenious. One of the most enterprising, Belgian police report, is an Italian named Emanuele Gazzo who runs an information service based on leaks and bootleg information.

For only $25 a month Gazzo's "Agence Europe" will supply you with the fruits of espionage. Gazzo boasts that his subscribers can read the contents of any secret report within 48 hours of its being written.

The best-kept secret in Brussels, claims Gazzo, is his subscription list.

SCREEN: REX HARRISON AND IRENE DUNNE IN 'ANNA AND THE KING OF SIAM'

STAGE: GERTRUDE LAWRENCE AND YUL BRYNNER IN 'THE KING AND I'

ANNA AND THE KING TO TV

In 1946 20th Century-Fox produced a film, "Anna and the King of Siam" which proved a box-office success. It starred Irene Dunne and Rex Harrison, one of the great lovers of our time.

A few years later the film was musicalized on Broadway with Yul Brynner and the late Gertrude Lawrence under the title "The King and I," music and lyrics provided by Richard Rodgers and Oscar Hammerstein.

In 1956, still coining money on a good thing, 20th Century replaced Gertrude Lawrence with Deborah Kerr and presented the film version of "The King and I."

Now, 20th Century is preparing a half-hour television series of Anna, the English schoolteacher, and the King of Siam.

Television is so devoid of original ideas that every studio is poring industriously over its backlog searching for any property capable of revival.

SCHOOL FOR STRIPTease

In Holland the art of stripping is no longer the monopoly of professional teasers.

Mrs. Gieske Kop, 31, otherwise known as Cocco Maruu, "international star of the striptease," recently decided to offer her skills to any needy Dutch housewife. A well-traveled veteran ("I've undressed myself from Tokyo to Damascus"), Mrs. Kop decided that "most men would not go to strip joints if their wives knew how to put on--or take off--a good show."

When Mrs. Kop first broadcast her pitch ("a strip now and then brings new excitement into marital relations") over late-night radio, she received hundreds of letters in response. She set up school in Amsterdam's Hotel Porte d'Or, charging 5 gulden (same as the price of admission to most strip shows in Amsterdam) for a full course in the art of erotic undressing.

Some testimonials from satisfied students: "This will be a lot of fun for my husband." "My husband likes erotic play and before I had little to offer him." "I thought I was becoming stale, now I have more confidence in myself."

TRAVELING TEACHERS

West Germany needs teachers, and the U.S. has them to spare. So why not get together?

Last spring German education authorities began recruiting unemployed American teachers and scientists to serve as math and science teachers in Hamburg's city high schools.

The Germans received 500 applications from American M.A.'s and Ph.D.'s, of whom 65 were selected to sign two-year teaching contracts at $530-$800 a month. The higher purchasing power of the German mark makes this roughly equivalent to American teaching salaries.

If all goes well in the first year of the experiment, the Germans expect to hire increasing numbers of U.S. teachers. The city of Hamburg alone will need 160 new teachers this year just to cover retirements, and an additional 410 to cover expanded enrollment. Only a small part of this need can be met by German universities.

QUOTE TO PONDER

"Misguided policy... Indeed it is part of the general pattern of misguided policy that our country is now geared to an arms economy which was bred in an artificially induced psychosis of war hysteria and nurtured upon an incessant propaganda of fear. While such an economy may produce a sense of seeming prosperity for the moment, it rests on an illusionary foundation of complete unreliability and renders among our political leaders almost a greater fear of peace than is their fear of war."--Douglas MacArthur,

May 15, 1952, before the joint session of the Michigan State Legislature, Lansing, Mich.

Fudge Without Cooking

by Beth Merriman

PARADE FOOD EDITOR

■ No need for a candy thermometer or any cooking other than melting the chocolate and butter or margarine. However, it does take time and "elbow grease" for the kneading, so let the children help with this part of it at least. Be sure to knead until the mixture is smooth, glossy and pliable, with every grain of sugar worked in.

Chocolate Fudge

3 squares unsweetened chocolate	1/8 teaspoon salt
4 tablespoons butter or margarine	1 teaspoon vanilla
1/3 cup unseasoned mashed potatoes*	1 lb. confectioners' (powdered) sugar

Melt chocolate and butter together over hot water. Blend in mashed potatoes, salt and vanilla. Mix well. Sift sugar. Add a small amount at a time, blending until no sugar is visible. When a spoon is no longer equal to the task of mixing, knead in the balance of the sugar with well-buttered hands. Turn out on board and continue to knead until mixture is smooth, glossy and pliable, buttering hands as necessary. No crumbs should remain. Press into buttered 8-inch square pan and cut into squares or shape into balls and top each ball with a nutmeat. Makes 1 1/4 pounds.

*It is best to cook and mash a medium potato especially for this purpose. Omit any seasoning, butter or milk.

Pensioner Nikita Khrushchev, with his recorder and his dog while strolling on the grounds of his country home, 15 miles from Moscow. The one-time Kremlin boss used the recorder to tape his memoirs, published under the title, "Khrushchev Remembers"

Khrushchev Remembered

by Strobe Talbott

EDITOR'S NOTE: Strobe Talbott, author of the accompanying article on Nikita Khrushchev, is the editor and translator of Khrushchev Remembers, the best-selling and controversial memoirs of the former Soviet Premier which were first published last year. A graduate of Yale, Class of '68, and a Rhodes scholar, Mr. Talbott is a writer whose special interest is the Soviet Union.

I felt as though I knew Nikita Khrushchev personally, even though I never met him. While working on Khrushchev Remembers, I spent many hours every day poring over his story, told in his own words, about his rise from a coal miner's shack in the south of Russia to the pinnacle of power in the Kremlin. I got to know him well, and I liked him.

In his day Khrushchev had been highly successful as a bureaucrat, politician, and a statesman—three walks of life not known for their fun-loving types. But Khrushchev was different. He had an earthy sense of humor and a rambunctious personality which were somehow undulled by years of skulking around the back stairwells of the Soviet power structure. These qualities, his mischievous wit and unpredictable ebullience, made him far more interesting and likeable than most bureaucrats, politicians, and statesmen.

Khrushchev's face

Among the furrowed brows, pasted-on smiles, inscrutable masks, and sour puss expressions of most world leaders past and present, Khrushchev's comic, wart-dotted, but intelligent face was an original. Certainly among Soviet leaders, he represented an inspired bit of casting. With his turnip nose, his easy gap-toothed grin, his darting alert eyes and his Alfred Hitchcock figure, he never looked the part he was supposed to play in international showdowns or summits—but he usually managed to play the part better than anyone expected, as John F. Kennedy learned to his embarrassment at his 1961 eyeball to eyeball debate with Khrushchev in Vienna.

KHRUSHCHEV CONTINUED

Some world statesmen, including some of Khrushchev's ideological adversaries, appreciated the saltier side of his personality. One prominent Western leader once remarked of Khrushchev, "Even when he pounds his shoe on the table, you've got to admit—it's a very human thing to do."

There is a lot of verbal shoe-pounding in Khrushchev Remembers. On every page I found a reminder that I was in the presence of a very lively human being who could be as entertaining as he was enigmatic.

A hit with Americans

Even though he personified the "enemy" and the "Communist threat to our way of life," Khrushchev was a great hit with many Americans during his two trips to the United States in 1959 and 1960. He had made his coming-out debut to the capitalist West only four years earlier at the age of 61 when he attended the Geneva Summit Conference in 1955. Yet no sooner did he land in Washington in 1959 than he proved to be a masterful ringmaster of the Soviet diplomatic roadshow.

He loved meeting people, sightseeing, hamming it up for photographers, but most of all he loved to talk. He talked anytime, anywhere, to anyone who would listen.

And he was rarely boring. He was noticeably impatient with formal speeches. He much preferred to speak off-the-cuff and spiced his repartee with animated gestures, jokes of all sorts, folksy proverbs, playful insults, temper tantrums, provocative outbursts, and occasionally a Biblical phrase harking back to his strict Russian Orthodox upbringing as a child.

His second U.S. trip

Reporters following him around this country quickly learned that when the irrepressible Russian leader departed from the prepared text of a speech and started to extemporize, he was sure to come out with something worth quoting. To recall some examples of Khrushchev at his best:

During his visit to the United Nations in the fall of 1960, he met the press at the country retreat for the Soviet U.N. mission in Glen Cove, Long Island. He was asked by a newsman, "What can you say about your stay here, in the heart of capitalism?"

Khrushchev replied, "This is the heart of capitalism and I have the heart of a Communist." He went on to say that Communists can coexist peacefully with capitalists just as a young man sometimes finds it worthwhile to settle down with an old but rich widow even though he's not madly in love with her.

Later he quipped that if Christians could accept the idea of the Holy Trinity, the United States should be willing to accept the "troika," or three-man Secretariat which the Russians were then proposing in place of the U.N. Secretary-General.

Asked if he was going to make a second address before the General Assembly, he answered that he had to in order to cover his travel expenses.

While visiting the Hollywood set of Irma La Douce in 1959, the Soviet Premier and his wife were watching Shirley MacLaine and a chorus line rehearse the cancan. When the dancing girls flipped up the back of their skirts to the audience, Khrushchev leapt indignantly to his feet and shielded Mrs. Khrushchev's eyes from the scene.

"Humanity's face is more beautiful than her backside," he explained.

The Russian original of Khrushchev Remembers reflected vividly this aspect of Khrushchev's personality: the charming, cunning loudmouth.

Regardless of whether he was proclaiming self-righteously about the bad old days of Stalin or boasting about his own moments of glory in the international spotlight, I found Khrushchev's reminiscences a fascinating virtuoso performance by one of the most skillful talkers of all times.

He was also a skillful liar. His recollections are full of deceptions, distortions, evasions, hoked-up alibis, and lapses of memory; but they are consistently as colorful as was the man himself.

In the murky world of Russian politics, Khrushchev was probably too colorful for his own good. While he was alternately delighting and bedeviling the West, he was driving his colleagues back home crazy with his erratic public behavior. Finally, the Soviet bureaucrats and politicians from whose ranks he had risen were fed up with Comrade Nikita Sergeyevich, and they brought him down. His memoirs are packed with examples of the recklessness and impetuosity which were part of his undoing.

It is a testimony to Nikita Khrushchev's most important accomplishment that despite his disgrace and unceremonious departure from office in 1964, he was allowed to live in a comfortable dacha just outside Moscow on a state pension for seven years and to die a natural death at the ripe old age of 77.

According to Stalinist precedent, if a man lost in the Kremlin power game, he lost his life—usually in a prison basement with a bullet in the back of the neck.

Khrushchev broke that precedent when he came to power, replacing Stalinist terror with a still imperfect but radically improved style of government behavior. And he benefited personally from the improvement when his turn came to fall from power. Hustled off into retirement, he joined the ranks of his own ousted rivals Nikolai Bulganin, Lazar Kaganovich, Georgi Malenkov, Vyacheslav Molotov, and Kliment Voroshilov—a circle of men whose continuing existence symbolized a momentous recovery from the homicidal mass mania which had afflicted the USSR for almost a quarter of a century.

Most important question

The question uppermost in my mind when I immersed myself in Khrushchev's reminiscences was: How was this man able to overcome his own past and force his country to break with its past?

Paradoxically, the Russian leader who at the age of 61 shook the world, particularly the Communist world, with his de-Stalinization speech of 1956 had previously spent all his life as a functionary and beneficiary of Stalinism.

Khrushchev's metamorphosis from a loyal and often ruthless Stalinist into the prosecutor who denounced Stalin's crimes at the Twentieth Party Congress cannot be explained simply in terms of self-serving hypocrisy and political opportunism.

Granted, he decided to deliver the famous Secret Speech as part of a bold gamble to show who was boss as he maneuvered for supreme power against Malenkov, Molotov, and Kaganovich.

Granted, too, both in the Secret Speech and in his memoirs he begs the question of his own considerable complicity in Stalin's crimes while never missing a chance to make his former fellow henchmen look like stooges and thugs in the service of their late master.

And granted, during his own nine-year rule Khrushchev practiced many of the vices he had preached against in the Secret Speech.

But the fact remains that it took genuine political courage to wrench himself and his country free from the savagery of Stalinism. There were formidable forces pitted against him when he started promoting de-Stalinization. First, he had to reverse the momentum of 25 years of history. Second, he had to face a powerful coalition of diehard Stalinists who opposed him bitterly on the de-Stalinization issue.

His incredible role

In discrediting Stalin and insisting that the Party dissociate itself from many of the worst Stalinist attitudes and methods, Khrushchev must have gone far beyond the dictates of his purely political instincts. He must have had strong moral instincts, too. It was incredible that a man who had gone through the brutalization of a Stalinist career could have any moral sense left.

Yet Khrushchev's basic humanity is apparent at many spots in his memoirs, particularly in the chapter where he expresses his compassion for Svetlana Alliluyeva, Stalin's daughter who defected to the West. While the official line promoted by his successors holds that Svetlana is a traitor and "morally sick," Khrushchev undoubtedly took pleasure in the news that Svetlana, now living happily in the United States as Mrs. William Wesley Peters, gave birth this year to a baby daughter named Olga.

Khrushchev's fundamental decency is also evident in those sections of Khrushchev Remembers where his memory turns, with sadness and sympathy, to Svetlana's mother Nadezhda. She was by all accounts a noble and pathetic woman whom Stalin drove to suicide in 1932.

It is, in a way, appropriate that Nikita Khrushchev has now been buried near Nadezhda Alliluyeva's grave at the Novodevichy Cemetery behind an ancient monastery on the banks of the Moscow River.

Second class funeral

But at the same time, it is a shame that Khrushchev was not interred in the Kremlin wall, an honor to which he was technically entitled as a former Party and government leader. Because of the contribution he made to his country with de-Stalinization, he should have been given better than a second-class funeral.

But Khrushchev's case before the court of history is not closed. Just as Joseph Stalin's embalmed body was removed from the Red Square Mausoleum on Khrushchev's orders in 1961, so, perhaps, will Khrushchev himself one day be given the resting place—and the official recognition—he deserves.

My husband got more than he bargained for...220 pounds.

By Fran Brownell—as told to Ruth L. McCarthy

Would you ever believe I was only 25 years old here? That's what 220 pounds can do for you!

I'm a newspaper woman whose first job was writing a column on cooking. What an assignment for me! A person who was always thinking about dieting and now whose job was to have food on her mind constantly. In her mouth, too, for I had made it a rule to sample whatever recipe I wrote about. I'm sure that my husband got more than he bargained for, when I reached 220 pounds.

The habit of overeating, however, was with me long before that first job. As early as fourth grade, my girl friend used to say: "Let's go on a diet." That meant run around the block and come home to chocolate sundaes. Fact is, I stuffed myself all the way to college.

The year I entered the University of Omaha, however, opened my eyes. The campus was full of slim girls and I wanted to be one of them. I started taking diet pills to depress my appetite. Sure, my weight came down. But each time I quit, the pounds went up. So, for two whole years, I took diet pills. Not to get high on, but to shake the weight. It was terrible.

All I can say is, if I hadn't met and married Larry, maybe I'd still be at it. Fortunately, when he moved in, the diet pills were thrown out. If only I hadn't started cooking cream sauces and testing all those delicious recipes for my column. But I did, which made shopping for clothes a traumatic experience. Nothing would fit, so I'd go home, turn on television and watch reducing exercises while I ate a plate of brownies.

We had moved to Montrose, Colorado when I finally hit 220 pounds. I had given up my job to have a family. So I spent my spare time working on potato chips, popcorn, peanut butter, french fries and lots of avocados. My overeating was almost a self-destructive attitude. Larry had another explanation for it. He said that I'd caught a man and let myself go. Whichever was true, the figure on the scale scared me. So did the one in the mirror. I remember looking at myself on my anniversary. Larry had wanted to go dancing, but we settled for a cookout. I just didn't want the world to see me.

In an effort to help myself, I decided to get a job again, as a reporter on the local paper. This took me away from food, both in the house and out. The next thing I did was pick up a box of Ayds® at the drugstore. The chocolate fudge kind. I'd read those stories of people who had lost weight on the Ayds Plan and I wanted to see if it would work for me.

Well, it did. And there were no drugs involved. I took one or two Ayds, like the directions say, before meals with a hot drink, and they really helped curb my appetite. I stopped frying foods, too, and creaming vegetables. Instead, I began to broil my meats and eat my greens "as is." And I started to lose weight.

When I'd lost about 40 pounds, I set up a goal for myself. For my fifth anniversary, I wanted to be the girl my husband had married. Slim enough to wear my wedding trip dress. Size 14.

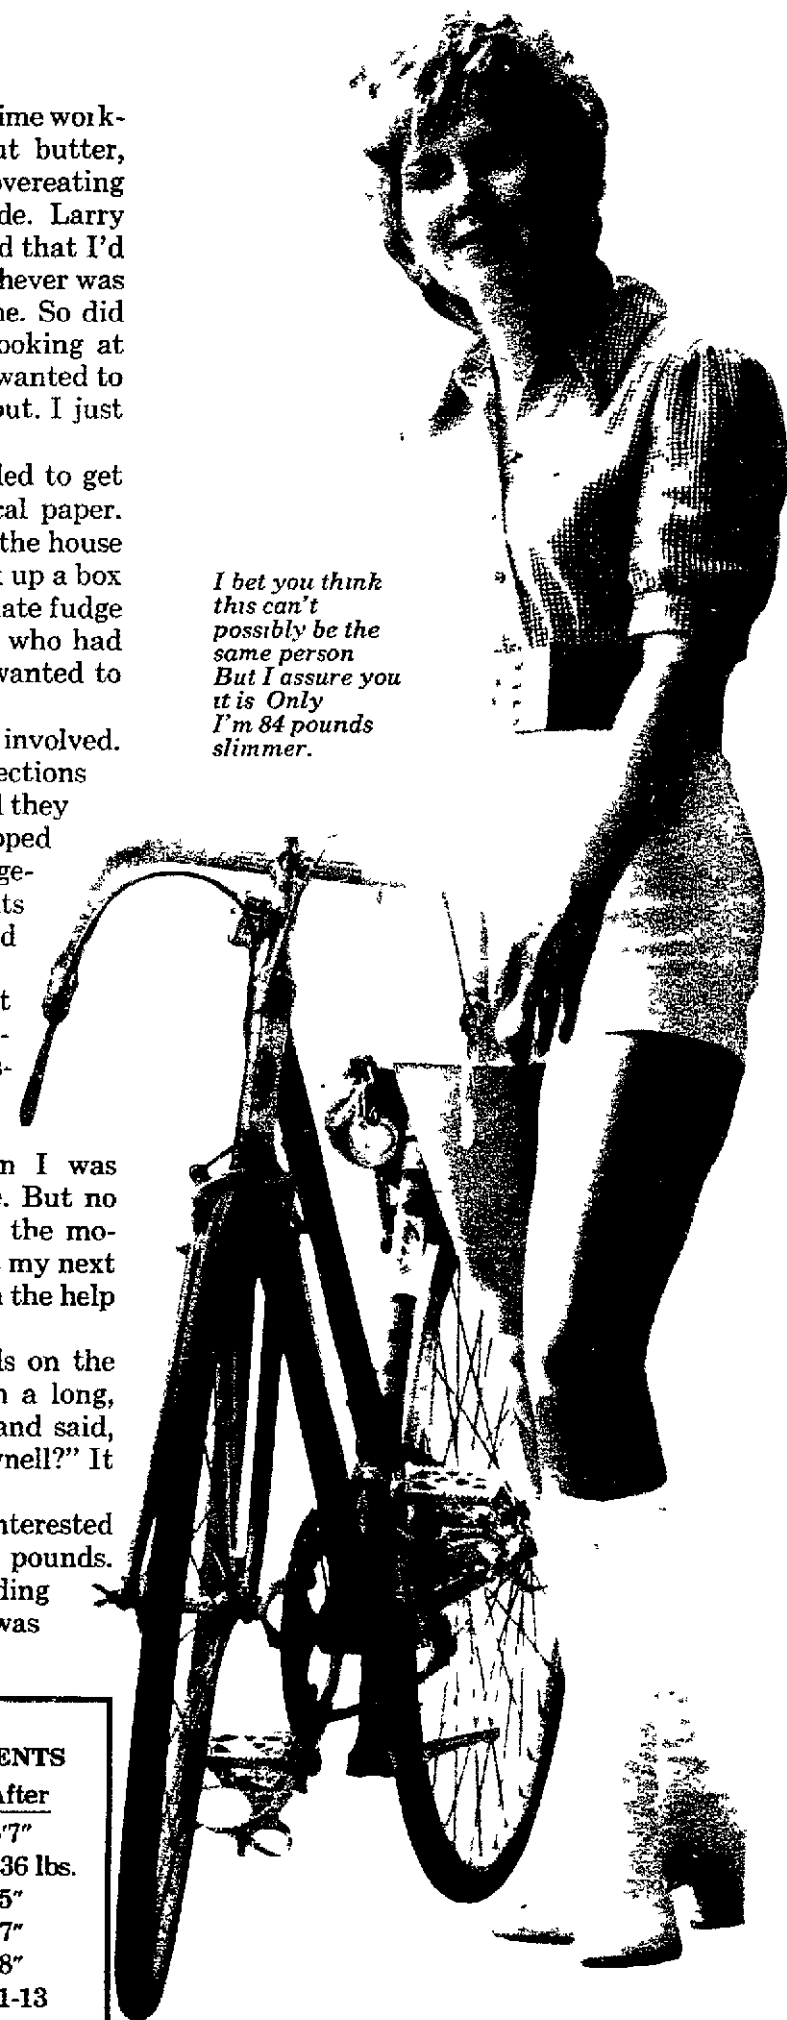

Of course, there were times when I was tempted to weaken and have a binge. But no matter how good the food looked at the moment, I knew I had to weigh it against my next meal and the next dress size. And, with the help of Ayds, I'd resist.

When, at last, I had lost 84 pounds on the Ayds Plan, someone I hadn't seen in a long, long while stopped me on the street and said, "Say, didn't you used to be Fran Brownell?" It was really funny.

As for my anniversary, you'll be interested to hear that by then, I weighed 136 pounds. But I never did get to wear my wedding trip dress. Thanks to the Ayds Plan, it was too big. So I wore a mini instead.

Keeping Up...With Youth

by Pamela Swift

Student Voting Power

The big question surrounding the 18-year-old vote is no longer how young people will vote, but where they will vote.

For if America's students are permitted to vote at their campus address, many college towns face the possibility of a student takeover in local elections.

But if students must register at their parents' address and vote either by absentee ballot or return home on Election Day, many will undoubtedly fail to exercise their newly-won right to vote.

At present, 27 states are examining the issue in the courts. So far, California, Massachusetts and Michigan have decided in favor of campus voting.

California courts recently ruled that requiring students to return home or vote by absentee ballot would impair their right to vote.

The Michigan Supreme Court struck down as unconstitutional special questionnaires requiring students to state the geographical source of their financial support.

In Massachusetts, dormitory residence has been ruled sufficient for voting so long as the six-month requirement is met.

These three decisions are key to the issue of student voting power because California, Michigan and Massachusetts each has a city in imminent danger of student takeover. Berkeley, where radicals already hold a sizable position on the City Council; Ann Arbor, where the University of Michigan contains a liberal student population of 22,000 out of a total population of 100,000, and Cambridge, where students at Harvard, Radcliffe, M.I.T. and other institutions constitute 25 percent of the potential electorate.

The possibility of students running the cities is alarming to many adults. But as the Christian Science Monitor points out, "Where adult students (even 'radical' ones) have had an active role in local politics, as in Berkeley, Calif., there is no evidence that they have performed irresponsibly."

"One hopes that they will continue to vindicate their right to vote by voting not only massively but wisely."

Imported From Vietnam

Now that our boys are returning from Vietnam, they are bringing with them some really exotic Asian diseases.

Malaria is the most common affliction of military personnel returning from Vietnam. In 1970 the Center for Disease Control reported 4000 cases in the U.S., 95 percent of them emanating from Vietnam.

Other communicable diseases brought back include: amebiasis, parasitic infections such as hookworm, plague, melioidosis, viral illness and filariasis.

What the war in Vietnam has done to the youth of America defies description.

Coeducation for Peace

If all schools were coeducational, the world might be a more peaceful place.

So contends R. R. Dale, professor of education at the University of Wales in England and author of a recent book entitled "Mixed or Single-Sex School?"

In a coeducational system, Professor Dale reports, boys are less aggressive and girls less vengeful. In sex-segregated schools, on the other hand, frustrated sexual drives stimulate aggressive behavior, of which war is the ultimate example.

Totalitarian regimes understand the importance of sex segregation in producing aggressive militarism. Professor Dale points out two such historical analogies:

"Under Stalin, a few years before the second World War," he writes, "the Russians changed from a largely coeducational system of schooling to one which was, where possible, single sex, because they believed it easier to inculcate a militaristic spirit into their boys."

"The Nazis also stressed single-sex education for similar reasons."

My Favorite Jokes

by Jack Carter

EDITOR'S NOTE Actor, comic, dancer, mimic, singer and TV director, Jack Carter has literally been a Jack of all entertainment trades.

Born in Brooklyn and now a resident of Los Angeles, his first big break came when he appeared on several of Uncle Milton Berle's Texaco Star Theater TV shows, which led to him hosting his own shows on ABC and NBC.

Since then he's been displaying his comic talents before live and electronic audiences all over the country. He's even played straight roles in films and on TV, being nominated for an Emmy for his performances in the Dr. Kildare series. But it's in nightclubs and on TV variety shows that he really flourishes with his rapid-fire comedy style. He's been featured on over 50 Ed Sullivan shows and has guested on practically all the other big ones, as well as starring in his own special, The Funny World of Jack Carter. Herewith some of his favorite jokes.

I came across a lady in New York's Central Park just after she had been mugged. She was a mess—her dress torn, glasses broken, face badly bruised, knee cut, handbag stolen. I asked if she would like me to get a cop. "No," she said, "I don't want to get involved."

I don't care so much about television programs, but I love the commercials, especially the one where the bride throws down her bouquet and stammers, "How dare you tell me I have breath like a moose?" The next second she's in another room telling her girlfriend all about it. "What did you do?" asks the friend. "I breathed out and killed him," says the bride.

Farmers know how to make a deal like the one who found a car dealer who was willing to take a cow in trade. The slick salesman added up the price of the car: "Basic car, $3000; tires, $400; motor, $500. Next, radio, heater, and he went on until the price was $5500. Then the farmer showed him the cow. The dealer says, 'I'll give you $200 in trade for it.' The farmer says, 'Wait a minute

Basic cow, $200; dual horns, $40; two stomachs, $50; milk storage compartment, $50; four dispensers, $5 each; two-tone cowhide, $30; automatically swatter, $50.'

I sent some flowers to a friend's Las Vegas nightclub opening, and the florist made a mistake and sent a funeral wreath. I called the florist and said, "Look here, this is embarrassing. Imagine how my friend feels." The florist said, "Well, that doesn't bother me so much. What does bother me is that somewhere in Las Vegas there's a guy being buried with a floral horse-shoe that says, 'Best wishes on your new opening.'"

I remember when I first met a country performer friend of mine and his manager. He was so shy and well-mannered. He just stood in the corner. I said to his manager, "He's sure shy. He doesn't mix at all." His manager says, "Don't mind that; this is the first time he's ever had on a necktie and he thinks he's tied up."

Fella walked into a gambling casino—big hat, overalls, high-top shoes—laid down $2000 and lost it all on the first roll. He didn't say a word. He picked up his hat and went outside to thumb a ride. I said, "You sure don't seem upset. I admire your cool." He says, "Well, easy come, easy go. I made it pluckin' chickens."

There's a chorus girl I know in Las Vegas who asked a new acquaintance how much money he earned. When told $75 a week, she reckoned as that wouldn't even keep her in soap. "Well," he said, "if you're that dirty, forget it."

Betty Grable:

"I made the movie, Mother Wore Tights, over twenty-five years ago, but I've been in show business a lot longer than that," says Betty Grable. "My friends say I'm still looking good. (My enemies say I'm very well preserved.)"

"Would you like to know what I do to take care of myself? Nothing very mysterious. I exercise regularly. I eat the right food and get enough rest. And there's one more important thing. I start each day with a Geritol tablet, to be sure I get enough iron and vitamins. Geritol is one of the nice things I do for myself."

Enjoy these and 1001 other wonders of THE BIRDS for 10 days as a guest of the LIFE Nature Library

BIRDS have fascinated mankind since the dawn of time. Ancient priests sought omens in the entrails. Rome was saved by the warning cries of geese. Until recently coal miners used canaries to warn them of lethal gas.

But the birds that inhabit our earth—100 billion strong—puzzle as well as fascinate. How can a bird perch without falling off? How can a hummingbird hover in air like a helicopter? How can a kiwi lay an egg that weighs one third as much as the kiwi itself?

In recent years our scientific knowledge of birds has multiplied many times over. Now, from this growing treasury of knowledge, the Editors of TIME-LIFE BOOKS bring you the whole story of The Birds . . . how they evolved, communicate, migrate, reproduce and the reasons for their immense diversity. You'll learn many astonishing facts:

- ▶ Some fowls provide a temperature-regulated incubator by amassing exactly the proper amount of decaying leaves, trash and sand.
- ▶ Vultures, once reputed to be plague carriers, actually serve as efficient sanitary squads.

"KINDERGARTENS" are organized by emperor penguins for young ones who are big enough for collective care. Penguins fight to mother a stray

- ▶ A ruby-throated hummingbird beats its wings at the fantastic rate of 50 to 70 times a second, while the ponderous pelican flaps its wings as slowly as 1.3 times per second.

Only the resources of TIME-LIFE BOOKS could have produced The Birds—could mobilize such a distinguished team of writers, photographers, painters, and researchers, and draw upon such a vast file of great photographs. The book gleams with 200 iridescent photographs, paintings, drawings, and maps of which nearly 100 are in full color. The careful blend of pictures with vivid text makes The Birds a delight to look at and read. But it is also a highly authoritative, carefully indexed reference work complete with bibliography of research and reading materials.

ROGER TORY PETERSON, who wrote The Birds with the Editors of TIME-LIFE BOOKS is the world's best-known ornithologist, inventor of the Peterson System of field identification which revolutionized bird-watching.

EXAMINE IT FREE. You are invited to accept The Birds for free examination. Share it with your children and their

An Important Message To Every Man And Woman In America Losing His Or Her Hair

If you are troubled by thinning hair, dandruff, itchy scalp, if you fear approaching baldness, read the rest of this statement carefully. It may mean the difference to you between saving your hair and losing the rest of it to eventual baldness.

Baldness is simply a matter of subtraction. When the number of new hairs fail to equal the number of falling hair, you end up minus your head of hair (bald). Why not avoid baldness by preventing unnecessary loss of hair? Why not turn the tide of battle on your head by eliminating needless causes of hair loss and give Nature a chance to grow more hair for you? Many of the country's dermatologists and other foremost hair and scalp specialists believe that seborrhea, a common scalp disorder, causes hair loss. What is seborrhea? It is a bacterial infection of the scalp that can eventually cause permanent damage to the hair follicles. Its visible evidence is "thinning" hair. Its end result is baldness. Its symptoms are dry, itchy scalp, dandruff, oily hair, head scales, and progressive hair loss.

So, if you are beginning to notice that your forehead is getting larger, beginning to notice that there is too much hair on your comb, beginning to be worried about the dryness of your hair, the itchiness of your scalp, the ugly dandruff — these are Nature's Red Flags warning you of impending baldness. Even if you have been losing your hair for some time, don't let seborrhea rob you of the rest of your hair.

HOW COMATE WORKS ON YOUR SCALP

The development of an amazing new hair and scalp medicine called Comate is specifically designed to control seborrhea and stop the hair loss it causes. It offers the opportunity to thousands of men and women losing their hair to bacterial infection to reverse the battle they are now losing on their scalps. By stopping this impediment to normal hair growth, new hairs can grow as Nature intended.

This is how Comate works: (1) It combines in a single scalp treatment the essential corrective factors for normal hair growth. By its rubifacient action it stimulates blood circulation to the scalp, thereby supplying more nutrition to still-alive hair follicles. (2) As a highly effective antiseptic, Comate kills on contact the seborrhea-causing scalp bacteria believed to be a cause of baldness. (3) By its keratolytic action it dissolves ugly dandruff. By tending to normalize the lubrication of the hair shaft it corrects excessively dry and oily hair. It eliminates head scales and scalp itch.

In short, Comate offers you in a single treatment the best that modern medicine has developed for the preservation of your hair. There is no excuse today except ignorance for any man or woman to neglect seborrhea and pay the penalty of hair loss.

Note To Doctors
Doctors, clinics and hospitals interested in scalp disorders can obtain professional samples and literature on written request.

COMATE IS UNCONDITIONALLY GUARANTEED

To you we offer this UNCONDITIONAL GUARANTEE. Treat your scalp to Comate in your own home, following the simple directions. See for yourself in your own mirror how after a few treatments, Comate makes your hair look thicker and alive. How Comate ends your dandruff, stops your scalp itch. How Comate gives your hair a chance to grow. Most men and women report results after the first treatment, some take longer. But we say this to you. If, for any reason, you are not completely satisfied with the improvement in your own case — AT ANY TIME — return the unused portion for a prompt refund. No questions asked.

But don't delay. For the sake of your hair, order Comate today. Nothing — not even Comate — can grow hair from dead follicles. Fill out the coupon now, and take the first step toward a good head of hair again.

Send for FREE booklet... learn about the
 comfort than walking barefoot in the sand!

(For Men and Women)

If you remember the wonderful comfort of walking barefoot on a sandy beach, you already know how your feet will feel in a pair of our NEW PITTSTON COMFORT SHOES.

On sand, your toes are free to s-p-r-e-a-d and dig in. You walk along effortlessly. You can FEEL that extra push at the end of every step. There is no pressure, so there is no pain or binding. That's exactly how it feels in our NEW PITTSTON COMFORT SHOES. You are experiencing natural foot comfort at its very best.

Wouldn't it be nice to have that kind of comfort every day? You don't, because the shoes you are wearing squeeze your foot into a mould that's designed all wrong. They actually cause most of the discomfort and fatigue. That's why your feet hurt.

What's the cure? The foot specialists generally recommend a so-called "space shoe" that's individually molded to your feet. And they are wonderful shoes. The only trouble is — they usually cost anywhere from $80 to $120 a pair. Much too much for most budgets. That's why so many people have to resign themselves to a lifetime of discomfort and pain.

UNTIL NOW!

You see, by applying scientific principles, I've been able to develop a shoe last that adapts the principle of the "space shoe" to the needs of the average man and woman. By developing the PITTSTON COMFORT shoe, I've been able to provide most men and women with the cure for their foot discomfort at prices that everyone can afford!

I CAN DO IT FOR YOU, TOO!

PITTSTON COMFORT SHOES provide room for every part of your foot to do its job. All pressure points are eliminated and there's nothing to squash the bones and muscles. There's plenty of room for your toes to s-p-r-e-a-d. You get the luxurious freedom you felt the last time you walked barefoot in the sand! And—you have that feeling every day, all day long! And no matter how many hours you have to be on your feet!

8 DAY FREE TRIAL OFFER

Here's what I propose. Simply send me your name and address and I'll send you a full description of all the details of the shoes and easy-to-follow instructions on how to order. Then—after your shoes arrive, you have 8 full days to decide whether you want to keep them! This absolutely no-risk offer is made because I know that you'll be pleased beyond words by your PITTSTON COMFORT SHOES!

YOU ARE NOT TOO OLD TO LOOK YOUNG! PEEL'N SMOOTHIE PROVES IT IN 15 MINUTES

Erase Away Layers of Dead Surface Skin
To Reveal A Fresh, New Radiant Complexion!

If you are a woman over 35, you've noticed those marks of the years creeping across your face... those ugly crow's feet, clogged pores, and those lines permanently etched into your forehead. You probably find yourself envying women who are older than yourself, but don't show their years. You probably long to know of a way to do something about it. And, now, thanks to PEEL'N SMOOTHIE—there is!

PEEL'N SMOOTHIE has an amazing ability to do away with the "gray shadow of age". It gently erases those surface layers of dead skin filled with grime and residue of soaps and creams to reveal the exciting, radiantly fresh complexion which up to now has been hidden. A healthy skin is a beautiful skin.

The dramatic transformation takes place before your eyes... in minutes! Your until now "hidden" skin can be alabaster smooth, beautifully moist, silken and fresh. The skin of your face and neck can have the beauty of a woman 15 years younger... something you may never have thought possible!

Not a cover-up, not a facial mask, but a specially compounded formula that peels away the surface layers of dead skin. Each application softens, beautifies and vitalizes your skin... contains no hormones or irritating chemicals.

PEEL'N SMOOTHIE is amazingly economical... cost is only pennies per application and two applications each week are enough to help you maintain a complexion that has the dewy bloom of youth.

NO RISK OFFER! We're so sure that PEEL'N SMOOTHIE will work wonders for you that we make this unconditional promise: when you try PEEL'N SMOOTHIE you must be satisfied with the results... satisfied that it transformed your appearance so that you look far younger and more radiant... or we will refund your money immediately by WESTERN UNION!

GENEROUS INTRODUCTORY PRICE. We

WE DARE TO MAKE THIS CONVINCING BALLPOINT PEN TEST

Take a ballpoint pen and mark an "X" on your cheek (ballpoint ink is one of the hardest to remove from skin). Apply PEEL'N SMOOTHIE Formula to the marked area, rubbing it in well.

As you rub, you'll be amazed that the "X" magically disappears, along with grime, the residue from the clogged pores, and the dead skin.

The particles of dead skin left in your hand help you understand how PEEL'N SMOOTHIE gives you a cosmetic facial.

want to make it as easy as possible for you to try PEEL'N SMOOTHIE, so we are offering you a generous 3-month supply at an amazingly low introductory price. Ordinarily you would pay $10.00—but now for a limited time to readers of this publication you can buy your supply for only $7.50.

Here's what your $7.50 buys: PEEL'N SMOOTHIE Formula, PEEL'N SMOOTHIE Toner and PEEL'N SMOOTHIE MOISTURIZER.

GOLDILOCKS AND THE THREE BEARS

PART II

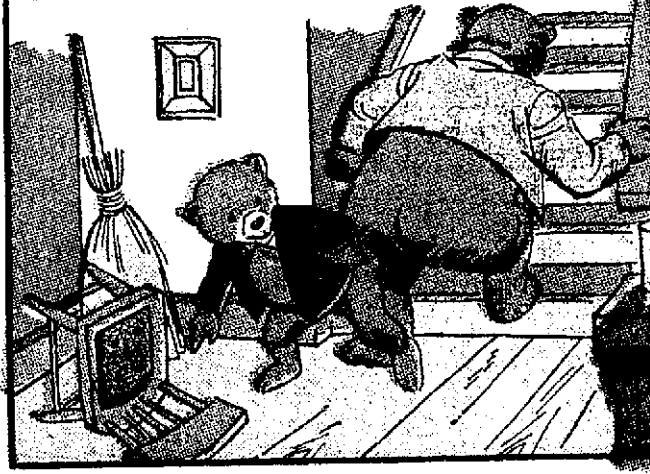

WHILE GOLDILOCKS SLEPT PEACEFULLY IN THE COMFORTABLE LITTLE BED THAT WAS JUST RIGHT FOR HER, THE THREE BEARS PUSHED OPEN THE FRONT DOOR. "OUR PORRIDGE SHOULD BE JUST COOL ENOUGH TO EAT NOW," SAID THE BIG PAPA BEAR.

AND LATER WHEN BIG PAPA BEAR WENT TO HIS CHAIR, "SOMEONE HAS BEEN SITTING IN MY CHAIR!" HE GROWLED. AND THE MAMA BEAR SAID, "SOMEONE HAS BEEN SITTING IN MY CHAIR!"

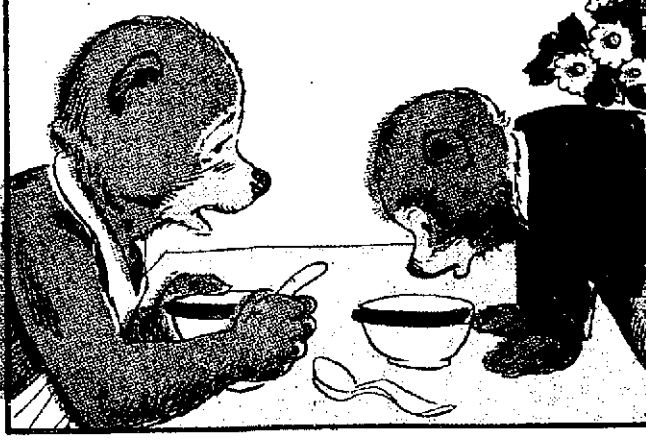

AND THEN THE BABY BEAR CRIED, "SOMEONE HAS BEEN SITTING IN MY CHAIR AND KNOCKED IT OVER." THE BEARS THEN WENT UPSTAIRS.

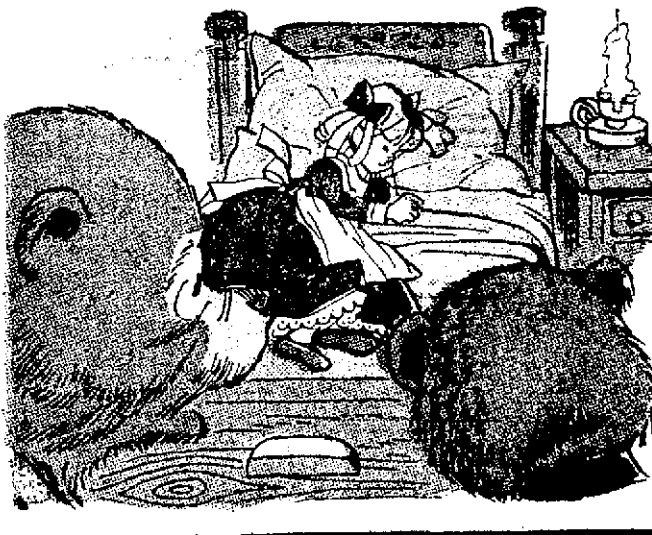

NOW, WHEN THEY ALL SAT DOWN TO EAT, THE BIG PAPA BEAR NOTICED A SPOONFUL OF PORRIDGE MISSING. "SOMEONE HAS BEEN IN MY PORRIDGE!"

AND THEN THE MAMA BEAR SAID, "SOMEONE HAS BEEN IN MY PORRIDGE," AND THE LITTLE BEAR CRIED, "SOMEONE HAS BEEN IN MY PORRIDGE AND ATE IT ALL UP!"

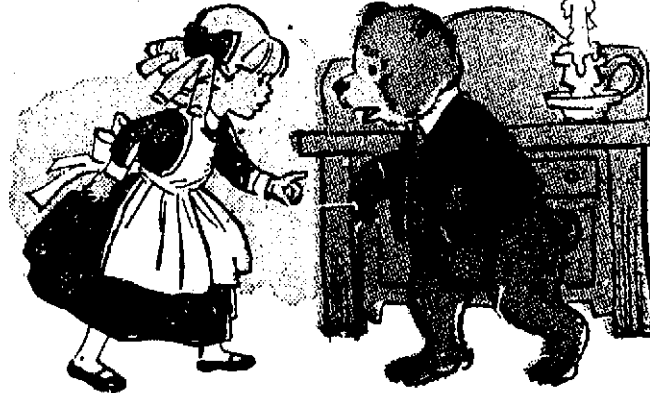

AND BABY BEAR WENT TO HIS BED AND CRIED, "SOMEONE HAS BEEN SLEEPING IN MY BED AND IS STILL HERE!"

GOLDILOCKS HAD SLEPT THROUGH THE LOUD VOICES OF THE PAPA BEAR AND THE MAMA BEAR. BUT THE VOICE OF THE LITTLE BEAR WAS JUST RIGHT SO SHE AWAKENED WITH A START.

GOLDILOCKS WAS SO SURPRISED BY THE THREE BEARS THAT SHE TUMBLED OUT OF BED AND FOUND THAT SHE WAS STANDING NEXT TO A LITTLE BEAR THAT WAS EXACTLY HER SIZE. SO THAT WAS WHY ALL THE LITTLE THINGS WERE SO PERFECT FOR HER!

BUT GOLDILOCKS WAS SURE THAT THE BEARS WOULD GOBBLE HER UP, SO SHE RAN AS FAST AS SHE COULD DOWN THE STAIRS OUT THE FRONT DOOR INTO THE FOREST TO GO ON THE ERRAND SHE HAD ALMOST FORGOTTEN. AND SHE NEVER EVER WENT NEAR THE LITTLE HOUSE IN THE FOREST WITH EVERYTHING IN THREES.
